INJECTORS DELIVER A RESOUNDING VERDICT

WILL THE NDA COME BACK?

Prime Minister Narendra Modi kicked off the campaign for the upcoming Lok Sabha polls on June 9, calling it the “Coalition Era.” He addressed a rally in Amritsar where he accused the Congress of “tarnishing” India’s image in the world. The rally was the first of the nationwide campaign. The NDA is expected to focus on its achievements during the last five years.

The rally marked the beginning of the campaign, but the real battle is yet to come. The NDA will have to face a strong challenge from the Opposition, which has been preparing for months.

The NDA’s success in the 2014 polls was largely due to its ability to团结 various parties under the banner of a common programme. The NDA will have to replicate that success in the 2019 polls.

The NDA will have to focus on its achievements during the last five years and highlight the country’s progress. It will also have to address the concerns of the voters and address their demands. The NDA will have to work hard to win the hearts and minds of the voters.

The elephant population in Odisha has risen from 1,976 in 2017 to 2,098 in 2024, according to the latest elephant census released by the Prime Minister’s Office (PMO). This significant increase in the elephant population is due to various initiatives taken by the Odisha government to conserve the wild elephants and their habitats.

The annual elephant census, a joint effort of the forest department, the Department of Wildlife Protection, and other partners, is conducted every five years to monitor the elephant population and understand changes in their habitat. The latest census report highlights the significant growth of the elephant population in Odisha, which now stands at 2,098.

The increase in the elephant population is attributed to the effective implementation of the World Environment Day, which focuses on sustainable development and conservation. The Odisha government has also prioritized the conservation of elephants by implementing various strategies, such as creating more elephant corridors, establishing more sanctuaries, and implementing anti-poaching measures.

The increase in the elephant population is not only a testament to the government’s efforts but also a testament to the success of the World Environment Day campaign. The Odisha government has consistently worked towards creating a sustainable environment for the elephants, ensuring their well-being and the preservation of their natural habitats. This is a translation of the Marathi poem "Diwas": Celebrating India's Legacy. The poem is written by Dr. Vinayak Shinde. It is a call for the Indian people to celebrate Diwali with more fervor and enthusiasm, as it is a symbol of India's strength and unity.

The poem is a popular patriotic song sung during Diwali, and it is often performed at public gatherings and festivals. The song is based on the story of King Raja, who is the king of the country's people, and his ability to overcome any obstacle.

In our minds, we need to create a space where we will be able to accept all the qualities (be they positive or negative) of a person. Only through this, we can develop our strength and our potential. In this society, we can live in the present moment. A meditation ritual would be a way to tolerate situations, conditions and people. The local and the collective are changing and we need to be in this in our own way. It is very important to understand and to accept.

By not accepting people and situations, we are only hurtling our minds in frustration and pain and not finding a way to solve the problem. Unnecessary thoughts keep creeping up in our system as to what other person feels about us without discussing it, which is not healthy for our mind.

India's social work, modern only now that we can trace back to ancient times when the concept of 'mukte' (self-realization) was in- grained in our culture. The profession, in its modern form, began taking shape during the colonial period with the establishment of social work training programs. The Indian Association of Social Work (IAWS), founded in 1916, is the oldest social work organization in India.

India stands strong in diversity, with various religions, languages, cultures, and climates. The country is home to numerous social work institutions. Solving unique social issues. Solutions to these problems cannot be one-size-fits-all; they must be tailored to the specific community and location. India's social work is deeply rooted in its traditions, thus providing a unique perspective for promoting these valuable traditions.

Disaster, Response and Relief, and as well as Advocacy and Human Rights

The fact that India has a strong social sector is reflected in the large number of organizations working in the field. Many of these organizations are rooted in local contexts, emphasizing the importance of community engagement in determining the course of action.

Modern implications for advancing, traditional techniques and values in social work, are strongly recommended and necessary. The secularization of the social sector, which has been in evidence for some time, is a concern.

In this context, we need to understand the importance of community involvement in determining the course of action. This is not only a matter of being more effective, but also of being more ethical. The social sector needs to be more transparent and accountable.

In the past, social work was perceived as a charity-based service. However, in the current context, social work should be seen as a human rights-based service. This is because people have the right to be treated with dignity and respect, and to be able to live their lives with freedom and independence.

In the context of Modi 3.0, the social sector needs to be more innovative and responsive. This is because the current social sector is facing many challenges, such as the need to address the needs of different communities, and the need to be more proactive in addressing the needs of the most vulnerable.
