AP/ MAHESH GARG/ STRAFF/ WASHINGTON

Palestinians in besieged Gaza are facing a humanitarian crisis as Israeli aid supplies are running out and reports of shortages and dead bodies are increasing. The situation is deteriorating rapidly, with thousands of Palestinians trapped in their homes due to the ongoing conflict.

Meanwhile, the international community is calling for a diplomatic solution to end the conflict and prevent further loss of life. The United Nations has appealed for urgent action to prevent a humanitarian crisis from unfolding.

In a statement, UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres said: "The situation in Gaza is dire and worsening. The needs are overwhelming and the response must be immediate."

PM Vishwakarma’s attempt to empower the self-employed traditional entrepreneurs who contribute to their communities and create employment

M ay people strive to secure their dream job and are unwilling to risk becoming an entrepreneur. However, we need to be aware of the fact that entrepreneurship is not limited to the wealthy or those with a college degree. It is not just for the young, but is open to people of all ages and backgrounds.

The success of entrepreneurs is not limited to those who inherit family businesses. An individual’s mindset towards entrepreneurship is crucial and develops over time. Even after turning a successful venture into a business, those who do not have a entrepreneurial orientation and mindset will not be able to understand the importance of innovation and risk-taking.

It is important to teach entrepreneurship to children from a young age to ensure they will be better prepared for the future. This will include understanding the risks and rewards of entrepreneurship, as well as learning how to manage resources and make informed decisions.

Entrepreneurship is a key factor in economic growth and development. It is also important to encourage and support small businesses, especially those owned by women and minorities, as they can create jobs and stimulate economic activity.

In conclusion, entrepreneurship is vital to the economy and society. By providing education and support to entrepreneurs, we can help create a more prosperous and equitable future for all.
