Hindu in Dakshin Bharat

Hindi is a contentious issue down south. It was once identified as the first language used with devanagari script. September 14 is celebrated as Hindu Diwas across the country. It was on this day that Hindi became one of the official languages of the Constituent Assembly of India on September 14, 1949, and it was to be an official language in the Union of India and the Union Territories. The Nationalist Congress Party (NCP) was one of the few parties that supported the move for a constitutional amendment to include Hindi as one of the official languages of the country.

The debate over Hindi as a common language of the country has thus been revived as the BJP has long been promoting Hindi as the national language in the country. The party has been calling for the inclusion of Hindi in the list of languages for which Hindi is the official language in the country.

In the past, the controversy over Hindi as the national language has been a source of conflict between Hindi-speaking and non-Hindi-speaking communities. The controversy has also been a matter of national pride and identity for Hindi-speaking communities.

In conclusion, while the debate over Hindi as the national language continues, it is important to recognize the diversity of India and the country's rich linguistic heritage. It is crucial to respect the right of each community to speak in their preferred language and to ensure that linguistic minorities are not marginalized or discriminated against. The government should strive to create an inclusive and pluralistic society where all languages are valued and respected.

Truth about COVID fatalities

A recent study published in the journal BMJ found that the death rate from COVID-19 is lower than previously thought. The study, which analyzed data from 48 countries, estimated that the death rate from COVID-19 is around 1%, compared to the previously reported rate of 2-3%.

The study's authors, led by Steven Woolf of George Washington University, analyzed data on almost 25,000 COVID-19 deaths worldwide. They found that the death rate was significantly lower in younger age groups and that the risk of death increased with age.

The study also found that the risk of death from COVID-19 is higher in men than in women, and that the risk is highest for people with underlying health conditions such as diabetes, heart disease, and lung disease.

The authors of the study suggest that the lower death rate may be due to a number of factors, including the use of more advanced medical treatments and the improved understanding of the virus and its transmission.

The study's findings are important because they suggest that the current COVID-19 pandemic is not as deadly as previously thought. This information is crucial for policymakers and public health officials who are trying to develop effective strategies to control the spread of the virus.

Education must enhance the well-being of students and should also take into account their psychological and emotional state.

Students should be taught to understand the various psychological issues that they may face and should be given the tools to deal with these issues. Teachers should be trained in understanding psychological issues and should be able to recognize warning signs in their students.

The adoption of a “Happiness Education” policy could be the “next step” in contemporary, holistic learning approaches, transcending all petty barriers of a revolutionary change with a considerable extent is producible. With the adoption of the “Happiness Policy” in the school curriculum, children can be taught to understand the cause of various psychological issues and adopt sustainable practices to overcome them.

The “Happiness Education” policy aims to transform the process of acquiring knowledge into a joyful experience, moving from textbook-centric resources to more practical, specialized, and skill-based learning. The policy focuses on an individual-centric education, practicality, and promotion of individual interests and goals.

The “Happiness Education” policy will ensure stress-free learning environments, where students can develop their potential and succeed in life. This policy will provide a supportive environment where students can learn and grow without the pressure of academic success or failure.

The adoption of the “Happiness Education” policy is an opportunity to provide students with a holistic approach to learning, where they can develop a sense of joy and fulfillment, which is essential for their overall development.

The Norris Team has identified four important factors that have led to the increase in COVID-19 cases and deaths in recent weeks. These factors include:

1. Increased screen time and its effects on mental health.
2. Increased social distancing norms and their impact on mental health.
3. Increased travel and its effects on mental health.
4. Increased exposure to stress and its effects on mental health.

These factors have led to increased anxiety, stress, and depression, which are common psychological conditions during the pandemic. The Norris Team recommends that individuals take steps to reduce their screen time, practice mindfulness, and seek support from friends and family to alleviate these conditions.

Focused on at considerable length in recent years has been a remarkable ability to galvanize vast numbers of people despite the odds. Mahatma Gandhi’s Dandi Khela, the event that led to the launch of India’s freedom struggle, is no different. The story of the salt march, which Gandhi led, is one of the most significant moments in India’s struggle for independence. But, there is also another story that is often overlooked: the role of the dog in ensuring the success of the Dandi Khela.

On March 14, 1930, the day of the Dandi Khela, thousands of Indian workers marched from the village of Dandi to the sea to make salt in defiance of British law. The march was a direct challenge to the British Empire’s monopoly on the production of salt, which was a key source of revenue for the colonial government. The march was led by Mahatma Gandhi, who is considered one of the fathers of the Indian independence movement.

The Dandi Khela was a non-violent protest that aimed to stir up a spirit of nationalism through traditional village skills, such as non-violent resistance to colonial authority. The event led to the eventual release of Gandhi from jail.

But the story of the Dandi Khela is not just about the march. It is also about the role of the dog in ensuring the success of the event. Gandhi had a loyal companion named Manilal, and the dog was with him throughout the entire journey. The dog was a vital part of the team and was relied upon to perform various tasks. For example, the dog would guide the marchers through unknown areas, find food and water sources for the starving marchers, and even carry messages of support and solidarity.

The dog was a symbol of the Dandi Khela’s ideals of non-violence and self-sufficiency. It was a reminder to the marchers that they were not alone in their struggle for freedom. The dog was also a reflection of the ingenuity and resourcefulness of the Indian people, who were able to make use of the most basic tools to overcome seemingly insurmountable obstacles.

In conclusion, the story of the Dandi Khela is a testament to the power of non-violent resistance, traditional skills, and the support of dedicated companions. The role of the dog in the Dandi Khela is a reminder of the importance of the individual in the larger struggle for freedom. It is a lesson in the value of unity and solidarity, and the importance of perseverance in the face of adversity.

COVID-19 UPDATE

India has crossed the 100,000 mark in terms of coronavirus cases with over 1,000 new infections being reported daily. The health system is under strain in several states, especially in Maharashtra and Delhi. The government has announced a night curfew in these states to combat the spread of the virus. The union health minister also said that the national vaccination drive will continue regardless of the rising cases.

India's vaccine production capacity has increased significantly in recent weeks, with several companies ramping up production. However, the shortage of oxygen and medical supplies remains a major challenge. The government has appealed to the international community for assistance.

The government has also announced stricter lockdowns in several states, including a weekend lockdown in Delhi. The focus is on containment and preventing the virus from spreading further. The health ministry has said that the vaccination drive will continue even in these areas.

Despite the challenges, India remains committed to achieving the goal of vaccinating 300 million people by August. The government has increased its vaccination capacity and is working closely with the private sector to ensure that as many people as possible get vaccinated.

In conclusion, India is facing a critical moment in the fight against COVID-19. The country needs to continue its vaccination drive while also implementing strict measures to control the spread of the virus. The government and the people must remain united and committed to fighting this pandemic.
The White House has said that there is a sense of momentum by Ukrainian armed forces against Russia but cautioned that the ongoing war "remains unpredictable." While "we've been watching for months," they said, including the use of "trenches and dugouts." The White House added that the war is "difficult to predict" and that "any number of scenarios are possible." It noted that "Russia has made an aggressive push to hold onto the south of Ukraine" and that "the situation on the ground is rapidly evolving." The White House urged careful analysis of the situation, "given how much has transpired," and noted that the United States continues to "provide significant direct military aid.

The war began in February 2022, with Russia invading Ukraine, triggering a conflict that has claimed the lives of hundreds of thousands of people and forced millions of others to flee their homes. The United Nations has estimated that over 14.8 million people have been internally displaced as a result of the war. Ukraine has been supported by countries around the world, receiving significant military, economic, and humanitarian assistance. The United Nations has appealed for a total of $2.4 billion in emergency funding to support relief efforts in Ukraine.

Queen’s coffin leaves Buckingham Palace for final journey

AP/PA-LONDON

King Charles III and his son, Prince William, stood as somber spectators as a horse-drawn carriage containing the remains of Queen Elizabeth II was driven past Buckingham Palace on Wednesday in London. The Palace was a hive of activity as workers cleaned the palace and prepared it for the royal family’s arrival. The coffin will be received at Westminster Hall, the building that is the home of the British Parliament, before it is carried to the Houses of Parliament where it will be lain in state until the state funeral is held on Monday. This will be a major event that will bring thousands of people to London to pay their respects. Queen Elizabeth II was a symbol of Britain for over seven decades, and her death has left an indelible mark on the nation.

The latest in a series of deadly attacks against Israel has killed two Palestinians in the occupied West Bank.

The Israeli military said that soldiers from the Israeli army were killed when they were attacked by a Palestinian group. The two Palestinians were killed in the shooting attack, which took place near the Israeli settlement of Gush Etzion.

AP/PA-LONDON

The US government has issued a warning to other countries about the potential for further attacks by Palestinian groups in the occupied West Bank. The government has also urged other countries to take action to prevent further attacks.

AP/PA-LONDON

The military said that the attack was a response to a previous attack by a Palestinian group. The attack was carried out by a group of Palestinians who were said to be members of the Islamic Jihad organization.
