Rajnath to host African counterparts during IADD in Gujarat

Meet on sidelines of 12th Def Expo

Defence Minister Rajnath Singh will host his counterparts from Africa during the 12th Def Expo, being held in Gujarat from February 7 to 12.

The broad theme of the Defence Minister’s interactions will be ‘Adopting Strategy for Global Convergence: Defence and Security Partnership’. The discussions will also focus on issues like humanitarian assistance and disaster relief.

India and Africa share close defence relations. The African nations depend on Indian-made weapons and technology, and the two sides regularly exchange military personnel, ranging from military officers to non-commissioned officers, the defence ministry said in a statement.

The Defence Minister had last hosted African leaders during the 12th Def Expo in 2018 which was held in Goa.

The ongoing Def Expo is an opportunity for boosting India-Africa defence cooperation in line with the objective of enhancing India’s strategic partnership with the African continent.

Anti-BJP atmosphere in Gujarat, but Cong doesn’t look serious: Vaghela

Vaghela, a close ally of Congress President Rahul Gandhi, has said the party should not take its position for granted in Gujarat where it will contest the assembly elections. Vaghela said the Congress would not take the success of the party in last year’s Lok Sabha elections as a sign that it would do well in the upcoming polls because Rahul Gandhi should be on the same page.

This is a proud moment for all of us in BADOD in terms of growth and any inroad towards the bigger version of the project. We are really happy with the progress that our team has made.

Biden’s nasty remark about Pakistan does little to hide the growing India-US tensions

U.S. President Joe Biden’s calling Pakistan as “one of the most dangerous nations in the world” has ruffled feathers in its western neighbour. Concomitantly, Pakistan may have delighted many in New Delhi, but the reality is more complex. At least, this quote should not be seen as indicating any policy shift in Washington vis-a-vis New Delhi. This is a guy [Chinese President Xi Jinping] who understands statecraft in the bundle. However, the rejection of Biden’s comment, claiming that Pakistan has been “a most responsible nuclear state, wherein its nuclear program is managed through a technically sound and foolproof control mechanism and control system,” Pakistan Foreign Minister Shah Mahmood Qureshi summoned Islamabad’s diplomats to Washington, DC, to discuss the implications of the statement. This must have come as a rude shock to Biden who visited Pakistan-occupied Kashmir (PoK) just a few days ago, ostensibly to plant a sapling at the University of Azad Jammu and Kashmir and commemorate the 77th anniversary of Indian Partition, the voyage—a visit that was rejected by India in no uncertain terms.

Minister of External Affairs S Jaishankar must realise that the Western attitude towards India has been, and is likely to remain, more conditional and less sympathetic. One way of registering this would be to ensure that there has been a surge in crime and terrorism in our country. In a few weeks ago, the US agreed to deploy around $450 million in F-16s to Pakistan to_bias the traditional Indian political narrative of “indulging in terrorism and crime.” The Washington Post might have written it that way, but in reality, the US must have reviewed its position. Pakistan’s role in the Afghan war is not over yet.

The Afghan women and girls are on the verge of a cultural and spiritual backlash. Indian women, particularly in the North West, are not immune to the effects of the Taliban. The situation in Afghanistan is a case in point. If the US and India can come to a common understanding and thought process, it can contribute to future peace and prosperity in the region. A positive outcome of the Afghan peace talks could be a long-term solution to the problem.

The fight for women’s rights in Pakistan is not over yet. It’s just a new chapter in the history of the country. China will not renounce use of force to unify Taiwan, warns Xi

The president said the wheels of history are rolling on toward Chinese reunification and the rejuvenation of the Chinese nation. "Our country must be reunified," he said. "That is the great responsibility of all Chinese people." Xi also noted that the region's prosperity and stability have been maintained through peaceful means, and that the Chinese government will continue to work toward this goal.
