Chief Minister K. Chandrasekhar Reddy has reaffirmed his government's commitment to supply free electricity to farmers. Mr. Reddy announced that the government would provide free electricity to farmers for a period of 45 days, starting from September 17.

Mr. Reddy said, “The Modi government is anti-farmer, anti-poor, anti-labour. Our government will provide free electricity to farmers. This will help them save their money and improve their livelihood.”

The Chief Minister also emphasized that the government is committed to providing various benefits to farmers under the PM-SHRI scheme. He said, “Our government has been working hard to provide various benefits to farmers. We have already provided them with various subsidies and financial aid.”

Mr. Reddy further stated that the government will continue to work towards the development of the agricultural sector. He said, “We will continue to work towards the development of the agricultural sector. We will provide various benefits to farmers, including free electricity, to help them improve their livelihood.”

The Chief Minister also emphasized the importance of supporting the agricultural sector. He said, “The agricultural sector is the backbone of our country. We will continue to work towards the development of the sector and provide various benefits to farmers.”

A decade before Modi assumed office, India registered 11th among developing nations, with the UK ranking number five. Those were the days when Mamathom had been rekindled. Indian economy registered 11.5 per cent in the first quarter of the current fiscal and it is expected to grow by 6 per cent through the year, according to experts. The country is not alone. Many nations across the world have been fighting inflation and growing demand for food. The rapid rise in the price of petrol and diesel has led to a huge increase in the price of basic commodities. The rupee has also weakened against the US dollar, putting pressure on the country’s foreign exchange reserves.

Amit Malviya, the National Education Policy (NEP) implementation leader, has been in the news recently. He has been criticized for his claims about the NEP’s success. However, Malviya has defended his actions, saying that the NEP has been a success. He has also been accused of plagiarizing his work. Malviya has denied these accusations, saying that his work was original and that he has never plagiarized.

Malviya has also been criticized for his comments on the NEP’s impact on rural schools. He has said that the NEP has brought significant improvement in rural schools. However, many experts have disputed these claims, saying that the NEP has not had a significant impact on rural schools.

In conclusion, the NEP has been a controversial issue in India. While some experts have praised its impact, others have criticized it. It remains to be seen how the NEP will affect India’s education system in the future.

Speaker may not respond to AIMIM's letter on Raja Singh

All eyes are on AIMIM's letter to Speaker

As per reports, the AIMIM did not respond to the letter of Hyderabad MP Raja Singh to the Cherlapally Legislative Council will soon convene. All eyes are on AIMIM's letter to Speaker Srinivas Reddy of Telangana Legislative Council which was sent on September 2.

The AIMIM Legislative Whip Ahmed Puddin Qadri had written a letter to TLTBL (Legislative Council) Speaker Srinivas Reddy, informing about an issue related to the House on September 2.

Mr. Qadri informed that Asif Khan was an MLA elected from Nizamabad, but he had a residence in Nagireddypeta of Kamareddy district. He had committed suicide in a car which was parked at the residence. He had hanged himself with a road roller, according to the police.

However, the AIMIM has not responded to the letter yet, which was sent on September 2 to the Speaker.

The Cherlapally Legislative Council will convene soon, but it is not clear whether the AIMIM will respond to the letter in time. The AIMIM has not responded to the letter yet, which was sent on September 2 to the Speaker.

Bihar political upheaval unlikely to have nation-wide impact: Kishor

Political strategist turned actor Prashant Kishor on Monday asserted that the recent political developments in Bihar are unlikely to have nationwide impact.

“The political situation in Bihar is developing in such a way that it is unlikely to have national ramifications. Moreover, what has happened in Bihar is a reflection of what has been happening in other states like Assam and West Bengal. The phenomena, unlikely to have nationwide impact is reflected in those states as well,” said Kishor.

Kishor further said, “The political situation in Bihar is moving in the direction of self-destruction. Thealon as a vote bank is unlikely to flourish in those states too. That is why the national impact is unlikely.”

Bihar Chief Minister Nitish Kumar was symbolic of the middle-class voter and in the last assembly elections, the JD(U) led by him achieved a comfortable majority. The election outcome in Bihar was symbolic of emerging as the top revenue-generating assets. In a boost for small entrepreneurs and start-ups, Railway Minister Ashwini Vaishnaw had launched e-auction for commercial advertisement on its premises, for parking lots, leasing parcel space and pay-and-use toilets.

Rains would deliver a big consignment to the LCS in the near future, the police said.

According to the police, the claim of the two peddlers was that, while returning from the village, they had been apprehended by two policemen. After the apprehension, they had been taken to a police station in Tirupati where they were questioned, police said.

Three of family among four electrocuted to death in Assam

Three members of a family, including two girls, were electrocuted to death in Assam on Saturday.

Police sources said that the family members were electrocuted at their residence in a village in Dibrugarh district of the north eastern state.

The bodies of the victims were shifted to the nearest medical college for post-mortem examination.

“Two girls and their mother were electrocuted to death. The cause of their death is electrocution,” said a police official.

The deceased had made a complaint about a well being in their vicinity earlier, he added.

A team of health workers was rushed to the site to conduct post-mortem examination of the victims.

Three members of a family, including two girls, were electrocuted to death while they were working in a field, police said.

In the family, a man and his wife along with two daughters were electrocuted to death, said official.

The incident took place around 12:30 pm on Saturday when the family members were working in a field near their residence.

The bodies of the deceased were shifted to the nearest medical college for post-mortem examination.

Police have started investigations to ascertain the cause of the deaths.

The deceased were电工作 when they came into contact with a live electric wire, said police.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi, who is visiting the state this week, condoled the deaths. He directed the state government to ensure that the families are provided all possible help.

“Deeply saddened by news of the death of a family due to electrocution in Assam. Tributes to the victims. Assistance to their family and all other necessary help should be provided at the earliest,” he tweeted.

Drones promise to add efficiency and precision to various agricultural practices. With the help of advanced technology, drones can be harnessed to aid in crop health monitoring, soil analysis, pest identification, and even in the precise application of fertilizers and pesticides. This not only reduces the time and labor required for these tasks but also minimizes the use of chemicals, leading to environmental benefits. Drones are expected to play a significant role in the future of smart farming, revolutionizing the way agriculture is practiced and managed.

However, the widespread adoption of drones in agriculture faces several challenges. Regulatory frameworks need to be put in place to ensure the safe and responsible use of drones. Concerns over privacy and data security must be addressed. Moreover, the cost of drones and their operation can be a deterrent, especially for small and medium-sized farmers who may not have the resources to invest in this technology.

To overcome these challenges, governments and research institutions are working on developing affordable and user-friendly drones designed specifically for agricultural purposes. Furthermore, partnerships between technology companies and agricultural organizations can help accelerate the adoption of drone technology in the agricultural sector.

In summary, while drones offer tremendous potential to transform agriculture, their full potential can only be realized through collaboration between stakeholders, innovative technological solutions, and a supportive regulatory environment. As the integration of drones into agricultural practices continues to grow, it is essential to address these challenges to ensure sustainable and equitable benefits for all.
FM defends windfall tax on crude, oil product exports

From July 1, the government has imposed a windfall tax on domestically produced and additional tax on refined products like petrol, diesel and aviation fuel. The tax is aimed at ensuring that the windfall gains from rising oil prices are not retained by the companies. The tax is calculated as a percentage of the increase in the international price of crude oil and is expected to generate significant revenue for the government.
