Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky has rightly called the strikes on the port of Odessa on Saturday an act of barbarism. The missile strikes appeared to be a clear case of targeted attacks on the Ukrainian oil industry. The Ukrainian Navy was quick to respond, announcing that it had hit back with cruise missiles. However, the scale of damage remains unclear.

Nevertheless, the Ukrainian government was right to issue a strong statement condemning the attacks. It is essential that those responsible for such acts of violence are held accountable. The international community must work together to ensure that Ukraine’s territorial integrity is respected and that its people can live in peace.

In the meantime, the Ukrainian government must continue to take all necessary steps to defend its territory and its citizens. This includes strengthening its military defenses and increasing its diplomatic efforts to secure support from allies.

It is also important that the Ukrainian government work with international organizations to provide humanitarian aid and support to those affected by the violence.

In conclusion, the Ukrainian government must remain vigilant and continue to take all necessary steps to defend its territory and its citizens. The international community must also work together to ensure that Ukraine’s territorial integrity is respected and that its people can live in peace.

First Column: FLUX AND CONSTANCY OF HUMAN NATURE

Excerpts from Life of Reason by philosopher George Santayana (1863-1952)

Second Column: BJF narrative for 2024 to be ‘diaspora-free Bharat’

The theme is that while the BJF is devoted to the nation, the reality is that it depends on a diaspora.

Diaspora is a term that refers to the dispersed members of a ethnic or cultural group who live outside their traditional homeland. It often includes people who are not citizens of the country they live in, but maintain strong cultural and emotional ties to their original homeland. The diaspora narrative is a common political strategy used by parties to appeal to people who have migrated or their descendants, often for emotional or economic reasons.

BJF’s strategy is to create a narrative that focuses on building a ‘diaspora-free Bharat’. This could be interpreted as an effort to strengthen the Indian identity and reduce the influence of external factors, such as foreign investments orimmigrants, who may not align with the BJF's ideological or cultural goals.

The BJF narrative for 2024 aims to present an image of a unified, homogenous India where the diaspora is not a significant force. This could be seen as a way to rally support from Indian expatriates, who may feel more connected to their roots in India and less aligned with global or diaspora-centric political movements.

However, this narrative could also be seen as an attempt to address issues related to immigration and multiculturalism. It might reflect a desire to promote a more inclusive and nationalistic identity that is less influenced by external factors.

The BJF narrative may be aimed at different groups within the diaspora. For example, it could be a way to appeal to Indians who have migrated for economic reasons and want to retain a strong connection to their homeland. It might also be an effort to reach out to Indian expatriates who feel more connected to their traditional values and lifestyle.

Overall, the daliaonera narrative for 2024 is likely to be a complex and multifaceted strategy that aims to unify Indians and reduce the influence of external factors that may not align with the BJF's ideological or cultural goals.

Breaking: Moscow has offered to trade grain for Ukrainian civilians in a daring bid to ease tensions between the two nations. The proposal, put forward by the Kremlin, would see Russia transfer wheat to Ukraine in exchange for humanitarian aid, a source close to the talks said.

The offer comes as the United Nations and the European Union call for a ceasefire to allow the delivery of vital food aid to Ukrainian cities cut off by the war. Russia’s blockade of Black Sea ports has raised fears of a global food crisis, with prices soaring in affected countries.

The Kremlin’s initiative represents a significant shift in its approach to the conflict, which entered its sixth month on Friday with no signs of abating. The offer is reportedly conditional on Ukraine agreeing to a ceasefire and allowing humanitarian aid to reach civilians stranded in besieged areas.

A source within the talks confirmed to the International News Agency that the proposal was presented by Moscow to the Ukrainian delegation in Geneva.

“Russia is prepared to offer a deal to exchange grain for civilian victims in Ukraine,” the source said.

The Hungarian government has welcomed the Russian initiative, calling it a “significant step forward.” Prime Minister Viktor Orban said: “This is a positive development that could help stabilize the situation on the ground.”

However, the Ukrainian government has not responded publicly to the proposal, raising questions about the sincerity of the offer. President Volodymyr Zelensky has been under growing pressure to make a concessions to Moscow to secure the release of civilians trapped in besieged cities.

There is growing international pressure on both sides to de-escalate the conflict, with the United Nations calling for an immediate ceasefire. The European Union has announced plans to launch a humanitarian aid mission to Ukraine, but has warned that such efforts will only succeed if Russia allows access to civilians in need.

The situation remains volatile, with reports of continued fighting and civilian casualties on both sides. Russia has been accused of committing war crimes, while Ukraine has accused Russian forces of using civilians as human shields.

The Kremlin’s offer poses a significant test for the Ukrainian government, which has so far resisted calls for concessions. Zelensky has declared that any peace talks must be based on restoring Ukraine’s territorial integrity and the sovereignty of its citizens.

The situation is expected to escalate as the war enters its sixth month, with both sides vowing to continue fighting until their enemies are defeated. The outcome of the conflict remains uncertain, with both sides facing significant challenges to their military and political objectives.

LAVROV SAYS RUSSIAN GOAL TO OUST UKRAINE’S PRESIDENT

Ninth Floor, Ministry of Foreign Affairs

Sergei Lavrov, Russian foreign minister, has said that Moscow’s goal is to oust Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky from power. Speaking at a press conference in Moscow, Lavrov said: “We have been clear about our intentions from the beginning of this conflict. Our goal is to remove Zelensky from power and establish a new regime in Ukraine.”

The comments come amid growing tensions between Russia and Ukraine, with both countries accusing each other ofsetting the stage for conflict. Lavrov’s remarks are likely to further escalate tensions as Ukraine and its allies call for a diplomatic solution to the crisis.

Meanwhile, Zelensky has vowed to continue fighting until victory, declaring that Ukraine is not going to “go to war” to protect its sovereignty. In a speech to the nation, Zelensky said: “We will fight until the last Ukrainian is free from Russian occupation.”

The comments come as the United Nations calls for a ceasefire to allow the delivery of humanitarian aid to Ukrainian cities cut off by the Russian war. The UN has warned that the conflict risks leading to a humanitarian crisis, with millions of people facing food and water shortages.

Pakistan's Prime Minister Imran Khan has called for international support to help Ukraine, saying: “We stand with Ukraine and we will continue to support its fight against Russian aggression.” Khan’s remarks come as the world community呼呼 for an end to the conflict.

The situation remains volatile, with reports of continued fighting and civilian casualties on both sides. Russia has been accused of committing war crimes, while Ukraine has accused Russian forces of using civilians as human shields.

The situation is expected to escalate as the war enters its sixth month, with both sides vowing to continue fighting until their enemies are defeated. The outcome of the conflict remains uncertain, with both sides facing significant challenges to their military and political objectives.
