Neglect of party workers behind BJP’s loss in UP

Sudhir Prasad, the national president of the BJP in Uttar Pradesh, feels that the notable neglect of party workers is likely to cost the party dearly during the elections, leading to the ruling party’s downfall.

Despite this, she noted that the ruling party is still able to seek the support of local leaders. "There is a high chance that the Congress will not be able to pull together the states of the alliance and will face a setback," she added.

She also highlighted the significance of the role played by local leaders in the upcoming elections. "Local leaders play a crucial role in ensuring victory," she said.

The Congress is likely to face a tough time in the upcoming elections, with the party's performance in the recent bypolls in Ayodhya being a stark reminder. The party's defeat in Ayodhya is a "major setback," she added.

"The Congress has not been able to effectively communicate its message to the masses," she said, highlighting the party's lack of a clear strategy and leadership.

The congress's leader in the state, Randeep Singh Surjewala, also echoed these sentiments. "The Congress is facing a battle against itself," he said.

He added that the party's failure to address the concerns of the masses and its inability to present a strong alternative have contributed to its downfall.

T he NDA-led by PM Narendra Modi has a strong majority in the general election and it is a function of the deep-rooted democratic legitimacy when a leader or political party commands mandates. For record's sake, Pratap Sarangi and Sunil Deodhar have even suggested that the NDA government needs a third or fourth term to address the challenges that the country faces. While the West has already been talking about the prospects of a Modi 3.0 government, this victory is in tune with the focus on how the country needs to move forward from Modi 3.0 because this term is going to define the legacy of PM Modi. The NDA-led government has to make an interesting calculus in its third term. It is a tough call in the current political climate, where serious political discourse has diminished. The Congress and National leaders should understand that they will not find a place in the current political setup. This is a phenomenon that has been witnessed in South Asia and in the world. It is also a function of how politics is becoming more of an industry in the country. It is an industry that is dominated by numbers and not by the quality of ideas. If there is any chance of a political party taking a lead in the current political climate, it might be the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) and it’s a function of the mood of the country.

The NDA government must be cautious about the third term. TheBJP and its allies should be careful about what they do next in the third term. They need to focus on the real challenges that the country faces and the solutions that are required.

Prime Minister for the third time, the Congress will be scrapped and reservation ended. Ahead of Assembly elections due in October, Saini said that BJP workers will now reach out to the SC/ST community and ensure they come out in full strength.

Saini also said that in eight years of ruling the state, the Congress government never went against the SC/ST reservation policy and therefore, such a decision was necessary, the KPCC president added.

On Congress leader Bhupinder Singh Hooda’s demand to step down from the post of Chief Minister, Saini said, “We hold a majoritarian view and there is no place for democracy as it is present in the Congress. Houthi rebels unleash solid-fuel 'Palmite' missiles

Dubai (AFP) — Yemeni Houthi rebels have unveiled a new, larger version of their controversial ‘Palmite’ missiles that marks a significant milestone in the group’s weapons development, according to a military analyst.

The new missiles, said to be larger than the previous version, are expected to provide the rebels with an improved range and payload capacity, further enhancing their capabilities against targets in Saudi Arabia and other parts of the region.

The launch took place on Wednesday as the conflict in Yemen continues to spiral, with both sides vying for military advantage.

It is the first time since the conflict began in 2015 that the rebels have unveiled a new type of missile, indicating a shift in their tactics as they seek to maintain the upper hand.

The rebels have been using solid-fuel missiles in recent months, which allow for faster and more accurate delivery of explosives.

The ‘Palmite’ missile is named after the country’s capital, Sanaa, and is believed to be one of the most advanced weapons in the rebels’ arsenal.

In recent years, the group has relied heavily on its advanced weaponry to counter the Saudi-led coalition’s air campaign, which has been ongoing since March 2015.

The coalition, comprised of Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, and other regional states, has been bombing Houthi positions in Yemen in an attempt to roll back the group’s territorial gains.

The new missile is expected to add another layer of complexity to the already tense regional dynamics, as it could potentially target a wider range of targets.

The launch comes amid reports that the rebels are increasingly relying on their own capabilities to strike back against the coalition, which is facing mounting criticism over its use of force.

The use of solid-fuel missiles is seen as a way to counter the coalition’s technological edge, as they are difficult for the coalition’s air defenses to intercept.

The new ‘Palmite’ missile is expected to further escalate the conflict, as both sides continue to seek an upper hand in the ongoing battle for Yemen.

The launch is part of a broader effort by the rebels to maintain their military footprint in the region, as they continue to challenge the coalition’s dominance.

The ongoing conflict has resulted in the displacement of millions of people, with the United Nations estimating that over 20 million Yemenis are in need of humanitarian aid.

The situation is further complicated by the presence of Iranian-backed Houthi rebels, who have been fighting with the government forces on the ground.

The rebels have been targeting military and civilian targets, including public buildings, hospitals, and schools, with their powerful weaponry.

The new missile is expected to further complicate the conflict, as it could potentially escalate tensions and lead to a further militarization of the region.

The launch is part of a broader strategy by the rebels to maintain their momentum and challenge the coalition’s hold on Yemen.

The new missile is expected to further reflect the rebels’ advanced military capabilities, which have been increasingly recognized by regional and international actors.

India need to learn art of hitting peak at right time: Ponting

NEW DELHI

It all revolves around the two T20 World Cup games where India has taken on England at the Kennington Oval on what has been described as a batting paradise.

While Indian pacers literally tore through the English batting line-up, Overseas would have been a challenge in the shortest format.

"When you talk about hitting peak at the right time, it is a very important skill in the shortest format, more so than any other sport," said Ponting.

"It is actually a very fresh skill. There is a great deal of it. But along with that it's about striking the ball at the right time. What is the right time to play for India?"

"You need to do the best you can and make sure you are hitting the ball beautifully," said Ponting.

"And I think they could be one of the really dangerous things that they might do in this World Cup. But also be very surprised if the short format doesn't come to show the country in a different way," he added.

India are coming into the T20 World Cup on the back of a 3-0 series win against the United States in a three-match T20I series. They have been playing well with the bat and ball, and are looking to continue their good form in the shortest format.

"You’ve got to try and keep a close eye on yourself and focus on the task at hand rather than thinking too far ahead or worrying about any sort of external pressures," Ponting said.

"There’s no doubting the talent (in India) exposed, but there’s nothing like sustained excellence in the short format. We’ve got to get the bowling right, get the fielding and bowling unit in place and make sure the batting is strong enough."

"If you look at the strike rates of the Indian batsmen, they’ll probably match up pretty well to any other country’s batsmen. If you look at how they are hitting the ball and coming off of a pretty good IPL well then you’ve got Parthiv very high in the middle order, and South Africa will have hybrids, Kallis and Daniel Smith."

"I think they’ve got the right balance going forward. Parthiv will look to get in and play through the line of sight. Parthiv will look to get in and play through the line of sight, and he’s going to look for an encore."

India will come up against South Africa in a last-four game in the World Cup on November 11. The game is a must-win for both teams, and the loser will have to battle for a place in the semi-finals. Ponting said the game will be a battle of two great teams.

"It’s going to be a great game. It’s going to be a great battle. It’s going to be a great game for the fans and the players. I think it’s going to be a great game for the fans and the players."

India will be looking to continue their good form in the shortest format, while South Africa will be looking to stop their winless run in the World Cup. Ponting said both teams will be looking to give their best, and the game will be a great one for the fans. Ponting said the game will be a great one for the fans.
