ough the Housing and Urban Development (H and UD) Department failed to upgrade the Bonai Town of Nanded Area Council (NAC) as per its directive in 2016, the demand for a separate residential area has been gaining momentum in recent years.

Justifying the demand, the Council’s vice-president, Gajanan Khale, said “The area has been designated in the 5 sq km of Nandedgarh Taluka under the Ministry of Housing and Urban Affairs, Government of India, but it is not getting any financial support. The NAC is finding it difficult to carry out any development activity.”

As a result, Khale from the village Bonai, Mhowar, is writing to the Council and Government, appealing for a separate residential area for the village. The Mhowar area is a part of the Bonai area, which has been declared a town and the Council has been unable to provide any infrastructure or amenities for the residents.

Khale further said, “The Council has given a steel pipe line network to the residents, but the water is not being distributed properly. The roads are also not being maintained properly. The residents are facing a lot of difficulties due to this.”

Khale has been writing to the Council and government to provide a separate residential area for the Mhowar area.

Addressing the media, Union Home Minister Amit Shah said the two countries have a "natural affinity" and are "natural friends" and talked about the need to continue to support each other in light of the changing world and the ups and downs of their own strategic autonomy.

The Indo-Pacific trilateral will allow a platform for Indian and French strategists and analysts to start a "database" to share details of things like what happened in the region in the last 15 years. The Indo-Pacific region, a term defined by the US, refers to the area from the east coast of India to the west coast of Australia, inclusive of the ASEAN region.

Hindu in Dakshin Bharat

Hindi is a contentious issue down south. It was introduced with deixis and plurality to the region:

September 14 is celebrated as Hindu Diwas across the country. It was on this day that Hindu became one of the official languages. The Constituent Assembly (September 1949) adopted Hindi as an official language to be written in Devanagari script. It was then Prime Minister Pandit Nehru who decided to celebrate the day as Hindu Diwas, though he himself was not very conciliatory in the language. This is also not a day that passed out without a new controversy. The southern states have blamed the successive Central Governments for imposing Hindi on south India where people have Hindi spoken. It is a popular fact that the language is spoken in the flood plains, mining belts, and urban agglomerates of the states. It is also a fact that people can choose to learn and speak the language as per their convenience, but this has not always been the case.

The debate over Hindi as a common language of the country has thus been revived as the BJP has made it a vital plank of its manifesto. The party has been vocal in its demands for the establishment of a Hindi University and the use of Hindi medium in educational institutions. In fact, the party has been consistent in its demand for Hindi to be recognized as one of the national languages, along with English, Urdu, and Bengali. The party believes that Hindi is the natural language of the country and that it should be promoted and encouraged. The party has also been vocal in its opposition to the use of English in official matters.

In conclusion, the demand for Hindi as a common language is a contentious issue that has been debated for many years. The party's stance on this issue is consistent and the party has been vocal in its demands for Hindi to be recognized as one of the national languages.
