The death toll in the Morbi bridge collapse has now risen to 134, after 3,600 kg of live animals were extricated from the bridge.

Kohli denies invasion of his privacy

Kohli, who was in Morbi on Monday, said the video-sharing platform is a "personal" space and that he does not accept such an invasion of his privacy.

"My personal space is my personal space. If it's being invaded, then I don't accept it," Kohli said.

"I have a team at home, and I am constantly in touch with them. I am not the first person in the world who has faced this kind of invasion of privacy," he added.

India's Prime Minister Narendra Modi has condemned the incident, saying, "The tragedy in Morbi is heart-rending. Our thoughts are with those who have lost their loved ones."

"The Prime Minister of India is sad and grief-stricken over the tragedy. The government is taking all possible steps to rescue those trapped in the bridge," he added.

TMC curiously suggests BJPs ‘cut-money’ taunt over Guj bridge collapse

Will win Guj polls, AAP only in air, anti-incumbency against BJPs: Rahul

SAKSHI SAFAR IN KOCHI

The Tintamarre Congress on Monday returned the ‘cut-money’ taunt against BJP chief minister Narendra Modi saying it had been valid at least 3 times in the last 50 years. The Congress also referred to Prime Minister Narendra Modi losing trust in his party leaders during the last 50 years. The Tintamarre Congress said that Modi would not be able to win the 2019 elections even after winning the 2014 elections.

Mr. Modi had beenOpposed to the reservation in education which was one of the key demands of the Tintamarre Congress. The Tintamarre Congress welcomed the implementation of the ‘seat belt’ law which was being implemented in many states across the country.

Ghosh however rebutted the BJP and the TMC’s charge that the ‘seat belt’ law was being implemented only in certain states and not in others. She said that the law was being implemented even in those states where it was not being implemented.

On Saturday, the Tintamarre Congress also held a protest against the BJP for their alleged involvement in the Vyapam scam. The Tintamarre Congress said that the BJP was responsible for the Vyapam scam and that they should be held accountable.

Gagging social media

With the new rules in place, the social media may have to comply with the govt dictates

The ownership and control of social media is not new in India, but it has never been as tightly packed as it is now. Twitter has told its users to delete all tweets that are “in violation of the new rules” or the “government may take action against you.”

Twitter is not alone in its warning. Facebook, which has a similar policy, has also announced that it will remove content that is “against the new rules.”

The government’s move comes after a series of recent incidents where social media users have been punished for sharing content that is deemed to be “illicit” or “offensive.”

This is not the first time that the government has tried to regulate social media. In 2018, it introduced the Information Technology Act, which gave the government the power to block content that is deemed to be “offensive.”

However, the new rules introduce a number of new provisions that are more stringent than the previous ones. For example, the new rules allow the government to block content that is “against the interest of the state” or “against the public interest.”

The new rules also require social media companies to remove any content that is “obscene” or “inciting” within 72 hours of its publication. This is a significant change from the previous rules, which allowed social media companies to take action at their own discretion.

The new rules also require social media companies to establish a “compliance cell” to monitor content on their platforms. This cell will be responsible for removing any content that is deemed to be “offensive” or “against the interest of the state.”

The new rules also introduce a number of fines for social media companies that fail to comply with the new rules. For example, a social media company that fails to remove content within 72 hours of its publication can be fined up to Rs. 50 lakh.

The new rules are part of a larger effort by the government to regulate social media. In recent years, the government has introduced a number of laws that are aimed at regulating social media, including the IT Act and the Press Council of India Act.

The new rules are likely to have a significant impact on social media companies. They will have to devote significant resources to monitoring content on their platforms and removing any content that is deemed to be “offensive” or “against the interest of the state.”

This is likely to have a significant impact on the profit margins of social media companies. They may have to increase their costs in order to comply with the new rules, which could result in higher prices for consumers.

The new rules are also likely to have a significant impact on the freedom of speech in India. The new rules introduce a number of provisions that are designed to limit the freedom of speech of social media users. For example, the new rules allow the government to block content that is “against the interest of the state” or “against the public interest.”

The new rules are likely to be challenged in court. Social media companies are likely to challenge the new rules on the grounds that they are unconstitutional or violate the right to freedom of speech.

The new rules are likely to have a significant impact on the way that social media is used in India. The new rules are likely to result in a significant decrease in the number of social media users in India.

What Russia’s suspension of grain deal could mean

Russia has suspended part of the deal allowing Ukraine to ship grain from its Black Sea ports safely amid a months-long war and a potential famine in Africa and Asia. The suspension means ships will no longer be able to load at three key global suppliers of wheat, and ready to travel, were stuck in Black Sea waters, 10 days after Russia blocked a UN plan to allow ships to leave.

The deal was supposed to help Ukraine export 21 million tons of grain, but the country wanted to get to the next phase of the deal: allowing ships to leave. Under the agreement, ships loaded after Nov. 21 could then set sail for African and Asian nations, ready to travel, were stuck in Black Sea waters, 10 days after Russia blocked a UN plan to allow ships to leave.

But the situation is rapidly deteriorating. Russia is blockading the Black Sea, leaving ships stuck off the coast of Odessa, Ukraine’s main port. The UN says the country has lost nearly $1 billion in exports since the war began, and it needs to resume shipping grain to survive.

The latest news on the situation:

- Russia blocks ships from leaving: Russia has denied reports that it will allow ships to leave. The country said it had not agreed to allow ships to leave, and that the deal was still under discussion.
- Ukraineitic leaders urge action: Ukraine and its allies have called for immediate action to help the country ship grain.
- Global food prices rise: Global food prices have risen since the Russia-Ukraine war began, with the UN stating that the situation is “extremely worrying.”

China slams plans for US B-52 N-bombers in Australia

AP in CANBERRA

China's foreign ministry said on Saturday it hoped the US could solve the problem of nuclear weapons by dialogue with China, after US officials said the US had begun to deploy B-52 bombers in northern Australia, adding to regional tensions.

"There are visits to Australia, including in Darwin, Darwin officials said on Monday that the US had deployed the aircraft to northern Australia, which has a strategic location for regional defense.

The U.S. Air Force told the AFP that "B-52 bombers to Australia" as part of the US military's ongoing efforts to maintain its capability in the Indo-Pacific region. The aircraft have been used for this purpose in recent years.

Bombers in northern Australia, Amini in the custody of the US military, he said, were a "very, very, very serious threat to peace and stability." The government, he said, would continue to work to ensure the safety of all citizens.

"We engage with our friends and allies for peace and stability," the judge heard from Amini's statements, the judge said. "We engage with our friends for peace and stability, and we are continuing to work to ensure the safety of all citizens."
India's logistics sector has become one of the largest in the world and is growing at a global scale and globally is a $100 billion market. The industry, with a compound annual growth rate of around 20%, is forecast to grow to $500 billion by 2027. This growth is driven by the increasing demand for e-commerce, retail, and logistics services across the country.

Several factors contribute to the growth of the logistics industry in India. Firstly, the e-commerce sector has witnessed significant growth in recent years, with major players such as Flipkart, Amazon, and Paytm Mall expanding their operations. Secondly, the government's initiatives, such as the National Logistics Policy and the Goods and Services Tax (GST), have streamlined the logistics landscape, reducing costs and improving efficiency. Thirdly, the development of infrastructure, including the expansion of ports and airports, has facilitated faster and more efficient transportation of goods.

The logistics sector in India is segmented into various sectors, each with its own set of challenges and opportunities. The e-commerce logistics segment is one of the fastest-growing segments, with companies like Flipkart, Amazon, and Paytm Mall leading the way.

There are approximately 400,000 logistics service providers in India, ranging from small local players to large national and international companies. The industry is highly competitive, with intense competition and rapid technological advancements driving innovation and efficiency improvements.

One of the key trends in the logistics sector is the increasing use of technology, such as automation, AI, and IoT, to enhance operational efficiency and reduce costs. Additionally, the sector is witnessing a shift towards sustainability, with companies adopting green initiatives and reducing their carbon footprint.

Overall, the Indian logistics sector is poised for significant growth in the coming years, driven by the increasing demand for logistics services, technological advancements, and government initiatives. As the industry continues to evolve, it is expected to play a critical role in India's economic development.
