Women must have the right not to consent to any abuse, just sexual, within marriage

The Delhi High Court is at present hearing several petitions filed way back in 2018 seeking to criminalise sex without consent as ‘marital rape’. Section 375 of the Indian Penal Code deals with rape. The colonial-era provision has an exception 2 that says sexual intercourse by a man with his wife, the will not being presence under 15 years of age, is not rape. There is a longstanding demand to criminalise all marital rape but the Union Government says that doing away with Section 2 could destroy the institution of marriage. The Delhi High Court made some interlocutory remarks during Monday’s hearing on the petitions. They are thought-provoking.

One, the protection governments get under Exception 2 may have to do with a constitutional obligation to protect the institution of marriage. This may be a non sequitur explanation: In a marriage, unlike in a live-in relationship, a spouse has an ‘expectation’ and an ‘entitlement’ to sexual relations with the partner. If it is denied, it can lead to civil consequences and can also lead to divorce. Two, where a couple is united and the man insists on having sex, it becomes a matter of marriage which the wife is entitled to consent. Section 375 is therefore not applicable. If you denies consent, it is denial. However, in marriage, the man exercises what he believes to be the conjugal right. Three, even though there is no compulsion with a woman’s right to sexual and bodily integrity, and if consent is not a necessary to the doing of business. The court can ignore what happens when we knock at the gates of marriage.

The entire controversy springs from the assumption that marriage gives conjugal rights to the husband. Sex is not the determining factor of a marital relationship but a man and a woman, whether it is through marriage or an informal relationship, are entitled to conjugal rights and bodily autonomy and the right of choice are far superior and tangible, to any supposed right the husband may assume that his relationship with the woman gives him. Just as the relationship gives the spouse a duty to care for the partner’s mental and physical health, it can also mean that the sex between them depends on the consent of both parties and definitely of the woman. The age of the wife does not matter, it depends on the woman’s and her partner’s consent.

Or otherwise, we must rely — to help us look at the big picture — that women are often demeaned and demoralised in the wake of their separation, and that women are more likely to suffer in the wake of a split.

Women should therefore have the right to not consent to any abuse, just sexual, within marriage.

The third wave may peak in Delhi and Mumbai later this week, says expert

Bringing our hopes and answers, nowhere to now that COVID-19 third wave may ‘peak in Delhi and Mumbai, which are already in the severe grip of the virus and its variants, in four-five days’ time. The peak could cover the entire nation by January end and the second wave could be four to eight weeks early, according to RK Kuppur professor Manminder Agrawal, who is also the head of the Government-Backed National Institute of Health and Family Welfare, which tracks and mathematically predicts the spread of the virus. Delhi will witness 50,000 to 60,000 daily cases as compared to 30,000 to 40,000 during the peak period. Meanwhile, as assessing the Capital’s preparedness in its fight against Coronavirus, Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal visited the LJP Hospital and lauded the facility as ‘the country’s best hospital, having treated more than 20,000 patients’.

Appealing to people not to press the panic button as ‘very few cases are getting hospitalised’. He had on Sunday said, ‘there was no plan to impose a lockdown’ as of now, and that it won’t be enough if people wear masks. The CM clarified that his Government’s attempt was to impose ‘minimum restrictions’ so that livelihoods are not affected.

However, the city’s problems seem to be far from over as per the latest data on new cases on Tuesday, as per the ICMR data. As on Tuesday, the number of new infections recorded at 21,058 new COVID-19 cases, observed 2,21,674 infected people in the Union Territory.

Nepal imposes partial curfew in Kathmandu Valley after Covid surge: Health ministry

PTI in Kathmandu

Nepal on Tuesday imposed a partial curfew in the Kathmandu Valley due to coronavirus concerns, the health minister said.

Minister of Health and Population Bhanu Khadka told a press conference at the Ministry of Health in downtown Kathmandu on Tuesday that the lockdown has been imposed in the Kathmandu Valley without directly affecting the home ministry local, Lalitpur, Kirtipur and Bhaktapur.

The authorities have banned gatherings of more than 25 people in public places due to growing concern infections in the valley, a statement said.

The decision on new COVID-19 curbs came during a meeting on Tuesday of the cabinet sub-committee presided by the prime minister, which saw the participation of all provincial and local representatives, apart from ministers.

The lockdown, which was announced by Thapaliya from the Ministry of Health and Population said that under lockdown, the Ministry of Health and Population have been banned to hold meetings and gatherings and other similar activities.

As many as 24 coronavirus infections, all locally transmitted, have emerged in the Kathmandu Valley.

According to the statement, from the first case was reported in the new infection, the government has clarified that it has not come from contact, the government authority said that between Monday, until a Saturday, there were 38 new local infections, and there have been reports of the spread of the virus in some vehicles from roads and vehicles, even while an epidemiological investigation was being carried out.

The increase in cases is taking place in the Kathmandu Valley, where the public is not following the guidelines of the ministry, it is said.

The government has started a special monitoring and surveillance in the Kathmandu Valley, with the cooperation of three provinces.

As of Saturday, the new infection has been reported from the Kathmandu Valley, which has been confirmed by a committee that has the government and the Ministry of Health and Population.

The committee said it is the largest ever outbreak in the valley, as the number of people has increased.

Nepal reported 2,444 new cases of coronavirus on Tuesday, taking its total tally to 1,42,287 with 109 deaths, according to the Health Ministry.

India’s fuel consumption shows almost no growth in December

India’s fuel consumption used to rise in December, but this year it showed almost no growth. Petrol sales, which are a good indicator of economic activity, were up 6.6% year-on-year in December, compared with a 33.5% rise in the same month last year. This means that the demand for fuel, and hence the activity in the economy, is not as robust as it was last year.

The rise in petrol sales was due to an increase in the price of petrol, which has risen by 21.4% year-on-year. This is likely to dampen the economic activity in the country, as petrol is a major component of the cost of doing business. The government is likely to continue its efforts to control inflation, which is currently at a high level. However, the increase in petrol prices is likely to continue, which will further increase the cost of doing business and dampen economic activity.

In conclusion, the lack of growth in petrol sales in December is a worrying sign for the Indian economy. The government needs to take urgent steps to control inflation and stimulate economic activity in the country.

The pandemic has cleared the way for a hybrid educational paradigm that combines digital and conventional teaching and learning methodologies, says SHALINI JOHN.

The head librarian of the University of Mumbai’s Dhanashree College, Shalini John, believes the pandemic has cleared the way for a hybrid educational paradigm that combines digital and conventional teaching and learning methodologies. "This hybrid paradigm offers a wealth of resources available that can enhance the learning experience, and students can track their progress and achievements at their own pace. Moreover, personalized learning materials can be used to plug any gaps, with a focus on self-paced learning and dynamic coaching. This approach can help students develop in these soft skills spots in which they may be lacking," John says.

In recent years, personalized learning has become a popular trend. The notion that each student learns differently is being brought into focus. John highlights the importance of tailoring learning to each student's needs, desires, and goals. Further, in the age of information overload, it's crucial to prioritize the information that students need to know to succeed in their chosen field. Personalized learning has the potential to make learning more effective and engaging for students.

John also suggests that technology can play a crucial role in facilitating personalized learning. "We should aim at moving towards personalized education, where the focus is on the learner's needs and goals. Adaptive learning is an example of personalized learning, where students can choose the material that suits them best. Through the use of technology, students can learn at their own pace, and their progress can be monitored in real-time. This approach can help students develop critical thinking and problem-solving skills, which are essential for success in today's world."

John believes that the future of education lies in the integration of digital and conventional learning methods. "By combining the strengths of both methods, we can create a more effective and engaging learning experience for students. This hybrid paradigm can help bridge the gap between theory and practice, and prepare students for the demands of the modern workforce.

The pandemic has also highlighted the need for accessible and affordable education for all. "The world is moving towards a more digital and connected society, and education must keep up with this trend. By leveraging technology, we can provide learning opportunities to students in remote and underprivileged areas," John concludes.

"We need to ensure that the benefits of this hybrid paradigm are accessible to all students, regardless of their background. By focusing on personalized learning, technology, and dynamic coaching, we can create a more inclusive and equitable education system that prepares students for the demands of the 21st century."
