Viruses can survive for days by binding themselves to plastics in freshwater, finds a new study

Tak ing the known fr eat h environmen tal risks a notch higher, scientists have proved for the first time that viruses can survive and remain infectious by binding themselves to plastics in freshwater — thus raising concerns about the potential impact on human health. Rotaviruses, which causes diarrhoea and an upset stomach, can survive for up to three days in lake water by attaching itself to the surfaces of tiny beads of plastic pol lat ion, which are known to settle on the bottom of lakes. The virus particles in fresh water were found in fatty frozen snow in Antarctica. The pol lutant poses a growing threat to the region’s ecosystem and could increase the melting of ice and snow. Since the samples were collected from 19 sites in the Rocky Island region of Antarctica, all of which are affected by plastic pol lat ion, the scientists say that this research is paramount.

A high-level US delegation led by US Deputy Secty of State for Political Affairs, Victoria Nuland, is expected to visit Sri Lanka. The visit is reportedly aimed at "mitigating the current worsening situation on the island nation and preventing the situation from getting out of control".

During their four-day official visit to the island nation, the delegation, which included Assistant Secretary of State for East Asian and Pacific Affairs David SchENk and Assistant Secretary of State for Western Hemisphere Affairs Daniel Rubenstein, is expected to meet with Sri Lankan President Gotabaya Rajapaksa and other key officials.

The visit coincides with the exacerbation of the political crisis in Sri Lanka, following the resignation of Prime Minister Ranil Wickremesinghe and the appointment of Mahinda Rajapaksa as acting President. The situation has raised concerns about the country's stability and the future of its democracy.

US Secretary of State Antony Blinken, who had been due to visit Sri Lanka in May, has postponed his trip due to the ongoing crisis. The US delegation's visit comes as a sign of support and engagement with the Sri Lankan government.

The delegation is expected to discuss a range of issues, including human rights, democracy, and economic stabilization. The US has been a longstanding supporter of Sri Lanka, particularly in efforts to promote democratic reforms and respect for human rights.

The visit is also seen as an opportunity for the US to re-emphasize its commitment to the region after the withdrawal of American forces from Afghanistan. The US has expressed concerns about the rise of China and other regional powers in the Indian Ocean.

The visit is taking place in the wake of Sri Lanka's economic crisis, which has led to protests and a political vacuum. The US delegation is expected to express support for Sri Lanka's democratic institutions and encourage the country to move towards a peaceful resolution of the crisis.

The visit is also expected to highlight the importance of the US-Sri Lanka partnership and the need for continued engagement on key issues, including trade, investment, and defense.

The Sri Lankan government has invited the US delegation, and the visit is seen as a positive step towards strengthening relations between the two countries.

The visit is also expected to provide an opportunity for the US to assess the situation on the ground and the effectiveness of its diplomatic efforts in the region.

The US delegation is expected to depart Sri Lanka on Monday, following a series of meetings with government officials and civil society leaders. The visit is expected to conclude with a press conference to share the outcomes of their discussions.
India: early signs of sustainable eco-recovery: Deepak Parekh

The country’s economy is seeing early signs of sustainable eco-recovery, said former Reserve Bank of India governor Deepak Parekh in an analysis for The Economic Times. Addressing the shareholder of the Prime Minister on the occasion of the Annual General Meeting, he said that India has made an accelerated economic activity, with high GDP growth, he said, adding that the country has seen “strong growth in various sectors, including in the MSME sector.”

There has been a notable increase in the number of start-ups, with over 100,000 companies registering in the last year. The government has introduced several measures to support start-ups, including tax incentives and easier regulatory procedures.

The policy encourages MSMEs to adopt electric vehicles, he said, adding that the government is looking into tax incentives and easier regulatory procedures for electric vehicles.

The government is also working on reducing the carbon footprint of the economy, with a focus on renewable energy and energy efficiency. The country has set a target of achieving 40% renewable energy by 2030, and has introduced several policies to support the growth of renewable energy.

The policy also aims to reduce the carbon footprint of the transportation sector, with a focus on electric vehicles. The government has launched several initiatives to promote electric vehicles, including the purchase tax on electric vehicles...

OPTIONS IN DROP-FRAG HANDS: INDIA ADVANCE WITH OTHERS IN WORLD HOCKEY: SAIKIA

The emergence of a number of potential centre-forwards in the national team gives India an edge over the goalkeepers, according to former national and senior Sanjiv Singh, who knows the "difficult art" of drop-shots like the back of his hand.

The Birmingham Commonwealth Games-bound Tactical Unit is among three specialist drop-flickers in Harmanpreet Singh, skipper Manpreet Singh and Amit Rohidas.

And with senior players like Sumeet, Arunpreet Singh Tahajud and Sudeep Chirmako waiting in the wings, India are well placed as far as the penalty corner unit is concerned.

"Drop-flick is a difficult art which takes years to master and a number of coaches are required to guide the players," Singh said.

"In drop-flicking, you have to find the right moment to offload the ball. Just like the shot put, you need to find just the right space and then release the ball quickly."

"The unit has a lot of potential and will be a huge asset to any team," Singh added.

Sidhu, who recently returned from the 2022 CWG, has produced his best form in recent months.

"Just like any other skill, the more you practice, the better you get. And I am definitely putting in the time and effort to keep improving my technique," he said.

As India prepare to face Australia in their opening match of the CWG, Sidhu is looking forward to another successful tournament.

"I am really excited to be back in the national team and hope to make a positive impact. The team is looking strong and I am confident we can achieve great things," he added.

Morgan to retire from international cricket

England's World Cup-winning captain Eoin Morgan has announced his retirement from international cricket with immediate effect, ending a 15-year international career that has seen him lead the side to 50-over World Cup victory in 2019.

Morgan, 38, made his Test debut against Sri Lanka in 2008 and went on to play 104 Tests, 184 ODIs and 57 T20Is. He became England's permanent captain in 2015 and led them to a historic World Cup triumph in 2019.

In a statement, Morgan said: "I want to sincerely thank the England fans, support staff and my team-mates. It has been an absolute honour and privilege to represent the country that I love and do everything I possibly can for this team.

"I entered the game with no pre-conceived notions of where I would end up and never in a million years did I dream I would come close to the milestone of 100 international matches. The support I have received has been overwhelming and I want to thank everyone who has made my career what it has been.

"I was always told that you need to hit hard and run well. I’ve never been able to do either. But it has been an absolute pleasure to represent this country and I am incredibly grateful for the memories and experiences I have had during my international career."

England cricket director Ashley Giles said: "The decision Eoin has reached is one that must be respected. He has contributed an enormous amount to cricket in this country and our thoughts are with him and his family as he leaves the international stage.

"He has been such a positive figure for England cricket, both on and off the field, and we can’t thank him enough for his service.

"His leadership and example will be a huge inspiration to the next generation of England players and we will miss him at the top of the order.

"We wish him all the very best in the next chapter of his career and look forward to seeing him around the cricket scene in his future roles."
