Nikhil under personal law not exempt from POCSO Act: HC

The Supreme Court on Monday held that a man under personal law of Bangladeshi Muslim law, who married two women, cannot be proceeded against under the POCSO Act as he is exempt from such proceedings.

The court decided the case on a petition filed by one of the women, seeking permission to file a criminal complaint against the man, who under personal law of Bangladeshi Muslim law, is entitled to marry multiple women.

The man, who was an inhabitant of Bangladesh, married two women under the practice sanctioned by the Bangladeshi Muslim law, according to the petition.

The married women, who were domiciled in India, sought permission from the court to file a complaint against the man under POCSO Act for allegedly committing the crime of sexual assault.

The court, however, rejected the petition, holding that the man is exempt from such proceedings under Bangladeshi Muslim personal law.

It observed that the POCSO Act is applicable in India only to civil and criminal cases relating to women and children under the POCSO Act. If one of the parties, even if there is a minor child, even under the cover of POCSO Act is to prohibit the marriage between a man and more than one woman, it is a bane of the society and the POCSO Act is to be utilised for the protection of the women and children.

The POCSO Act is a bane of the society and the POCSO Act is to be utilised for the protection of the women and children.

The court further held that in the case in hand, even if the man is not entitled to marry women under the POCSO Act, he is entitled to marry two women under the Bangladeshi Muslim personal law.

It stated that the POCSO Act is enacted in India to safeguard and protect the rights of women and children. If one of the parties, even if there is a minor child, even under the cover of the POCSO Act is to prohibit the marriage between a man and more than one woman, it is a bane of the society and the POCSO Act is to be utilised for the protection of the women and children.
Rahul Gandhi has finally entered the election battle, addressing a rally at Mahabaleshwar in the state of Maharashtra. It was his first public appearance since the start of the campaign period. Rahul Gandhi’s address, as per the campaign’s plan, has been to seek votes for a united front against the BJP-led NDA. However, the state is facing a number of challenges, including unemployment, poverty, and corruption, which are likely to affect the outcome of the election.

The BJP-led NDA has been in power for the past five years, but the state of Maharashtra has seen significant economic and social changes during this period. The state has a high unemployment rate, and many young people are looking for work. The state has also seen a rise in corruption, with several politicians and officials accused of fraud and illegal activities.

However, the campaign has been dominated by the issue of the coronavirus pandemic, which has had a significant impact on the state’s economy. The pandemic has led to a rise in unemployment, and many businesses have been forced to close down. The state government has been criticized for its response to the pandemic, with many people feeling that it has not done enough to help those affected.

The state of Maharashtra is also facing a water crisis, with many areas experiencing water shortages. The government has been criticized for its failure to provide adequate water supply to the people, and many people have been forced to rely on water tankers.

In addition, the state has seen a rise in communal tensions, with incidents of violence and displacement affecting many people. The state government has been criticized for its failure to address these issues, and many people are calling for action.

The election is scheduled for February 14, and it is expected to be a closely contested battle between the BJP-led NDA and the Congress-led UPA. The outcome of the election is likely to have a significant impact on the national political landscape.

India's largest state of Punjab has been giving the correct feedback. The CM of Punjab, Capt. Amarinder Singh, had said that the state of Punjab has already sent the state of Punjab on a path that will make it the worst managed economy in the world. In contrast, Gujrat is in a much better position. For FY21, the state of Gujrat has released a growth of 8.9% in its revenue expenditures (RE), with subsidy bill of Rs 9,758 crores, adding an additional 17% per cent, leaving very little for anything else.

The real concern is the question by far is what about the loss and damage that the developed countries suffer 'loss and damage' linked loss and damage 'feedbacks' in the COP27. Therefore, the question is whether it is paying into its insolvency.

The COP27 is an opportunity for the countries that suffer 'loss and damage' to get their voice heard and get compensation for the damage they have suffered. That's what this conference is all about. It's an opportunity for those countries to have their voices heard and get the compensation they deserve.

In conclusion, the COP27 is a crucial opportunity for the countries that suffer 'loss and damage' to get their voice heard and get compensation for the damage they have suffered. It's an opportunity for those countries to have their voices heard and get the compensation they deserve. The COP27 is the time to make our voices heard and demand justice for the damage that has been done to our countries.
Cold and dark: Kyiv reads for “worst winter of our lives’

The power outage, as it often is, is an extreme event. Kyiv residents have been warned that the city’s total power load could be less than half of its capabilities.

Ukraine’s energy system was already struggling to cope with the demands of a cold winter, and now it faces an even greater challenge. The situation is dire, and it is uncertain how long the power cuts will last.

Prime Minister Oleksiy Zhukov said that the government is working closely with electricity suppliers and other stakeholders to ensure that the grid remains stable and that the people of Ukraine can continue to heat their homes and maintain essential services.

However, the government is also urging citizens to conserve energy and to use alternative heating sources, such as wood and coal. The government is also working to increase the production of renewable energy sources, such as wind and solar power, to help mitigate the impact of the power cuts.

The government is also offering financial assistance to those affected by the power cuts, and it is working to ensure that essential services, such as hospitals and schools, remain operational.

In the meantime, the people of Ukraine are adapting to the situation, and they are determined to persevere through this challenging winter. They are finding creative solutions to keep warm and to maintain their quality of life.

Despite the challenges, there is a sense of resilience and solidarity among the people of Ukraine. They are united in their determination to overcome this crisis and to emerge stronger on the other side.

For the people of Ukraine, this winter is a test of their will and resilience. They are proving that they can overcome even the most difficult challenges.

In the midst of the cold and darkness, there is a flicker of hope. The people of Ukraine are showing the world that they are a nation of courage and resolve, and that they will not be defeated.

Strong quake topples houses in Indonesia's Java; 162 dead

A strong, shallow earthquake toppled buildings across densely populated cities on Indonesia's most densely populated island on Monday, killing at least 162 people and injuring hundreds of others, residents said. At least 280 people were injured in the surrounding islands.

A spokesman for the National Disaster Mitigation Agency said there were no immediate reports of damage in the capital, Jakarta, which is about 80 kilometers (50 miles) east of the epicenter. The agency said it was working with many countries, including Japan, South Korea and Taiwan, to provide assistance as residents fled.

"I saw my friends running, running," said one woman, who identified herself as a 35-year-old doctor. "I was just like a zombie," she said, "I just ran.

Rescue teams and civilians said many people were buried in collapsed houses and were unable to escape.

Tsunami warnings have been issued for areas along the coast, including in Sumatra and Java.

"The majority of those who died were killed by the debris," said a resident who was hiding in her home when the ground started to shake. "We were just trying to take our little ones out of harm's way.

PTI / NEW DELHI

The Department of Chemicals and Fertilizers has received responses from domestic and international investors for setting up a new refinery in India to meet the growing demand for petrochemical products. The department is likely to discuss the issue with the apex court on November 22, the minister said on Monday. The minister added that the government is also working on a green technology-driven refinery project to reduce carbon emissions. He also emphasized the need for the Indian petrochemical industry to become more competitive and innovative to attract foreign investment.

The government has set a target of increasing the share of petrochemicals in the country’s total chemical production to 10% by 2023-24. To achieve this goal, the government has initiated several initiatives, including setting up of a greenfield petrochemical complex, signing of a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with the Indian Oil Corporation Ltd (IOCL) for setting up a greenfield petrochemical complex, and providing financial assistance under the Renewable Energy Development Scheme (REDS).

The minister also highlighted the importance of the petrochemical sector in India’s ongoing industrial transformation. He said that the sector has a huge potential to create employment opportunities and drive economic growth. He added that the government is committed to providing a conducive environment for the growth of the sector by removing regulatory and administrative hurdles.

The minister emphasized the need for the petrochemical industry to focus on value addition, innovation, and sustainable practices. He said that the government is working on a blueprint to develop a robust petrochemical value chain in India, which will help in reducing the dependency on imports and enhancing the country’s energy security.

WILL UMRAH, SAMSON GET A CHANCE IN FINAL T20?

India was expected to try another World Cup T20 but despite the fact that a second T20 was any indication, team officials remain resolute to start with a clean slate.

The tour of England this summer was India’s powerplay approach against England’s seamers. Rohit Sharma was tried at the top but he was unable to make a mark in the game but the move did not work. Considering Rohit’s class, one can expect to see him in the XI from the very start.

Sanju Samson will be making his return to the playing XI. He is likely to get his debut in the opening game. The management is unlikely to make too many changes for the series-decider game but the move did not work. Considering Rohit’s class, one can expect to see him in the XI from the very start.

Shubman Gill was the reasonable choice but due to constant injuries, he could not make his return to the playing XI.

Gary Stead said the medical appointment. He has picked up a blow to his arm, an impact injury to his shoulder. He is ruled out of the tour and will be looking to make a comeback in the future.
