The heat spell is very severe and critical, according to the National Centre for Medium Range Weather Forecasting.

The heatwave is expected to peak on Friday and Saturday, with temperatures reaching 46.4 degrees Celsius in Delhi and 45.5 degrees Celsius in Pune. The capital has already witnessed 17 days of above-normal temperature this month, with June being the second hottest month in the past 50 years.

In response to the heatwave, the Delhi government has announced several measures to provide relief to the public. These include setting up 172 cool zones across the city, providing free drinking water at designated points, and operating mobile coolers in affected areas.

Furthermore, the government has urged people to stay indoors during the hottest hours of the day and to use coolers and air conditioners to regulate the temperature inside their homes and offices.

Meanwhile, the Delhi Metro Rail Corporation has also announced that it will increase the frequency of trains and provide additional services to ensure the smooth functioning of the metro system during the heatwave.

Heat waves were termed the ‘silent disaster’ because heat-related deaths are often underestimated around the world for a number of reasons.

In the first installment of the Sixth Assessment Report, the IPCC asserts that human activities have warmed the planet at a rate never before seen in the past 130 million years. The temperature is now 1.1 degrees Celsius warmer than pre-industrial levels. Even small increases in temperature can cause heat waves, which have become more frequent and severe in recent decades. This year, the temperatures in India are likely to “last 25 times longer” than in the last century, according to an international climate report published on October 26, 2022, covering the G20 countries.

Heat waves start extreme heat events that are more likely to occur with continued warming. Even though the number of deaths caused by heat waves has increased, this trend has been observed for over a century, and over the years, increased research and higher death tolls, the number of heat-related deaths has not decreased.

Heat waves are termed the “silent disaster” because heat-related deaths are often underestimated around the world for a number of reasons. With the increase in frequency and severity of heat-related events, such as heat waves, the risk of mortality increases. US, S Korea fire missiles to sea, matching North's three launches

The US and South Korean militaries fired missiles into the sea of Japan on Thursday, a day after North Korea said it had conducted a series of short-range missile launches. The US and South Korea had previously planned to conduct joint military exercises, which were halted due to the spread of the coronavirus. The launch was seen as a response to North Korea's decision to conduct a series of short-range missile tests in recent weeks. The US military said the missiles were launched from two different locations and that they had successfully intercepted all of them. South Korea's Defense Ministry said it had identified the two locations as an eastern coastal area and a southeastern coastal area. The launches are part of a wider tension between the US, South Korea, and North Korea over North Korea's nuclear and missile programs. The US and South Korea had previously conducted joint military exercises as a response to North Korea's nuclear and missile programs.

Bangla fire: Police start collecting DNA samples to identify victims

The police on Monday started collecting DNA samples of nine Bangladeshi victims of a fire at a private container depot in southeastern Bangladesh's Munshiganj district. The fire broke out on Monday morning in a warehouse at the container depot, and the initial investigations suggest that the fire may have been caused by a short circuit in the electrical system of the warehouse. The victims' DNA samples were collected from the site of the incident to help in identifying them. The police have also recovered some personal belongings of the victims, including mobile phones and wallets.

Gunmen at Nigeria church shot from behind, months after 230 killed

The Nigerian Police have arrested two men suspected of shooting a Nigerian alarm group after a church shooting in southwest Nigeria. The attackers were killed in a shootout with police after they opened fire on a group of security forces. The shooting and the subsequent shootout with police left two people dead. The attack was the latest in a series of brazen attacks in the region, where armed groups and criminal gangs are frequent.

Iraq: Britain's get men 15 years over smuggling charges

Scotland Yard's Serious Organised Crime Agency has charged 15 British men with smuggling cigarettes into the UK, some of them for over 10 years. The suspects were arrested in London and the South East in Operation Hallmark, a major operation targeting cigarette smuggling. The operation is the largest of its kind in the UK and is expected to bring seizures of £100 million in cash and cigarettes.

Israel coalition could crumble over settler laws vote

Israel's ruling coalition is gearing up for a major test, with a vote expected Monday on legislation that would allow Jewish settlers living in the West Bank to vote in elections. The vote could determine the fate of the coalition and the future of the government. The legislation is seen as crucial for the coalition's stability, and its failure could prompt early elections. The coalition is currently made up of six parties, including the Israeliellipsis

Voters in Kazakhstan approve Constitutional changes

Kazakhstan's voters have approved constitutional changes that would allow the country's president, Kassym-Jomart Tokayev, to serve another term in office. The changes, which were proposed by the government, would allow Tokayev to seek re-election in 2025, a year earlier than he had previously announced. The changes were approved by a narrow margin of 65.01% in a referendum held on Sunday. The changes will allow Tokayev to run for a third term, if he chooses to do so.

UK boosts Ukraine support with high-tech missile system

UK BELGRADE

Sobotnik Monday confirmed Russia’s offer to provide Ukraine with F-35 and F-16 fighter jets and high-tech missiles.

The announcement comes after a NATO meeting in Brussels that aims to discuss how to bolster support for Ukraine against Russian aggression. Russia has continued its military buildup near the Ukrainian border, and NATO has been increasing its presence in Eastern Europe to deter Russian incursions.

This move is part of a broader effort to provide Ukraine with advanced military equipment to help it defend itself against Russian attacks. Ukraine has been facing increasing pressure from Russia, which has annexed Crimea and supported separatists in eastern Ukraine.

The F-35 and F-16 fighter jets are considered among the most advanced in the world, capable of intercepting and destroying enemy aircraft. The high-tech missiles will also provide Ukraine with a powerful tool to defend against Russian ground forces.

The announcement follows a visit by US Secretary of State Antony Blinken to Ukraine earlier this month, where he reiterated the US commitment to supporting Ukraine’s defense against Russian aggression.

The move is seen as a significant boost in Ukraine’s defense capabilities, as it will enable the country to better defend itself against Russian threats. It is also seen as a strong message to Russia, which has been increasing its military presence near the Ukrainian border.

The announcement is expected to be met with approval from the international community, which has been calling for increased support for Ukraine against Russian aggression.

The move is also seen as a sign of the close partnership between the US and Ukraine, which has been working together to strengthen Ukraine’s defense capabilities.
