It was the year 2008 when...
The war is an unprofitable business

In general, wars profit the arms-selling countries who supply weapons to the warring sides, making no matter to whom wins or loses.

The major wars of the 20th century were fought for (i) upsetting states and expanding national power and (ii) control of colonies and other derived needs of the age. But it is quite clear that when the war is over, which was expected to point out in few weeks, it is still raging and doesn't seem to end any time soon. Continuous supply of arms and ammunition to the US by the US and NATO countries and war equipment supplementary support for the US by Sino and China consistently kept the war on. The economic interests of all the above countries who thus backed Russia and Ukraine were nutshell. The world was still in the middle of the Third world war – another war – in the Middle East bordering between Hamas in Palestine territory and Israel, with many economic losses. The situation is not only the USA but also civil war in Ukraine, which has been a long war. Hence, the military and national territories. The world of the 20th century continues to profit huge loss. Hence, inciting wars directly in it. Countries that involve many nation-states. The major wars of the 20th century were fought for upsetting states and expanding national power. The world of the 20th century is on the precipice of another big war, which will involve many countries.
