The first step in making the dreams of Chief Minister Chandrababu Naidu of organisation of Telangana farmers a reality is the creation of a union of farmers for cultivation of turmeric. The state government has already offered to the farmers to set up their own cooperative societies for the sale of turmeric. The farmers are now walking on the road towards self-reliance.

In the wake of the government's offer, the farmers have started discussing the formation of a farmers' union. The farmers have already taken the first step towards this goal by forming a committee to look into the matter.

The farmers' union will be formed with the aim of providing a platform for the farmers to collectively take decisions on agricultural issues. The union will also help in the development of the turmeric industry, which is witnessing a surge in demand in recent times.

The farmers are hopeful that the formation of the union will help them in obtaining better prices for their produce and in combating the challenges posed by the ever-increasing competition in the market.

In conclusion, the formation of the farmers' union is a significant step towards the organisation of Telangana farmers and the development of the turmeric industry. The farmers are optimistic about the success of this new initiative and are looking forward to a brighter future.

In the context of Pocso acquisitions, employ a sensible approach in minor girls’ cases prone-based girl, in her early teens, attended a “good-touch-bad-touch” sexual awareness session in the school last week. She had previously realized that her grandfather, father and older brother had been bad-touching her for the last five years. She is a shy little girl who attended the session and she is now under the protection of the Children from Sexual Offences (Pocso) Act, Counselling and a security measure can mend her over time. But the Pocso Act itself is causing a debate in the public sphere. The Act specifically deals with sexual offences against minor children, under 18. Of late, hundreds of cases relating to romantic relationships—which mostly revolve around consent—are being filed under Pocso. Both the special Pocso courts and several High Courts are facing a tough time applying the provisions of the Act for sexual offenders to young or teen girls involved in romantic relationships. For instance, there is no question of bail for the accused in sexual offence cases. Or, even if the accused claims the under-aged girl gave her consent for a sexual encounter, such consent of a minor is deemed not valid. So, the accused gets no protection under the consent clause. How can the courts weigh the affection a Kerala girl could ever brand on her relationship with an adult man and minor girl who had consensual sex and see how the relationship turns harmless, and the man is charged with sexually harassing the minor or luring her away?

A minor girl is consented, so Pocso will recheck her consent. Probably, the Act is trap- ping a lot of cases, the courts are too liberal in applying standards that are not as harsh as Pocso provisions. Last week, a special court gave bail to a 27-year-old man who spent 30 days in jail on a love relationship with a minor girl went south and he was accused by the girl’s mother of raping her and stripping her and then, took her to a different state. There are scores of such cases where courts have granted bail to the man. The Madras High Court too recently granted bail to an older man who enticed a minor girl in Pocso acquisitions the Pocso itself to deal with consensual sex cases involving ore than 10. Teenage attraction, initiation with an older mate and attempts to avoid conser- vative attitudes of parents—all these are social facts which cannot be resolved by applying standards that are not as harsh as Pocso provisions. The Sino-Soviet rift, the Cold War, the nuclear arms race, the mining of South Asia, the nuclear test ban, the environmental movement, the women’s movement…we have heard thousands of stories of species and individuals who have been tricked into participating in the sex trade.

THE GOVERNMENT SHOULD MAINTAIN A RESERVE OF GAS TO EQUAL A PERCENTAGE OF ANNUAL USE WHICH CAN BE USED AS BUFFER TO MEET DEMAND AT AFFORDABLE PRICE DURING CRISIS

The Ugandan gas reserve has exposed the vulnerabilities in India's gas supply chain. Gas (G) is around 4-7% of global consumption. India's relentless push to increase its share of G (from 2000 to 22%) is met with import as liquid fuel (liquefied natural gas (LNG)) or gas (LNG).

The Ugandan gas reserve makes it evident that India, in its quest to become a major player in the gas market, has failed to adequately prepare for the potential disruptions in the market. This is further highlighted by the recent gas crisis in Europe, where the reliance on imported gas has led to a significant increase in gas prices.

India has also been dependent on imports to meet its gas demand, particularly in the power sector and for industrial purposes. The government has been investing heavily in the gas sector, with plans to increase the country's gas production and consumption.

ENERGY SECURITY

India has been importing gas to meet its energy needs, with LNG being the primary source. However, the increasing cost of LNG imports due to the volatile global gas market has highlighted the need for India to diversify its energy sources.

India has been exploring alternatives to LNG, such as domestic natural gas production and the exploitation of unconventional gas resources like coal bed methane and tight gas. The government has been pushing for the expansion of domestic gas production, with the aim of reducing the country's dependence on imports.

India has also been working on developing a gas infrastructure to support the growth of the gas market. This includes the expansion of gas pipelines and the development of gas storage facilities.

GAS IMPORT

The government has been negotiating deals with various countries to secure long-term contracts for gas imports, particularly from the Middle East. These deals are crucial for ensuring a steady supply of gas to India's energy market.

India has also been exploring the possibility of importing gas from other regions, such as the Persian Gulf and South America, to diversify its gas sources. The government has been working on developing the necessary infrastructure to support these imports.

CONCLUSION

India's gas strategy has been driven by its energy security concerns, with a focus on diversifying its energy sources and reducing its dependence on imported gas. The government has been working on various initiatives to support the growth of the gas market, including the expansion of domestic gas production and the development of gas infrastructure.

American Fritz hands Rafa his first 2022 defeat to lift Indian Wells trophy

Fritz, who went 5-0 at Indian Wells this season, hit 29 winners to 18 unforced errors, which included a pair of double faults, in his 6-4, 6-3 win over Nadal.

The 30-year-old Fritz was also pushing hard to win his first Masters title and was especially determined to upstage Nadal after the Spaniard revealed his son Stratos, 3, was called out for jumping on the court when Nadal hit a shot during their match in 2022.

"It’s the first time I’ve been ranked in the top 10 in my career," Fritz said. "I wasn’t expecting to be in that position, honestly, otherwise I might have played 2022 Indian Wells with a bigger appetite."
