BJP attacks Nitisht, Mamata for lawlessness in States

The BJP on Wednesday accused the Trinamool Congress (TMC) of being behind the attack in Tripura, an election-sensitive state, and said its party should be held responsible.

The BJP chief said he would take the matter to the Election Commission.

"We have material in our possession, documents and video evidence. The video shows that the police were seen in front of the people," he said.

Sushma Swaraj, the party's senior leader, said the TMC was responsible for the violence in Tripura.

"The TMC is responsible for the violence in Tripura and should be held accountable," she said.

She also said the TMC should be held responsible for the violence in other parts of India.

The BJP has been demanding that the TMC be held responsible for the violence in Tripura.

"The TMC is the only party that has been responsible for the violence in Tripura," she said.

She added that the TMC should be held responsible for the violence in other parts of India as well.

The Goa development shows that the Congress is still not able to stall the exodus of its leaders.

Tony seems to have become the defining feature of the Congress. On the one hand, senior leader Rahul Gandhi’s support for Indira Gandhi is being ‘triumphantly’ referred to. On the other, his own party seems to be willing. As if the exodus of senior leaders like Rahul Gandhi and Kapil Sibal were not enough, now they are interested in the party’s own history. In December, during the scuffle for the party leadership, it was the Congress that lost. It seems that the fact that the BJP can be a real threat to the Congress, the party that has long dominated politics in India, is not perceived seriously by the Congress as well. However, the Congress did not seem to really understand the seriousness of the situation. It is not the case that the party is not able to secure a majority in the state Assembly.

S

Hindi in Dakshin Bharat

Hindi is a contentious issue down south. It was deplored with disfavor and public opposition in south India. The issue of Hindi in Dakshin Bharat has been a significant issue, with concerns expressed by various parties. Hindi is not only a language but also a symbol of national unity and identity. The call for Hindi in Dakshin Bharat was not just about the language but also about the cultural and social identity of the region.

Sheep in the Wolf’s Clothing

The Congress will be left with just three members in the state Assembly. Many consider this as the end of an era that has ruled the country for the longest period. Less than two months ago, the party leadership was trying to make a comeback in the state, but despite all efforts, the party seems to be facing difficulties. The reason for this could be the Congress’ failure to realize the seriousness of the situation. It seems that the party is not able to understand the gravity of the situation.

Education must enhance the well-being of the students and must also take into account their psychological and emotional state.

TEACHERS SHOULD BE TRAINED TO UNDERSTAND ANY PSYCHOLOGICAL ISSUES FACED BY STUDENTS

Whether the students are dealing with stress, anxiety, or depression, teachers need to be trained to understand and address these issues. They should be equipped to recognize the signs and symptoms of mental health issues and provide appropriate support and resources.

KEEPTOCONTROLLINGPRICES

The soaring prices are an economic concern in many countries. Governments are taking steps to control inflation and ensure that the prices of essential goods are kept under control. This is important to prevent the middle-class and poor from facing difficulties.

Truth about COVID fatalities

A lot of the claims and counter-claims about COVID fatalities are misleading. The data on fatalities is not uniform across different countries and regions. The number of fatalities is influenced by various factors, including the quality of healthcare systems, testing capacity, and reporting standards. It is important to be cautious when interpreting the data.

Government’s initiatives and policies are crucial in controlling the spread of COVID-19. Vaccination drives and other preventive measures have helped in reducing the number of fatalities. However, the pandemic is not over yet, and continued vigilance and adherence to safety protocols are essential.

To control fatalities, it is crucial to focus on vaccination, contact tracing, and isolation. These measures help in reducing the transmission of the virus and reducing the number of fatalities. It is equally important to ensure that the healthcare system is well-equipped to handle the escalating cases.

In conclusion, while the number of fatalities is concerning, ongoing efforts to control the pandemic and improve healthcare systems are vital in reducing fatalities. It is important to be aware of the inaccuracies and misinformation surrounding COVID fatalities and focus on evidence-based and effective measures to control the spread of the virus.

There is sense of momentum by Ukrainian armed forces: US

The White House has said that there is a sense of momentum by Ukrainian armed forces against Russia but cautioned that the ongoing war "remains unpredictable." "We've been watching the Ukraine's dramatic rise in terms of its military prowess and its resilience," White House press secretary Karine Jean-Pierre said in a press briefing on Wednesday. "We have watched as the Ukrainians have moved troops to the east of the country, where they think an offensive will come, and they have deployed more and more of their military forces in eastern Ukraine, including in the Kharkiv region.

"...As they have pushed to the east, they have taken more territory from Russia, they have seen Russian retreats, they have pushed through swaths of territory around Izium, and they have managed to recapture large pieces of territory behind the Oskil..."

"...The Ukrainians feel that this is a tipping point, that they are on the offensive, and they have had strong military successes recently. They have managed to push back Russian forces..."

India has decided to authorise SBI to promote rupee trade with Russia: FICIE report

India's decision to authorise the State Bank of India (SBI) to promote rupee trade with Russia could be a significant move towards diversifying the country’s foreign exchange reserves and reducing its dependence on the US dollar, experts say. The move, announced by the government, is expected to support bilateral trade between the two countries and possibly lead to the establishment of rupee-based payment mechanisms.

The decision comes amid growing geopolitical tensions and the continued use of the US dollar as the primary foreign exchange currency. By allowing rupee trade, India is likely to reduce its exposure to the US dollar and the associated risks. This could also contribute to the diversification of the country’s foreign exchange reserves.

India's foreign exchange reserves, which have been a key indicator of the country’s economic stability, have been volatile in recent years due to fluctuations in the US dollar. The decision to promote rupee trade with Russia could help in stabilising the country’s foreign exchange reserves and improving its economic stability.

The move is also expected to boost India's trade with Russia. India is already the third-largest importer of Russian goods, with imports from Russia accounting for about 3% of India’s total imports. By promoting rupee trade, India could further increase its imports from Russia, thereby strengthening its economic ties with the country.

The decision to promote rupee trade with Russia is likely to be welcomed by both countries. Russia is a key supplier of oil and gas to India, and the country is looking to diversify its energy sources. By promoting rupee trade, India could reduce its exposure to the dollar-based pricing system and potentially negotiate better terms for its energy imports.

Overall, the decision to promote rupee trade with Russia is likely to be viewed positively by the international community. It could help in promoting economic cooperation between the two countries and potentially lead to the establishment of rupee-based payment mechanisms in other parts of the world.

India and Russia have a long history of economic cooperation, and this decision could help in strengthening these ties. By promoting rupee trade, India is likely to reduce its exposure to the US dollar and improve its economic stability. The decision is also expected to benefit both countries in terms of trade and economic growth.
