Congress calls it 'Operation Khichdi' against success of Bharat Jodo Yatra

Pioneer News

The Congress 'Bharat Jodo Yatra' which is being conducted in various parts of the country to solicit public opinion on various issues relevant to the country has received a setback in Maharashtra. In the wake of this development, the Congress Chief Minister Nitin Gadkari has been invited to join the Bharat Jodo Yatra programme.

The party leadership has also reportedly approached the Chief Minister to participate in the event. However, the Chief Minister has declined the invitation saying that he will participate in the rally only if it is held in his own state of Maharashtra.

This move comes after the Bharat Jodo Yatra, which began in September, has faced several roadblocks in different states. The party had planned to conduct the rally in various parts of the country over several months, but the recent invite to Gadkari is seen as a strategical shift by the Congress.

The Chief Minister, who has been a prominent figure in the party, had earlier expressed his support for the Congress-led United Progressive Alliance (UPA) government.

However, the recent invite appears to be a tactical move to counter the BJP's own undergraduate protests and rally, which have been gaining traction across the country.

BJP leader Pawan Kumar Varma, who is also present, had previously alleged that the BJPF was not interested in genuine public consultation and was mainly using the Yatra as a tool to spread its propaganda.

Meanwhile, the Congress has been trying to attract more supporters to their cause by highlighting issues such as the rise in fuel prices and the growing concerns of farmers.

Despite the setback in Maharashtra, the party remains hopeful that it will be able to attract more supporters in other parts of the country.

India protests US F-16 package to help Pakistan

CM Dhami flags off Acharya Balkrishna led expedition to Raktavgarh Glacier

The Uttarakhand government has flagged off a scientific expedition of Acharya Balkrishna, Minister of State for Environment, Forest and Climate Change, to Raktavgarh Glacier in the Champhor Valley. The expedition aims to study the glacial system and its implications for the region's water resources.

The expedition, which will be led by Acharya Balkrishna, will focus on understanding the glacial processes and their impact on the local ecosystem. The team will also collect data on the glacial ice and its potential for future research and conservation efforts.

The expedition is part of the government's efforts to promote scientific research and explore the natural beauty of the region. It is also a significant step in the development of the Champhor Valley as a tourist destination.

The expedition team will be accompanied by experts in glaciology, geography, and ecology, who will study the glacial system and its impact on the local ecosystem. The team will also collect data on the glacial ice and its potential for future research and conservation efforts.

The expedition is expected to conclude in a few weeks, and the results will be used to inform future research and conservation efforts in the area.

The people of Champhor Valley are excited to welcome the expedition team and learn about the latest developments in glaciology and ecology. They are confident that the results of the expedition will contribute to the understanding of the region's natural beauty and help in its sustainable development.

The expedition team is grateful to the government for providing the necessary support and look forward to sharing their findings with the scientific community and the public.

The success of the expedition will also help in attracting more tourists to the area, thereby generating income for the local community and promoting the region's tourism industry.

The expedition is a significant step in the development of the Champhor Valley as a tourist destination, and the people of the region are confident that it will contribute to the region's sustainable development.
India, India review bilateral ties

Indo-Pacific trilateral cooperation on the cards

New Delhi

India and France on Wednesday reviewed the entire gamut of their bilateral relations and agreed to step up cooperation that would help India implement its development projects. Both sides also discussed the situation in Ukraine, the consequences of the coronavirus pandemic, a joint five-year Plan of Action during the talks between External Minister S. Jaishankar and his French counterpart Catherine Colonna. It was Jaishankar’s first visit to India as the Foreign Minister.

Jaishankar, who later said in a joint statement that both sides were a “natural fit,” added that both countries have a lot to gain from working together.

Colonna, who added that the meeting was a natural fit, said that both India and France are natural partners and that they share many common interests.

The Indo-Pacific trilateral will also provide a platform for Indian diplomats and sailors to step up cooperation and formulate India’s bilateral relations with its Indo-Pacific neighbors, the official said.

Both sides also stressed on the importance of maintaining a free and open Indo-Pacific region.

President Joe Biden has said that the United States and India have launched a new era of partnership, with both countries agreeing to step up cooperation in the Indo-Pacific region.

Biden made the statement during a phone call with Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi, in which he urged New Delhi to expand its cooperation with the US in the Indo-Pacific region.

The US has also approved proposals to further consideration on Republic of the Coral Sea Marine National Park.

The move comes after the US government in October approved a similar proposal for the same reason.

The US has also expressed its concerns about South China Sea and the South China Sea Code of Conduct.

Hindu in Dakshin Bharat

Hindi is a contentious issue down south. It was finally added with desirability and pragmatism on September 14, 2019, when S. Venkaiah Naidu, the then Vice President of India, signed the Schedule 7 of the Constitution, which recognized Hindi as an official language of India.

Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi, who has been in power since 2014, has been pushing for the use of Hindi in official communications and administrative proceedings. The Indian government has also been encouraging the use of Hindi in educational institutions, media, and public offices.

The move to make Hindi an official language has faced opposition from linguistic minority groups, who fear it will lead to the marginalization of other languages and cultures.

In a letter to the editor, Prof. Harpreet Singh, a professor of English at Amity University, suggests that the move to make Hindi an official language is a step in the right direction, and it should be further strengthened.

"The move to make Hindi an official language is a step in the right direction, and it should be further strengthened. This is a positive move towards achieving linguistic harmony in India," Prof. Harpreet Singh wrote in a letter to the editor.

The move to make Hindi an official language has also been welcomed by some experts, who believe it will help in the integration of the country and promote unity.

Zelensky visits devastated city retaken from Russia

AP KIEV (UKRAINE)

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky visited the recently retaken city of Izium on Thursday, promising aid for local residents and thanking them for their role in repelling Russian forces. The city was once in the hands of Russia, but it was retaken in a highly coordinated offensive by Ukraine's armed forces.

Zelensky toured the city, which was described as nominally safe, and said he was ‘happy to make this trip’ to visit residents. He met with local councilors, went on a city tour and visited a hospital and schools.
