Dyastatic politics must End

No party in the country can say that it is free from dynastic politics, not even the BJP which is most vocal about it. Dynastic politics is a big problem in India and it has to be abated at the earliest to make democracy more vibrant and meaningful. The nation has been threatened by this phenomenon since commencing its journey as a nation in 1947. The Indian National Congress, the grand-old party, suffered many splits and internal because of a Family's control over the organization and the Government. The condition of regional parties is no different and things have taken to tsunami levels.

The party supremo ensures that all leaders emerging as a threat to him/his family are ousted from the party itself. The DMK in Tamil Nadu, Shiv Sena in Maharashtra, Nagaland Congress, and PDP in Jammu & Kashmir are examples of this shameless and unethical practice.

In Tamil Nadu, a party president, whose tenure as Chief Minister was described as an ideal-example of scientific corruption, managed to become a leader of opposition in his political party. Nearly 50 per cent of the MPs belonging to this party are either sons/daughters/children of parliamentarians. The situation is no different in other states. When Prime Minister Narendra Modi spoke about the ill effects of dynastic politics, it brought relief to millions of youth and made it a political program.
