Maharashtra rebels have got a breather from the SC granting them more time to file replies

While the Maharashtra crisis seems to be forming a long-drawn affair, the rebels got a breather from the Supreme Court. In response to rebel leader Eknath Shinde’s petition challenging the disqualification notices issued to 16 MLAs, including himself, the apex court extended the deadline given to them to file their responses to the notices till August 15. They were billed to appear in court on Monday. As the political battle raged on the SC, it issued instructions to Maharashtra Deputy Speaker Prashant Paricharak, leader of Opposition Uddhav Thackeray and the Central Government. Shinde ordered the steering, “This is the victory of the Hindutva movement Balasheh Thackeray’s Hindutva and the thoughts of my mentor, late Sharadapa Sahani.”

Smile when he has numbers but Uddhav has party behind him

I t the ongoing Maharashtra political crisis, an ideological alliance without a politics has taken the stability of Mahanarayana Chief Minister Uddhav Thackeray to every turns. Whether it be his handling of the NIA case or the situation with the BJP, it is evident that the party has lost the Upper hand in the state politics.

When Uddhav took charge of the state in 2019, dissenting Thomas were now on the opposite side of the political spectrum. The party had been facing crisis after crisis, with a series of political defections leading to the formation of the new government. But it was not until the COVID-19 pandemic hit that the crisis reached its peak.

Another major challenge for Thackeray's government is the ongoing farmers' protests. The government has been trying to pass a Farmers Bill that would change the existing system of land acquisition, tenancy rights, and Minimum Support Price (MSP) for crops. However, farmers and their supporters have been protesting against the bill for several months, demanding its withdrawal.

The government has been facing increasing pressure to withdraw the bill, and it is unclear whether Thackeray will be able to hold onto his party's support. The upcoming Assembly elections in 2022 will be a crucial test for the government's stability.

In order to ensure the stability of the government, Thackeray needs to address the demands of the farmers and find a solution to the COVID-19 pandemic. If he is able to do so, it is possible that the government will be able to weather the crisis and continue to govern the state.

However, if Thackeray is unable to address these challenges, it is likely that the government will face increasing pressure to step down. In such a scenario, it is possible that a new government will be formed, with the BJP playing a significant role.

In conclusion, the ongoing Maharashtra political crisis is a serious challenge for the government. Thackeray needs to address the demands of the farmers and find a solution to the COVID-19 pandemic in order to ensure the stability of the government. If he is unable to do so, it is possible that a new government will be formed, with the BJP playing a significant role.

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky has joined the Group of Seven leaders in the Bavarian

The G-7 leaders are expected to announce that the US is providing advanced air defense system to Ukraine, which is seen as a significant additional military support, according to a US defense official. The move is intended to show US support to Ukraine in the ongoing conflict and to provide additional assistance to help Ukraine defend against attacks from Russia.

The UK is purchasing NASAMS, a US-made medium-range air defense system, which includes short- and long-range missile systems. It is designed to protect against enemy aircraft, cruise missiles, and other threats.

The group was formed in 1949 as a way to prevent the spread of aggression and promote stability in Europe and the Western world.

The G-7 leaders are meeting in Munich, Germany, to discuss efforts to support Ukraine in its fight against Russia.

The leaders were expected to announce during their meeting that they would be providing $1 billion in additional aid to Ukraine, including up to 80 NASAMS systems.

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy, who is expected to make a separate trip to the US, said the G-7 leaders' announcement would be a "historic" moment for Ukraine.

The leaders were also expected to discuss ways to increase the pressure on Russia and to work together to find ways to end the war in Ukraine.

The G-7 leaders agreed to provide $1 billion in additional aid to Ukraine, including 80 NASAMS systems, as well as other forms of military support.

The G-7 leaders also agreed to press Russia to negotiate a ceasefire and to support Ukraine's efforts to defend its sovereignty and territorial integrity.

The announcement comes amid ongoing tensions between Russia and the West over Ukraine, with the two sides engaged in a diplomatic effort to de-escalate the conflict.

Zelenskyy said that the G-7 leaders' announcement would be a "historic" moment for Ukraine as it continues to fight for its independence.

The leaders were also expected to discuss ways to increase the pressure on Russia and to work together to find ways to end the war in Ukraine.

India witnessing early signs of sustainable eco-recharge: Deepak Parekh

Sensex, Nifty rally nearly 1 pc in line with global gains; rise for 3rd day

PM Narendra Modi said the Indian economy is seeing early signs of sustainable eco-recharge, after the Prime Minister said on Tuesday that India is "on the right track" to achieving net zero carbon emissions by 2070.

The statement comes a day after the government announced plans to accelerate the adoption of electric vehicles, with a target of having 10% of all four-wheeler sales as electric vehicles by 2025.

"We are on the right track, we are making our economy sustainable, we are making our economy green," Modi said in a tweet.

He added that the government is working towards a "green economy" and that the country is "on the path of sustainable development."

India take on West Indies in 3rd Test

The India women's cricket team will take on the West Indies in the third and final Test match of their three-match series at the Vidarbha Cricket Association Stadium in Nagpur on Wednesday. India leads the series 2-0 after winning the first two Tests at Delhi and Mumbai.

The Indian women's cricket team have been in good form lately, having won all their last two matches. They are looking to seal the series with a victory in the third Test. The West Indies, though, are looking for a turnaround in the series. The Windies women's team have lost both their previous matches, losing the first Test by 58 runs and then the second Test by 108 runs.

India's batting line-up has been consistent, with openers Jemimah Rodrigues and Smriti Mandhana providing a steady start. The middle order has also contributed well, with Harmanpreet Kaur and Deepti Sharma scoring runs at regular intervals. The bowling unit has been effective, with Poonam Yadav and Shikha Pandey picking up wickets in the first two Tests.

The West Indies have relied on their batting, with openers Deandra Dottin and Stafanie Taylor scoring runs. However, their bowling has been a weakness, with Anishaフィルタート結果が表示される。
