FRESH UNREST IN BANGLADESH
Bangladesh's interim Government, led by Chief Adviser Muhammad Yunus, has ordered a nationwide security clampdown after fresh unrest erupted following the shooting of right-wing cultural group youth leader Sharif Osmani Hadi in Dhaka. Hadi, leader of Inquilab Mancha and an independent candidate in the February 12 general elections, was shot in the head at close range on Friday while launching his campaign in the Bijoy Nagar area. Doctors say his condition remains critical, though stable, and he is on life support at a private hospital. Home Affairs Adviser Lt Gen (Retd) Jahangir Alam Chowdhury announced the launch of the second phase of "Operation Devil Hunt" to curb illegal arms and rising violence. A reward of Tk 50 lakh has been announced for information leading to the arrest of suspect Faisal Karim Masud, identified as one of three motorcycle-borne assailants. Yunus ordered a manhunt and met Hadi's family, pledging full support. Political parties and student groups condemned the attack, warning against a return of violence ahead of the elections.

UK HONOURS DADABHAI NAOROJI
The House of Lords in London hosted a special reception to mark the 200th birth anniversary of Dadabhai Naoroji, the nationalist leader remembered as the "grand old man of India" and the first Indian elected to the British Parliament. Born in Mumbai in September 1825 to a Parsi family, Naoroji travelled to Britain in 1855 and went on to play a significant role in its political and intellectual life. The event was hosted by Lord Karan Billeoria, the Parsi peer and founder of Cobra Beer, who highlighted Naoroji's pioneering journey as a businessman, academic and politician, and his historic election to Parliament in 1892. Indian High Commissioner to the UK Vikram Doraiswami reflected on Naoroji's enduring legacy and the outsized contribution of the Parsi community to public life in India and Britain. Former UK minister Sir Vince Cable recalled Naoroji's influential "drain theory", which exposed the economic costs of British colonial rule in India. The bicentenary event also featured an exhibition tracing key milestones of Naoroji's life and career.

DELHI FUELS HEALTH CRISIS
Delhi's prolonged pollution crisis is triggering a sharp rise in health problems, with hospitals reporting a 20-30 per cent increase in respiratory patients, including many first-time cases and young adults, doctors said. On Saturday, air quality worsened from "very poor" to "severe", with the Air Quality Index crossing 400, a level that affects even healthy individuals. At 4 pm, the 24-hour average AQI stood at 431, according to official data. Doctors across the city said outpatient departments and emergency rooms are seeing a surge in patients with breathlessness, chest tightness, wheeze and persistent cough. Pulmonologists warned that symptoms are more severe and prolonged this year, often requiring higher medication doses. Alarmingly, people with no prior respiratory illness are showing reduced oxygen levels and airway inflammation. Health experts attributed the spike to sustained exposure to toxic pollutants such as PM2.5, PM10, nitrogen oxides and ozone, which penetrate deep into the lungs and bloodstream. Vulnerable groups, including children, the elderly and diabetics, are most affected. Doctors have advised residents to limit outdoor activity, use N95 masks if necessary, and seek medical care for persistent symptoms.

Messi mania ends in mayhem

SAUGAR SENGUPTA ■ Kolkata

GOAT's visit to the City of Joy lapsed into a colossal mess after angry spectators ransacked the Yuva Bharati Stadium in Kolkata setting parts of it on fire. Several people were injured in the melee as billboards were pulled down, seats and bottles were hurled inside the fence, requiring the police to resort to random lathi charge. Fans of Lionel Messi were upset at not being able to catch a glimpse of the world soccer star as scores of politicians, celebrities and organisers surrounded the football icon throughout his 18 minutes stay inside the stadium. The main organiser of Saturday's GOAT Tour event Shatadru Dutta was arrested, and Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee offered an impromptu apology to the fans and the footballer. The soccer star who had to fly off to Hyderabad for a second league programme was escorted out to safety, the police said adding the crowd became restless after Messi's brief appearance at the venue and their failure to see him live allegedly because "he was surrounded by a host of personalities." Another person said seething in anger: "There was everything but not the man to see whom we purchased the tickets ... because he had been hijacked by the lobbyists ... He didn't take a single kick or a single penalty. They said they would bring Shah Rukh Khan too... But not even that."

The chaos and lack of organisation was such that even the Chief Minister could not reach the venue on time and failed to attend the photo session with the soccer star, sources said. Fans who came from as far as Odisha and other neighbouring States asked in desperation, "was the programme organised to fleece us only ... why did we pay as high as ₹16,000 and came here for such far places ... only to see some riff raff netas and then get beaten up by the police." Others who resorted to sloganeering from the stands shouting "Chor ... Chor" or "we want justice" called the programme a big scam worth several hundred crores and asked the Government to investigate into it.

A political free-for-all after chaos

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE ■ Kolkata

As the Messi event turned into a mayhem, the TMC, the BJP, the Congress and the Left parties took the opportunity to settle their political scores. The BJP demanded immediate resignation of Chief Minister Mamta Banerjee for "discrediting West Bengal before the world". While the Congress also attacked the TMC Government describing the episode as "terrible mismanagement and a mockery of law and order". The CPIM called it a "black day" for West Bengal. The Congress, Left and BJP demanded a 100 per cent refund for gallery ticket-holders, arrest of those responsible. All lashed out at the organisers of the event featuring Lionel Messi in Salt Lake stadium which ended in chaos as irate spectators went on a vandalism spree for not having a proper view of the football icon. The TMC on its part demanded action against the organisers. TMC spokesperson Kunal Ghosh said that the "overzealousness" of the organisers and people close to them to crowd Messi and take selfies with him prevented the spectators from the gallery, who shelled out hefty amounts for the event, from having a proper view of the football star, and it infuriated them. "Why should no action be taken against the organisers for this mess? Why was there no proper planning? Why did chaos break out? It forced Messi to leave the stadium and the chief minister of West Bengal could not attend and accord him a warm welcome on behalf of the people of the State," the TMC State general secretary said. Union minister and senior BJP leader Sukanta Majumdar slammed the TMC and the State administration for the chaos. Leader of the Opposition in the State Assembly, Suwendu Adhikari, launched a scathing attack on the State Government, alleging that ministers and leaders "clung to Messi like leeches", while football fans who paid thousands of rupees were left watching him on the giant screen for barely a few minutes.

Tax department targets bogus deductions

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE ■ New Delhi

The Central Board of Direct Taxes (CBDT) has stepped up its efforts to curb bogus deduction and exemption claims, nudging taxpayers to voluntarily correct their income tax returns before stricter action follows. The Income Tax department has started sending SMS and email advisories to taxpayers for wrongful deduction claims related to unrecognised political parties or charitable institutions. The department has come across cases of fake deduction claims filed under Section 80C of the Income Tax Act, which covers a series of investments, and even Section 80GGC, which relates to donations to Registered Unrecognised Political Parties (RUPPs) or Charitable Institutions. The CBDT said through data analysis it has observed that huge amount of bogus claims have been made on account of donation to Registered Unrecognised Political Parties (RUPPs) or Charitable Institutions and reduced their tax obligations and have also claimed bogus refunds.

BJP abuzz with speculation on possible leadership shift

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE ■ New Delhi/Bhopal/Lucknow

Speculations have gained momentum over yesterday about a possible change in leadership in the BJP at the national level as well in its Uttar Pradesh unit. Union Minister of State for Finance Pankaj Chaudhary on Saturday filed his nomination papers for the post of the Uttar Pradesh BJP chief, and was the only candidate to do so. Meanwhile, it is certain that Union Minister Shivraj Singh Chouhan may be tipped to take over the baton at the national level from Union Minister J P Nadda. A party functionary confirmed both the development and that Chaudhary's name as the next Uttar Pradesh BJP president is likely to be announced on Sunday by the central election officer and Union Minister Piyush Goyal. Sources said security was tightened around the Bhopal residence of Shivraj Singh Chouhan on Saturday, though officials said it could be part of a routine exercise following a periodic review. A makeshift tent was erected outside the main gate, and a number of barricades were placed along the busy Link

Road, while additional police personnel were also seen in the residential area of Chouhan, who arrived at the residence late Friday night and left for Delhi on Saturday afternoon. Party sources said the sudden increase in security led to speculation in local political circles that Chouhan could soon be appointed as BJP president. Chaudhary submitted the papers to former Union Minister and BJP State election officer Mahendra Nath Pandey and central election observer Vinod Tawde. Uttar Pradesh Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath, Deputy Chief Ministers Keshav Prasad Maurya and Brajesh Pathak and Jal Shakti Minister Swatantra Dev Singh were also present for the submission, party sources said. Chaudhary's anointment is being seen in view of the upcoming panchayat elections and the 2027 Assembly elections, and the candidate with strong regional and caste equations would be chosen. Chaudhary is a seven-time MP from the Maharajganj parliamentary constituency. A member of the Kurmi caste, categorised as Other Backwards Classes (OBC), he is considered a trusted confidante of Prime Minister Narendra Modi, Home Minister Amit Shah and Defence Minister Rajnath Singh.

Lotus blooms in Thiruvananthapuram

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE ■ New Delhi/Thiruvananthapuram

The BJP-led NDA made an unexpected inroads in the Kerala civic body polls in the Thiruvananthapuram Corporation on Saturday wresting it from the CPI(M)-led LDF. Prime Minister Narendra Modi termed the mandate received by the BJP-led NDA in the Thiruvananthapuram Corporation a "watershed moment" in Kerala's politics and expressed gratitude to the BJP workers for the "spectacular results". Congress-led UDF secured a decisive victory in Kerala's local body elections, dealing a blow to the LDF while the BJP wrested the State capital civic body from decades of Left control. While Congress leaders expressed gratitude to the people of Kerala for giving the UDF a "decisive" mandate, its MP Shashi Tharoor also congratulated the BJP for its "historic performance" in the city corporation in his Thiruvananthapuram Lok Sabha constituency after BJP won 50 out of 101 seats, ending the CPI(M)-led LDF's 45-year reign in the local body. The BJP's win in the Thiruvananthapuram Corporation has come as a morale booster for the party which is preparing itself for the 2026 Assembly polls. Of the 101 wards in Thiruvananthapuram Corporation, the BJP won 50, LDF 29, UDF 19 and two by independent candidates. With this victory it is being speculated BJP will install its first Mayor in Kerala, with the State's first woman IPS officer, 64 year-old R Sreelekha being tipped for the post. PM Modi said it is a day to recall the work and struggles of generations of karyakartas (workers) in Kerala, who worked at the grassroots, which ensured today's result became a reality. "Thank you Thiruvananthapuram!

The mandate the BJP-NDA got in the Thiruvananthapuram Corporation is a watershed moment in Kerala's politics," Modi remarked on social media. While the NDA won the Thiruvananthapura corporation, the UDF increased its seats in the local body as compared to the 2020 polls. This year, the UDF also won 54 of the 87 municipalities, 4 of the 6 corporations, and was significantly ahead in the village, block, and district panchayat segments till the reports last filed. In the 2020 civic polls, it had won a total of 7757 wards in the grama, block, district panchayats, municipality and corporation put together. This time it holds a commanding lead in the three-tier panchayat system, leading in 8,020 of the 17,337 grama panchayat wards, 1,241 of the 2,267 block panchayat wards, and 195 of the 346 district panchayat wards.

GRAP IV invoked as Capital turns toxic

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE ■ New Delhi

The air quality commission in the Capital on Saturday, for the first time, invoked Stage IV of the Graded Response Action Plan (GRAP) restrictions. On Saturday, the overall Air Quality Index in Delhi hit close to the 450 mark, plunging large parts of the city into thick smog and triggering emergency curbs. With the Commission for Air Quality Management's (CAQM) announcement, the Delhi Government has issued directions to all Government offices under it and all private offices in the National Capital Territory (NCT) of Delhi, to work on 50 per cent strength and the rest to work from home. As part of Stage-IV, there is a ban on the entry of trucks — except LNG, CNG, electric and BS-IV diesel — into Delhi, except those carrying essential commodities or providing essential services. Curbs are also placed on light commercial vehicles (LCVs) registered outside Delhi, other than EVs, CNG and BS-VI diesel vehicles. All construction and demolition (C&D) activities will remain suspended, including linear public projects such as highways, roads, flyovers, overbridges, power transmission lines, pipelines and telecom works. On the education front, NCR State Governments and the Delhi Government may decide to discontinue physical classes for students of Classes VI to IX and Class XI, shifting to online mode if required. Explaining the reasons for the worsening AQI, the CAQM said the feeble Western Disturbance approaching north-west India was the main contributing factor, and not local emissions.

A City Dressed for Weddings and Goodbyes

Renée Ranchan

Come November and Delhi undergoes a curious transformation. The city — already a great lover of noise, light, and general commotion — turns into a sprawling wedding carnival until February. One could argue that winter in Delhi has two distinct seasons: fog and pheras. Venture out at any remotely respectable hour and you will find yourself in a motorcade that seems to be inching towards somebody’s baraat, even if you were merely attempting to buy bread. Fairy lights loop across banquet halls like overzealous

Christmas decorations, drummers practise their war cries at street corners, and every salon from South Extension to Pitampura emits a faint smell of hairspray, rouge, and matrimonial ambition.

It is, in short, chaos — but chaos with sequins.

Delhi weddings, more so in the past decade and a half, have acquired a rather synthetic sheen. There is now a highly Instagrammified quality to the whole spectacle. The Instagrammification of weddings has ensured that nothing can simply be anymore; everything must be curated, filtered, drone-shot, and preserved for the ages as though the nation’s collective memory depends on a Reel. Grooms appear in sherwanis so similar that one wonders if there is a Central Registry issuing them! Makeup arrives in layers thick enough to qualify for civil engineering approval. Sangeets are choreographed with military precision; one half expects the cousins to march off in formation. Wedding planners — those new-age field commanders — stalk about with walkie-talkies, whispering instructions as though guarding state secrets.

And yet, beneath all the glitter, bustle and algorithm-friendly aesthetics, lies something softer, more delicate, and unmistakably Indian — the quiet heartbreak of letting a daughter go... It is never declared aloud, for that would be far too honest, but it settles into the corners of the house like the winter mist. Mothers potter about, occupying themselves with cupboards, opening them, closing them, and repeating the whole ritual---a quiet pastime for nerves that have nowhere else to go...Fathers linger at the dining table longer than necessary, re-reading the newspaper without absorbing a word... Even the domestic staff tread gently, as though aware that the home has become an emotional eggshell...

For the girl at the centre of it all, the experience is an intricate blend of thrill and upheaval. She has lived in her parents’ home for over two decades — through school exams, sulks, heartbreaks, triumphs, birthday cakes, and countless cups of tea. Her room has witnessed every version of her — from the toddler with chutney on her face to the young woman now fielding messages in her bridal lehenga. Her cupboard carries the archaeology of her life; her bathroom knows her better than most therapists...And then, almost overnight, she must prepare to leave all of this behind.

Excitement, yes. But also a tremor of fear. A faint sense of possibility. And beneath it all, a quiet mourning for the life she is packing away in cardboard boxes, bubble wrap, and hastily folded memories. Even the lehenga conspires to remind her of the weight of change — after all, it weighs more than a moderately-sized child...

The groom, let it be said, experiences change as well — but of a markedly different nature. In the Indian cultural equation, he expands his household; she uproots hers. He brings a bride, a wife home, but she arrives with an entire emotional universe tucked inside one suitcase. If he lives independently, the transition is simpler; but in a joint or semi-joint household, the adjustments fall disproportionately upon her shoulders.

Her new bedroom has already been arranged long before she arrived, the cushions chosen by someone else. The bathroom shelves are full of aftershaves, hair gels, and mysterious male toiletries that seem to multiply like Delhi’s traffic. She places her things gently, careful not to rearrange too much — as though the walls themselves might be watching.

The initial days are a delicate exercise in diplomacy. Where to keep her bags without seeming presumptuous. How to share wardrobe space with a man who has never before surrendered even a sock. How to navigate dinner-table conversations without accidentally trampling family hierarchies.

And how to reassure her mother over nightly phone calls — “Mummy, truly, I’m fine... it’s just different, you know?”

Meanwhile, Delhi outside continues its great matrimonial opera. The salons go into overdrive — blowdries performed at the pace of a Formula One pit stop. Tailors become minor deities with waiting lists. Banquet halls hum like beehives, and the traffic achieves feats of absurdity previously unseen. I once spent so long in a jam outside a wedding venue that I genuinely feared I might be enlisted into the baraat by mistake.

Yet, beyond the laughter, gossip, mithai counters and the relentless commentary of aunts (“Gold is in this season, beta... white gold looks so washed out!”), there is still that one moment no one speaks about — the moment the daughter steps into the car. The moment when the house she grew up in, the life she knew like the back of her hand, slips quietly out of view.

I once witnessed a bride pause on the threshold handbag in hand, utterly baffled as to where she ought to place it in the decorated car. A small thing, laughable even — but in that tiny hesitation lay the enormity of her transition. On another occasion, a girl bent down to whisper something to her pet dog before leaving: “I’ll be back soon, okay?” The dog, sensing the coming separation, refused to let go of her dupatta. The mother laughed, the father pretended to look stern, but I noticed both blink a little too often.

Delhi, for all its grandiosity, remains curiously shy about acknowledging this emotional truth. Weddings are projected as triumphs of celebration, pageantry, and familial achievement. And indeed, they are. But they are also small goodbyes folded into a single night — a farewell to a girl’s childhood home, to the comfort of unquestioned belonging, to the version of herself who never had to explain her presence, her habits, or her heart.

And so the music plays on, the marigolds glow, and life resumes its familiar, bustling rhythm — as Delhi always ensures it does. But somewhere between one banquet hall and the next, a girl steps across a threshold and begins the quiet, courageous work of building a new life from scratch. No drone captures that. No Instagrammified reel records it. And perhaps that is just as well — some transitions are meant to be lived, not posted.

Synthesis of Different Paths of Liberation

Vijay Singal

In the concluding chapter (chapter eighteen) of the Bhagavad Gita, Sri Krishna has summarised all his teachings. In shlokas from 18.45 to 18.58, he has not only explained the different ways of attaining spiritual perfection, but has also highlighted the interrelatedness and interconnectedness of these paths.

The most practical way of attaining spiritual enlightenment is to be devoted to one’s own work. It has been declared that human beings can attain perfection by fulfilling their duties, born of their innate qualities, without attachment to the actions or their results. Perfection can be achieved by worshipping Him, from whom all beings arise and by whom whole of the universe is pervaded, through unattached performance of one’s own natural duties. In other words, work is worship of the Divine, man’s offerings to God. Any work done as an offering to the all-pervading divine becomes a form of worship, which leads to the purification of the mind, and realisation of the self.

Sri Krishna has further stated that it is better to perform one’s own duty imperfectly than to perfectly perform the duties of others. One should not give up the work born of his nature (his own duty), even if it has flaws ; because every endeavour is clouded by some fault , in the same manner as fire is covered by smoke. It has been declared that one does not incur sin (the karmic reaction), while doing the duty ordained by his own nature.

After explaining as to how one can attain to perfection by performing his own duty with sincerity and offering the same to the divine, Sri Krishna then proceeded to explain the concept of sannyasa (true renunciation). It has been declared that the one who has mastered his mind, whose understanding (buddhi) is unattached everywhere ; and who is free from selfish desires - such a renunciator of works attains to that supreme state of naishtkarmya siddhi, which transcends all works. Naishtkarmya siddhi implies the inner state of action lessness, even while performing all works with full vigour.

Sri Krishna has further explained as to how after achieving such a state of transcendence of works, one can attain Brahman, the ultimate stage of spiritual enlightenment. It has been stated that the one who is endowed with a pure understanding, who has restrained himself through firm determination, who is free from likes and dislikes, who has turned away from various objects of the senses, who relishes solitude, who eats lightly, who controls body, mind and speech, who is ever engaged in meditation, who has taken refuge in detachment, who is free from egotism, violence, arrogance, lust and anger, who is free from the sense of possessiveness ; and who is tranquil in mind - such a seeker of truth becomes worthy of attaining the state of brahm-bhuyay (capable of becoming one with Brahman i.e. realisation of the Absolute Truth).

Having become one with Brahman, such a person of joyous mind neither grieves for anyone nor craves for anything. Being equally disposed towards all beings, such a realised person attains supreme devotion to the Supreme Lord (Ishvara). Through such supreme devotion, the devotee comes to know Ishvara, in truth. Having thus known the Supreme Lord in truth, such a devotee enters into full consciousness of Him.

Sri Krishna has, thus, outlined a holistic approach to spiritual perfection that integrates action (karma yoga) and knowledge (gyan yoga) ; and which culminates in supreme devotion and surrender to Ishvara (bhakti yoga). He has explained how one gains divine consciousness through unattached performance of his works, restraint of the senses and control of the mind, cultivation of equanimity ; and the love for and trust in God. It has further been clarified that attaining of divine consciousness does not mean that one should give up work. One should, rather, renounce the pride of being the doer and enjoyer of works. It has been stated by Krishna that His sincere devotees, though performing all kinds of actions, always take refuge in Him

(the Supreme Lord). By His grace, they attain the eternal and imperishable abode. It has further been advised that one should dedicate all his actions to Ishvara, treating Him as his supreme goal. Uniting the intellect with Him, one should keep his consciousness always absorbed in Ishvara. Sri Krishna has assured that if one so fixes his thoughts on the Supreme Lord, he shall overcome, by His grace, all obstacles.

To summarise, one should perform his natural duties, which are determined by one’s innate qualities. By diligently performing the work suited to his nature, one can gain self-purification. When one worships Ishvara through his own work, the material activity is transformed into a spiritual practice. Once the mind is purified by unattached action, one becomes fit to traverse the path of inner discipline and spiritual wisdom, leading to the realisation of Brahman (the impersonal aspect of the Absolute Truth). The one who realises his identity with Brahman, becomes peaceful, neither grieving for anyone nor craving for anything. He ultimately attains supreme devotion to Ishvara (the personal God). When one surrenders exclusively to Ishvara, one overcomes all obstacles, attains supreme peace ; and reaches the eternal, imperishable abode.

To conclude, the paths of karma yoga, gyan yoga and bhakti yoga are not opposed to each other. All of them, separately and collectively, lead to spiritual liberation.

Vice President CP Radhakrishnan on Saturday led Parliamentarians in paying floral tributes to those who died fending off terrorists who attacked the Parliament House in 2001. On the 24th anniversary of the attack, Prime Minister Narendra Modi and Radhakrishnan, who is also the Rajya Sabha Chair, were among the first to offer tributes. A function was held outside the now old Parliament building (Samvidhan Sadan) every December 13 to mark the day. Separately, President Droupadi Murmu paid tributes to the "courageous heroes" who laid down their lives while protecting Parliament, and said the country remains indebted to them and their families. "On this day, we reaffirm India's commitment to fight terrorism in all its forms," Murmu said in a social media post. Modi said on this day,

"Our nation remembers those who laid down their lives during the heinous attack on our Parliament in 2001." "In the face of grave danger, their courage, alertness and unwavering sense of duty were remarkable. India will forever remain grateful for their supreme sacrifice," he said while sharing photographs of the homage ceremony. CISF personnel presented a salute or "samman guard" at the venue, after which a moment of silence was observed to mark the anniversary. Till 2023, the CRPF used to offer 'salami shastra' (present arms). Congress leader Sonia Gandhi, Leader of the Opposition in the Lok Sabha Rahul Gandhi, and his sister Priyanka Gandhi Vadra, a senior party leader, were also present at the event. Union ministers Kiren Rijiju, Jitendra Singh and Arjun Ram Meghwal also lined up to offer flower petals at the photographs of the personnel who went down foiling the attack.

Akhlaq lynching case: Karat seeks President's intervention in UP Govt's move

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE

New Delhi

Senior CPI(M) leader Brinda Karat on Saturday wrote to President Droupadi Murmu, demanding her intervention in the Uttar Pradesh Government's move to withdraw charges against the accused in the 2015 mob lynching of Mohammad Akhlaq. In a letter to the President, Karat called it a "politically motivated" step by the Government, and also questioned the role of the governor. "I write to draw your urgent attention to the role of the Uttar Pradesh governor in the matter of the mob lynching case of Md Akhlaq, which occurred in September 2015. The governor has given written permission to the UP Government to go ahead in its wholly illegal and unjust attempt to subvert the processes of justice and to withdraw the entire case even though the main witness has already given evidence," Karat said. She said the Government has filed an affidavit in the Greater Noida district court to withdraw the case, with the governor's permission.

"I regret that I am forced to write to you on this matter, but since the governor has been appointed by you and is answerable to you, I felt it in the interests of justice to inform you of the facts and to request your urgent intervention," she said. On September 28, 2015, a mob gathered outside Akhlaq's house in Uttar Pradesh's Bisahada village after an alleged announcement from a village temple claiming that he had slaughtered a cow. He, along with his son Daanish, was dragged out of their home and assaulted, leading to Akhlaq's death. "Even today, Danish has not fully recovered and carries the impact of the grievous wounds inflicted on him," Karat said.

Assets worth ₹92 crore seized in anti-Naxal action: Govt

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE

New Delhi

The Centre has significantly constricted the financial lifelines of Naxals with seizure of assets worth ₹92 crore through a multi-agency coordinated action, inflicting severe moral and psychological damage to "urban naxals" by tightening control over their information networks, a Government statement said Saturday. To meet the firm target of making the country completely Naxal-free by March 2026, the Government has created a dedicated vertical in the National Investigation Agency (NIA) which has seized ₹40 crore, State authorities have seized an additional ₹40 crore, while the Enforcement Directorate has attached assets worth ₹12 crore. "Simultaneous action has inflicted severe moral and psychological damage on urban Naxals and tightened control over their information warfare networks," the statement said. Giving exhaustive details of action taken against the Maoist extremists, the Government said only three districts remain "most-affected" by Naxalism in 2025 compared to 36 in 2014. In 2025 so far, 317 Naxals have been neutralised, 862 arrested and 1,973 surrendered, it said. "A total of 28 top Naxal leaders have been neutralised, including one Central Committee Member in 2024 and five in 2025," it said. Listing out major successes by security forces, the Government said 27 hardcore Naxals were killed in Operation Black Forest, 24 surrendered in Bijapur on May 23, 2025, and 258 surrendered in October 2025 across Chhattisgarh (197) and Maharashtra (61), including 10 senior Naxals. "Total Naxal-affected districts have been reduced from 126 in 2014 to just 11 in 2025. Fortified police stations increased from only 66 until 2014 to 586 constructed in the last 10 years," it said. Police stations recording Naxal incidents dropped sharply from 330 across 76 districts in 2013 to merely 52 in 22 districts by June 2025. In addition, 361 new security camps have been established in the last six years and 68 night-landing helipads have been built to strengthen operational reach. "The Government has adopted a unified, multi-dimensional and decisive strategy against Naxalism, replacing the scattered approach of previous Governments," the statement said. The Government has also given a parallel push to improve infrastructure in the Naxal-infested zones with 12,000 km of roads constructed in the areas between May 2014 and August 2025. Projects for a total of 17,589 km have been approved at a cost of ₹20,815 crore, ensuring all-weather connectivity and mobility in previously inaccessible areas, it said. A major project to improve mobile connectivity was also undertaken with 2,343 (2G) mobile towers installed at a cost of ₹4,080 crore in the first phase, followed by 2,542 towers sanctioned in the second phase with an investment of ₹2,210 crore, of which 1,154 are already installed. "Additionally, under the Aspirational Districts and 4G Saturation schemes, 8,527 (4G) towers have been approved, with 2,596 and 2,761 towers, respectively, now functional, dramatically improving communication and intelligence reach in core Naxal zones," it said. Banking services were promoted in the Naxal zones with the setting up of 1,804 bank branches, 1,321 ATMs and posting of 37,850 banking correspondents to give deep financial inclusion a boost.

PM RENAMED MGNREGA TO CHANGE ITS SPIRIT, NOT NAME: BJP

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE

New Delhi

BJP on Saturday said Prime Minister Narendra Modi's decision to rename the rural job guarantee scheme was not to alter its name but to change its "spirit". Hitting back at the Congress following its criticism on renaming MGNREGA, BJP national spokesperson Sudhanshu Trivedi said the Opposition party and its leaders cannot understand the decision as they function with a sense of entitlement. "The name on which the Congress considers its exclusive right belongs to the entire country," the BJP leader said in an apparent reference to Mahatma Gandhi's name. The Union Cabinet approved a Bill on Friday to rename the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Act (MGNREGA) as 'Poojya Babu Grameen Rozgar Yojna'. "The prime minister is not changing the name (of the scheme) but its spirit," Trivedi said. Prime Minister Modi has dedicated his entire life to the service of the nation and the people and he works with this spirit, the BJP leader said. "But the Congress, which has worked with the principle of 'aage-peeche hamri sarkar, hum hain yahan ke rajkumar' (we are in rule everywhere, we are the royals), cannot understand the spirit with which the prime minister works," he said, when asked about the Congress's criticism of renaming MGNREGA.

Congress slams Govt over MGNREGA name change

Congress on Saturday questioned the need for renaming the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Act (MNREGA) scheme and asked "what is wrong with the name Mahatma Gandhi" that the Government had to take this step. Reacting to the development, Congress general secretary in-charge communications Jairam

Ramesh said the Modi Government is a "master" at renaming schemes and laws. "They renamed the Nirmal Bharat Abhiyan to Swachh Bharat Abhiyan, and the rural LPG distribution programme to Ujjwala. They are experts in repackaging and branding," he said.

MP TO GIVE SPECIAL PACKAGE TO FORMER NAXAL-HIT DISTRICTS

After declaring the State to be free of Naxalism, Madhya Pradesh Chief Minister Mohan Yadav on Saturday said his Government would provide a special package to the districts of Balaghat, Mandla and Dindori, once affected by Maoist violence. The elimination of Naxalism was the biggest achievement of his government's tenure so far, Yadav said in an interview on completing two years in office. "A special package will be provided for Naxal-affected Balaghat, Mandla and Dindori for development. We want them to become model districts for the future. The last 20-25 years have been very bad, so we are preparing a concrete plan to bring them closer to the rest of the advanced districts," he said.

Nadda targets Himachal Congress Govt over funds

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE
■ Shimla

BJP President JP Nadda on Saturday alleged that the Congress Government in Himachal Pradesh has failed to utilise the funds allocated by the Centre and therefore has no right to remain in power, accusing the State administration of functioning with a carefree mindset. "Congress Government in Himachal Pradesh is working with a mindset of "Khao Piya Mauj karo, aage kisne dekha hai (indulge in merry making, who has seen the future)," he said and stressed that "double engine Government is the only way to ensure development of the State". Addressing an event, Nadda accused the State Government of corruption and misutilisation of funds given by the Centre under various heads, including building of houses, repair of roads and smart city. Refuting the allegations of the Congress Government that the Centre is not giving enough funds to the State, Nadda claimed, "₹3,789 crore were given for disaster relief, over ₹1,000 crore for Smart Cities besides funds for Vibrant Village development, medical colleges, AIIMS Bilaspur, a bulk drug park, four-lane highways and developed Baddi as a pharmaceutical hub in the State yet the Congress continues to spread falsehoods and mislead the innocent people of Himachal." Targeting the Sukhu-led Government for its incompetence, he claimed that the Centre has sent over ₹2,000 crore as special assistance and approved ₹1,442 crore under JICA funding, but the Congress Government utilised only about 50 per cent of the funds in several schemes. Taking a jibe at the Congress, Nadda said that Himachal's treasury is frequently shut, the entire administration runs on ad-hoc arrangements with the chief secretary and director general of police working on additional charge and there is no coordination between the chief minister and his ministers. The Congress Government has not brought even a single concrete project to the Centre, he said, and called upon BJP workers to take these facts and truths to every village and town, so that the "people of Himachal can free themselves from Congress misrule" and move decisively towards development and good governance. Nadda alleged that "earlier the Government used to come to power with the support of all but used to be limited to a particular caste, segment and religion, but 11 years back Prime Minister Narendra Modi changed the political scenario of the country by becoming the 'Pradhan Sevak' of the nation and moved from Rajpath to Kartavya Path." He said the "BJP Government is a performance (report-card) based government, what it promised, it delivered and in contrast, the UPA politics revolved around casteism, appeasement and nepotism, while BJP politics is rooted in accountability and good governance." State BJP president Rajiv Bindal said that Congress was reduced to only six seats in Bihar, which is proof of its declining credibility and claimed that the same situation will prevail in the upcoming 2027 Himachal Pradesh assembly elections, where the Congress will not even reach double digits and will be reduced to only two seats.

Jointness, self reliance, innovation key to combat power: CDS

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE
■ Hyderabad

General Anil Chauhan on Saturday said the country's future combat power would be driven by the three pillars — jointness, Atmanirbharta and Innovation (JAI), what the Chief of Defence Staff (CDS) described as JAI. General Chauhan, who reviewed the Combined Graduation Parade (CGP) at the Air Force Academy at Dundigal near here, without referring to any country, said developments that indicate institutional fragility and reactive adjustments are often seen around us. "Wars cannot (be) won by rhetoric, but by purposeful action. Around us, we often witness developments that signal institutional fragility and reactive adjustments. In contrast, India's strength rests on the robust institutions, democratic stability and unwavering professionalism of our armed forces," he said. The CDS told the newly commissioned officers that strength, he said. The journey ahead of the newly commissioned officers will be guided by JAI, the first word of Jai Hind, he said. Jointness signifies fighting as one nation and one force and Atmanirbharta indicate trusted platforms and systems made not just for India but for the world. Innovation signifies daring to think ahead and to be ahead of the curve, he said. "These three pillars will shape India's future of combat power," he said. The intensity of operations may have ebbed, but Operation Sindoor continues, he said. "You (new officers) also join the Air Force at a moment when a new normal has firmly taken shape. An era defined by a high degree of operational preparedness, 24-7, 365 days. The intensity of operations may have ebbed, but Operation Sindoor continues," he said. Asserting that war and warfare are at the cusp of a major revolution, General Chauhan said the Defence forces are committed to adapt to changing environment and imbuing reforms to remain ready and relevant. He further said battles in the older domains will always remain contested, often brutal. But in the new domains, they will be smart, swift, and shaped by intellect, innovation, and initiative. The force that masters new frontiers is more likely to prevail in future conflicts. General Chauhan reviewed the Combined Graduation Parade of 216 Course.

ED finds ISIS module linked to Khair wood smuggling in Maharashtra

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE
■ New Delhi

An alleged ISIS module operating from Maharashtra's Padgha village in Thane district was involved in the illegal cutting and smuggling of Khair wood from the local reserve forests, an ED probe into a terror financing-linked money laundering case has found. The federal probe agency conducted searches in the twin villages of Borivali-Padgha on December 11, apart from locations in Delhi, Kolkata, Hazaribagh (Jharkhand) and Prayagraj (Uttar Pradesh), among others. The money laundering probe stems from a November 2023 case filed by the National Investigation Agency (NIA) against a "highly radicalised" module of the banned global terrorist outfit ISIS, based in Padgha, and its late self-proclaimed leader in India, Saquib Nachan. The agency said in a statement on Saturday that it seized ₹3.70 crore in cash apart from gold jewellery and bullion worth ₹6 crore during the raids. A financial analysis, as per the Enforcement Directorate (ED), found that "various individuals linked with the Borivali-Padgha ISIS module were involved in illegal cutting and smuggling of Kaith trees from the reserve forest areas of the said area". The wood of Acacia catechu, locally known as Khair, is used to extract Kattha (catechu) that is widely used in 'paan' and as an ingredient in Ayurvedic medicines. The ED said the searches covered various companies and entities linked with the production of Kattha that were procuring the wood from suspects. Some wood that was recovered during the Thursday searches was handed over to the forest department by the ED. The NIA had alleged that the Padgha module was engaged in recruitment, training, procurement of weapons and explosives, and raising funds to sustain their operations. It has named 21 people in the chargesheet in the case on charges of conspiracy to recruit and radicalise vulnerable youth into the ISIS ideology and fabrication of improvised explosive devices (IEDs). According to the NIA, the accused had self-declared the Padgha village in rural Thane as a "liberated zone" named 'Al Sham', and they were motivating impressionable Muslim youth to relocate to Padgha from their place of residence to strengthen their base.

J&K Govt again skips Sheikh Abdullah, Martyrs' Day holidays

For the second consecutive year, an elected Government headed by Omar Abdullah in Jammu and Kashmir has failed to fulfill its poll promise of restoring public holidays on the occasion of the birth anniversary of Sheikh Mohammad Abdullah on December 5, and Martyrs' Day on July 13. On Saturday, when the Union Territory administration issued the holiday calendar, both these public holidays were once again found missing in the list of holidays for 2026. For the first time, the two-

State holidays on July 13 and December 5 were deleted from the list of public holidays by the LG administration on December 28, 2019, after the Abrogation of Articles 2019 and 35-A. The restoration of these two holidays was included in its election manifesto by the National Conference during the Assembly polls. After forming the government, many leaders and legislators, including the party's general secretary, had passionately appealed to the LG to declare December 5, 2024 as a public holiday, but in vain.

CJI seeks unified judicial policy, tech for courts

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
■ Jaisalmer

Pushing for a “unified judicial policy”, Chief Justice of India Surya Kant on Saturday said technology can help align standards and practices across courts, creating a “seamless experience” for citizens, regardless of their location.

He said high courts — due to the federal structure — have had their own practices and technological capacities, and “regional barriers” can be broken down with technology to create a more unified judicial ecosystem.

Delivering the keynote address at the West Zone Regional Conference in Jaisalmer, Kant proposed the idea of a “national judicial ecosystem” and called for an overhaul of India's judicial system with the integration of technology.

“Today, as technology reduces geographical barriers and enables convergence, it invites us to think of justice not as regional systems operating in parallel,

Chennai dams full: 27-year record broken after monsoon and cyclone

■ Chennai

For the first time in nearly 27 years, water in three chief dams supplying drinking water to Chennai have reached their full reservoir level. Three other dams, too, are brimming with water as their levels have reached the maximum level, thanks to the northeast monsoon and cyclone Ditwah. The combined storage of water in all six dams accounted for a total 12,273.40 mcf (million cubic feet), which is 92.83 per cent, on December 12, as against a storage of 10,068.42 mcf of water during the corresponding period last year.

Poondi and Puzhal dams have 100 per cent storage, while Chembarambakkam has 99.37 per cent water. As per the data available with the Chennai Metropolitan Water Supply and Sewerage Board, levels of water in Poondi and Puzhal reservoirs have reached the FRL of 140 feet (3,221 mcf storage) and 50.20 feet (3,300 mcf storage), respectively.

The Chembarambakkam with a full tank level of 85.31 feet (3,645 mcf storage), currently has 3,622 mcf of water. All three reservoirs continue to receive inflows from the catchment areas.

“The water levels reached the maximum level due to cyclone Ditwah that triggered intense rainfall in Chennai and neighb ouring districts during the northeast monsoon,” officials said.

Cholavaram dam (65.50 feet height), Kannankottai Theruvu Kandigai (115.35 feet), and Veeranam (47.50 feet) have water up to 59.22 feet, 114.33 feet, and 46.10 feet, respectively.

In 2015, when the city and suburbs reeled under massive floods, the water level at Poondi dam stood at 139.26 feet, which was 98.91 per cent of the storage (i.E 2,905 mcf), Puzhal stood at 48.60 feet - 88.85 per cent (2,932 mcf), and Chembarambakkam stood at 83.05 feet with 83.07 per cent storage (3,028 mcf).

The CJI called for implementing a “unified judicial policy”.

He said India's judicial system has long been shaped by its federal structure, and different high courts have their own practices and technological capacities.

“India's vast diversity has led to different high courts evolving their own practices, administrative priorities and technological capacities. This variation, though natural in a federal democracy, has resulted in uneven experiences for litigants across the country,” he said.

Kant underscored that predictability is crucial for building trust in the judicial system.

“A core expectation citizens place upon the courts is predictability,” he said, adding that citizens should not only expect fair treatment but also consistency in how cases are handled across the country.

He pointed to the potential of technology in improving predictability.

“Technology enables us to

The energy peaked when the crowd passionately requested the chart-topping song “Bulleya” from the movie Sultan. Papon answered with an intriguing performance, doing full justice to the audience's excitement.

Accompanied by a talented team of musicians, including a skilled guitarist, flute player and percussionists, Papon's ensemble delivered flawless musical synergy,

India in talks with Mexico on high tariffs; reserves right to act to protect exporters

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE

India is engaged with Mexico over the South American nation's decision to unilaterally raise tariffs on a number of products to find mutually beneficial solutions, even as New Delhi reserves the right to take appropriate measures to safeguard the interests of its exporters, an official said on Saturday.

These duties are announced against countries that do not have free trade agreements with Mexico, including India, China, South Korea, Thailand and Indonesia. The official said that India, in fact, was engaged with Mexico during the initial tabling of a bill in this regard. The Embassy of India in Mexico raised the issue with the Ministry of Economy on September 30, 2025, itself, seeking special concessions to shield Indian exports from the new tariffs.

“India values its partnership with Mexico and stands ready to work collaboratively toward a stable and balanced trade environment that benefits businesses and consumers in both countries,”

UNESCO meet at Delhi’s Red Fort concludes; 67 new elements added to ICH lists

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
■ New Delhi

A key UNESCO meet on safeguarding intangible cultural heritage (ICH) being held at Delhi's Red Fort ends on Saturday, with the panel adding 67 new living heritage elements from various countries during the nearly week-long session.

The next session of the Inter Governmental Committee (IGC) for the Safeguarding of the Intangible Cultural Heritage will be hosted in December 2026 in China's Xiamen city, a senior official of UNESCO said on Friday.

The closing ceremony was hosted in the evening by India at the temporary pavilion, Plenary Hall, at the fort complex, as delegates will head out for sightseeing on Saturday after days of intense discussion.

The session was held for the first time in India with the Red Fort, a UNESCO World Heritage Site, as its venue. Fumiko Ohinata, Secretary, UNESCO 2003 Convention for the Safeguarding of the Intangible Cultural Heritage, in her address at the ceremony, described the Mughal-era fort complex as a “magnificent backdrop” for the meeting.

The Mughal-era monument is famous for its massive fortified walls. “We enjoyed all India moments,” Ohinata said.

Later, interacting with PTI, she said the next session of the IGC will be held in China.

Sixty-seven cultural elements, including India's Deepavali, Iran's art of mirror-work in Persian architecture, the UAE's traditional art form that blends performing arts with oral tradition and Switzerland's yodeling, have been added to UNESCO's various intangible heritage lists over the period of December 9-11.

Nominations were sent by nearly 80 countries.

In a Statement, UNESCO said over the course of the week, the 24 member States of the committee examined 67 living heritage elements, including, 11 elements inscribed on the List of Intangible Cultural Heritage in Need of Urgent Safeguarding; 53 elements inscribed on the Representative List of the Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity; and their corresponding safeguarding programmes have been added to the Register of Good Safeguarding Practices.

With this year's inscriptions, 849 cultural practices in 157 countries are now part of UNESCO's living heritage lists, UNESCO said.

“Fragile yet essential, living heritage remains a pillar of cultural diversity in a world that can at times feel fragmented and divided. Living, creative, and carried harm, the system must respond with urgency,” he Stated, explaining that technology can help courts identify and expedite such cases. Kant also raised the issue of the clarity of judicial decisions.

He noted that many litigants, despite winning cases, often struggle to understand the terms of their judgment due to complex legal language.

“Although the orders had gone in their favour, they remained unsure of what relief they had actually secured because the language was too technical, vague or evasive to understand,” he said.

He advocated for more uniformity in how judgments are written. “A unified judicial approach must therefore extend to how we communicate outcomes,” he said.

The CJI also discussed the role of AI and digital tools in improving case management. He pointed to the potential of AI-based research assistants and digital case management creating an unforgettable experience.

As the evening drew to a close, Papon and his band members were felicitated with mementos and warm appreciation from Indian Railways CEO Satish Kumar and the entire IRFC team led by CMD Manoj Kumar Dubey, recognising their remarkable contribution to the celebration.

The event was more than a musical performance, it was a celebration of talent, emotion and the enduring power of music to bring people together. The 40th foundation day of IRFC will be remembered not only for its milestone but also for the magical night when Papon's voice transformed the evening into a heartfelt musical journey.

both the countries are looking to start negotiations for a free trade agreement, and terms of reference (ToR) to initiate the talks formally are expected to be finalised soon. Experts said that the trade agreement will help insulate Indian companies from these tariffs, which were imposed under pressure from the US to align with America on increasing tariffs against China and prevent transshipment to America. Mexico's Senate has approved a new tariff measure on December 11, 2025, and it has since been cleared by both chambers of Congress. It is aimed at boosting manufacturing and reducing trade imbalances.

Under the decision, Mexico will impose steep import tariffs - ranging from about 5 per cent to as high as 50 per cent on a wide range of goods (about 1,463 tariff lines) from countries that do not have free trade agreements with Mexico, including India, China, South Korea, Thailand and Indonesia.

However, the list of items covered is yet to be officially notified. The higher duties will take effect on January 1, 2026. “The Department of Commerce is engaged with Mexico's Ministry of Economy to explore mutually beneficial solutions which align with global trade rules,” the official said. A high-level meeting in this regard between Commerce Secretary Rajesh Agrawal and Mexico's Vice Minister of Economy Luis Rosendo has already taken place and follow on technical meetings are expected soon.

“India reserves the right to take appropriate measures to safeguard the interests of Indian exporters, while continuing to pursue a solution through constructive dialogue,” the official added.

The Government official further said that the actual impact on Indian exports will depend on the criticality of Indian exports to domestic supply chains in Mexico and ability of Indian companies to secure exemptions or pass on the tariff cost to the Mexican consumers.

India believes that unilateral increases in MFN (most favoured nation) tariffs, without prior consultations, do not align with the spirit of our cooperative economic engagement or with the principles of predictability and transparency underpinning the multilateral trading system.

The official also said that the Government is currently examining the details and implications of Mexico's tariff revisions and remains engaged with all stakeholders to monitor the evolving situation. Federation of Indian Export Organisations (FIEO) Director General Ajay Sahai said that Mexico's decision is a matter of concern, particularly for sectors like automobiles and auto components, machinery, electrical and electronics, organic chemicals, pharmaceuticals, textiles and plastics. “Such steep duties will erode our competitiveness and risk disrupting supply chains that have taken years to develop,” Sahai said, adding that this development also underlines the little urgency for India and Mexico to fast-track a comprehensive trade agreement. Domestic auto component manufacturers will face enhanced cost pressures with Mexico hiking duties on Indian imports, according to industry body ACMA.

Ex-leader jailed for corruption

A Bolivian court on Friday ordered the country's former President Luis Arce to remain detained for five months while he awaits trial on corruption charges, the latest development in a case that threatens to exacerbate Bolivia's political tensions. Arce, 62, a leader from Bolivia's Movement Toward Socialism party, was elected in 2020 and left office a month ago following the election of Bolivia's first right-wing leader in nearly two decades. He strongly denies the charges of breach of duty and financial misconduct. He faces up to six years in prison if convicted. Two days after Arce's sudden arrest on the streets of Bolivia's capital of La Paz, a judge ordered his detention in a virtual hearing Friday. Arce was transferred to one of Bolivia's largest prisons in La Paz at night.

Clintons face contempt threat

The Republican chair of the House Oversight Committee on Friday threatened to begin contempt of Congress proceedings against former President Bill Clinton and Hillary Clinton if they refuse to appear for depositions as part of the committee's investigation into Jeffrey Epstein. James Comer, a Kentucky Republican, said that the Clintons had "delayed, obstructed, and largely ignored the Committee staff's efforts to schedule their testimony" for several months and said the committee would begin proceedings to try to force them to testify if they do not appear next week or schedule an appearance in January. Comer's statement came just hours after Democrats on the committee had released dozens of photos they had received from Epstein's estate, including images of Clinton and President Donald Trump.

Fighting rages on Thai-Cambodian border

Fighting continued to rage on Saturday morning along the border of Thailand and Cambodia, even after US President Donald Trump, acting as a mediator, declared that he had won agreement from both countries for a ceasefire.

Thai officials have said they did not agree to a ceasefire, and Cambodia has not commented on Trump's claim. Its defence ministry instead said Thai jets carried out airstrikes Saturday morning. Cambodian media reported Trump's claim without elaborating.

The latest large-scale fighting was set off by a skirmish on Dec. 7 that wounded two Thai soldiers and derailed a ceasefire promoted by Trump that ended five days of earlier combat in July over longstanding territorial disputes. The July ceasefire was brokered by Malaysia and pushed through by pressure from Trump, who threatened to withhold trade privileges unless Thailand and Cambodia agreed. It was formalised in more detail in October at a regional meeting in Malaysia that Trump attended.

About two dozen people have officially been reported killed in this past week's fighting, while hundreds of thousands have been displaced on both sides of the border. The Thai military acknowledges 11 of its troops have been killed, while estimating there have been 165 fatalities among Cambodian soldiers. Cambodia has not announced military casualties, but has said at least 11 civilians have been killed and 76 wounded.

Trump, on Friday, after speaking to Thai Prime Minister Anutin Charnvirakul and Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Manet, announced an agreement to restart the ceasefire.

"They have agreed to CEASE all shooting effective this evening, and go back to the original Peace Accord made with me, and them, with the help of the Great Prime Minister of Malaysia, Anwar Ibrahim," Trump said in his Truth Social post.

Trump's claim came after midnight in Bangkok. Thai Prime Minister Anutin had, after his call with Trump, said he had explained Thailand's reasons for fighting and said peace would depend on Cambodia ceasing its attacks first.

The Thai foreign ministry later explicitly disputed Trump's claim that a ceasefire had been reached. Anutin's busy day on Friday included dissolving Parliament, so new elections could be held early next year. Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Manet, in comments posted early Saturday morning, also made no mention of a ceasefire.

He said he held phone conversations on Friday night with Trump, and a night earlier with Malaysia's Prime Minister Anwar Ibrahim, and thanked both "for their continuous efforts to achieve a long-lasting peace between Cambodia and Thailand." "Cambodia is ready to cooperate in any way that is needed," Hun Manet wrote. Thailand has been carrying out airstrikes on what it says are strictly military targets, while Cambodia has been firing thousands of medium-range BM-21 rockets that have caused havoc but relatively few casualties.

BM-21 rocket launchers can fire up to 40 rockets at a time with a range of 30-40 kilometres (19-25 miles). These rockets cannot be precisely targeted and have landed largely in areas from which most people have already been evacuated.

However, the Thai army announced Saturday that BM-21 rockets had hit a civilian area in Sisaket province, seriously injuring two civilians who had heard warning sirens and had been running toward a bunker for safety.

Fire breaks out in 12-storey building in Dhaka

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

A massive fire broke out early on Saturday on the ground floor of a 12-storey mixed-use building in a market in Bangladesh's capital city, officials said.

However, no casualties were reported in the blaze at Jabal E Nur Tower, and fire service officials rescued at least 42 people from the building, the State-run BSS news agency reported.

The incident marks the second major fire in a multi-storey building in Dhaka in two months. On October 14, a massive blaze ripped through a chemical warehouse and an adjacent garments factory in the capital, killing at least 16 people.

According to news portal tbsnews.Net, the Fire Service and Civil Defence received information about the blaze at 5:37 am local time and fire-fighting units reached the scene at around 5:45 am.

Fire service media officer Anwarul Islam said 18 fire-fighting units were deployed to bring the blaze under control. Border Guard Bangladesh (BGB) personnel were also deployed at the site to assist in maintaining law and order, controlling crowds and ensuring the smooth movement of emergency responders, BGB public relations officer Shariful Islam said.

Senior Staff Officer (Media Cell) of the Fire Service, Md Shahjahan Shikdar, said the fire-hit structure consists of several separate buildings sharing a single basement.

The ground and first floors house a market with garment product shops and small scrap warehouses, while the upper floors contain residential apartments. The basement has only two entry points, he said. Firefighters were forced to cut open the locks and shutters of most shops to douse the flames, which slowed down the operation.

The cause of the fire could not be determined immediately. Locals and business owners said scrap clothes stored in the basement may have fuelled the blaze, but officials said the origin of the fire was yet to be ascertained. The Daily Star newspaper reported.

Bangladesh has a history of industrial disasters. Past industrial tragedies have often been attributed to safety lapses.

Gaza amputees struggle to rebuild lives

Sitting in her wheelchair, Haneen al-Mabhohh dreams of rebuilding her family, of cradling a new baby. She dreams of walking again. But with her leg gone, her life in Gaza is on hold, she says, as she waits to go abroad for further treatment.

An Israeli airstrike in July 2024 smashed her home in central Gaza as she and her family slept. All four of her daughters were killed, including her 5-month-old baby. Her husband was severely burned. Al-Mabhohh's legs were crushed under the rubble, and doctors had to amputate her right leg above the knee.

"For the past year and a half, I have been unable to move around, to live like others. For the past year and a half, I have been without children," she said, speaking at her parents' home. The 2-month-old ceasefire in Gaza has been slow to bring help for thousands of Palestinians who suffered amputations from Israeli bombardment over the past two years. The World Health Organisation estimates there are some 5,000 to 6,000 amputees from the war, 25 per cent of them children.

Those who lost limbs are struggling to adapt, faced with a shortage of prosthetic limbs and long delays in medical evacuations out of Gaza. The WHO said a shipment of essential prosthetic supplies recently made it into Gaza. That appears to be the first significant shipment for the past two years.

Previously, Israel had let in almost no ready-made prosthetic limbs or material to manufacture limbs since the war began, according to Loay Abu Saif, the head of the disability program at Medical Aid for Palestinians, or MAP, and Nevin Al Gussein, acting director of the Artificial Limbs and Polio Center in Gaza City.

The Israeli military body in charge of coordinating aid, known as COGAT, did not respond when asked how many prosthetic supplies had entered during the war or about its policies on such supplies.

Al-Mabhohh was asleep with her baby girl in her arms when the strike hit their home in Nuseirat, she said. For several weeks while recovering in the hospital, al-Mabhohh had no idea her children had been killed.

Ready to deal with external and internal threats, says Asim Munir

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

Chief of Defence Forces and Chief of Army Staff Field Marshal Asim Munir on Saturday said his forces were ready to deal with the threats posed by the external and international elements.

Munir visited Gujranwala and Sialkot garrisons, where he was briefed on the formation's operational readiness and key initiatives for strengthening combat preparedness, according to a statement by the army. "Pakistan Army remains fully focused on both internal and external challenges, including hostile hybrid campaigns, extremist ideologies, and divisive elements seeking to undermine national stability," he emphasised on the occasion. India launched Operation Sindoor on May 7, targeting terror infrastructure in Pakistan and Pakistan-occupied Kashmir in retaliation for the Pahalgaon attack that killed 26 civilians.

The strikes triggered four days of intense clashes that ended with an understanding on stopping the military actions. In an internal challenge, the government last year notified the banned

Tehreek-e-Taliban Pakistan as "Fitna al-Khawarij", a reference to a group in earlier Islamic history which was involved in violence.

While interacting with officers and soldiers, Munir lauded their high morale to national security while underscoring the importance of rigorous and mission-oriented training.

UN-sanctioned migrant smuggler killed in Libya

A notorious militia leader in Libya, sanctioned by the UN for migrant trafficking across the Mediterranean Sea, was killed on Friday in a raid by security forces in the west of the country, according to Libyan authorities. Ahmed Oumar al-Fitouri al-Dabbashi was killed in Sabratha. The raid came in response to an attack on a security outpost by al-Dabbashi's militia, which left six members of the security forces severely wounded, according to a statement issued by the Security Threat Enforcement Agency, a security entity affiliated with Libya's western government. Al-Dabbashi, who was also sanctioned by the US Treasury for trafficking, was the leader of a powerful militia, the "Brigade of the Martyr Anas al-Dabbashi," in Sabratha, the biggest launching point in Libya for Europe-bound African migrants.

South Africa eases regulations on Starlink

South Africa's communications minister ordered a policy change on Friday that allows Elon Musk's Starlink and other foreign-owned satellite internet providers to operate in the country without selling 30 per cent of their local equity to Black or other non-white owners. The policy change published in a Government gazette allows foreign companies seeking licences to operate in South Africa's communications sector. That option is also available for foreign-owned companies in other sectors in South Africa. Musk, who was born in South Africa, accused his home country of having "openly racist ownership laws" by requiring at least 30 per cent local ownership by Black or other races that were denied opportunities under South Africa's apartheid system of white minority rule.

19 US States challenge Trump’s $100,000 H-1B fee

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
■ New York/Washington

Nineteen US states have sued the Trump administration over its “unlawful” decision to impose a $100,000 fee on new H-1B visa petitions, warning that the move will worsen labour shortages in key sectors such as health care, education and technology. New York Attorney General Letitia James, along with 18 other attorneys general, on Friday filed the lawsuit in the US District Court for the District of Massachusetts, challenging what they termed a “massive” increase in H-1B fees without legal authority or due process.

The H-1B visa programme allows highly skilled foreign professionals to work temporarily in the US and is widely used by Indian nationals. The coalition argued that the new fee would make the programme effectively inaccessible for Government and non-profit employers that depend on H-1B workers to provide essential services in health care, education, technology, and other fields.

“H-1B visas allow talented doctors, nurses, teachers, and other workers to serve communities in need across our country. “The administration’s illegal attempt to ruin this programme will make it harder for New Yorkers to get health care, disrupt our children’s education, and hurt our economy. I will keep fighting to stop this chaos and cruelty targeting immigrant communities,” James said in a statement.

In September, US President Donald Trump announced that his administration would levy a one-time USD 100,000 fee on all new H-1B applications, which the attorneys general described as a “sudden” and “massive” increase over existing charges. The attorneys general contended that the imposition of the new fee is “unlawful” and the move violates the Administrative Procedure Act as well as the Immigration and Nationality Act, as it was imposed without congressional approval or the required rule-making process.

Joining James in the lawsuit are the attorneys general of Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Illinois, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, North Carolina, New Jersey, Oregon, Rhode Island, Vermont, Washington, and Wisconsin. The coalition said the new fee on H-1B visas will severely restrict states’ ability to hire new workers under the programme to address labour shortages, disrupting access to education, health care, and other critical services. This shortage of workers would be devastating for rural and underserved communities already facing shrinking workforces, it warned. In New York alone, more than a third of health care workers are immigrants, while public universities and hospitals rely heavily on H-1B professionals, according to the lawsuit. In New York’s 16 rural counties, there are currently four primary care physicians for every 10,000 people. New York’s hospitals already face a pervasive nursing shortage estimated to reach 40,000 nurses by 2030. A reduction in H-1B visa holders would only exacerbate this shortage, it said.

Nationwide, the American Medical Association estimates the US will face a shortage of 86,000 physicians by 2036, a shortage that H-1B workers will be critical in filling, the lawsuit said. Across the US, at least 930 colleges and universities employ staff on H-1B visas. More than half of these institutions are public four-year universities, and more than 10 per cent are medical schools. In New York, the State University of New York (SUNY) employs 693 employees on H-1B visas, including many who serve students in rural and suburban areas of New York State.

The coalition argues that limiting access to H-1B visas will lead to more crowded classrooms for students and disrupt critical research at leading universities.

Other critical industries in New York, such as technology, finance, and the arts, also rely on H-1B visa holders to fill essential roles. Across the state, more than 13,000 people on H-1B visas work in these sectors.

California Attorney General Rob Bonta said Trump’s $100,000 H-1B visa fee creates “unnecessary” and “illegal” financial burdens on California public employers and other providers of vital services, exacerbating labour shortages in key sectors.

“The Trump administration thinks it can raise costs on a whim, but the law says otherwise. We are going to court to defend California’s residents and their access to the world-class universities, schools, and hospitals that make Californians proud to call this state home,” Bonta said. Since the 1950s, the US has had a visa programme that allows skilled workers to temporarily live in America and work in specialised fields. The current version of the H-1B programme was created in the 1990s and allows employers to hire workers in a “speciality occupation” for a maximum of six years.

UK honors Naoroji’s 200th birth anniversary

The House of Lords in London played host to a special reception in honour of the 200th birth anniversary of Dadabhai Naoroji, the nationalist leader who became the first Indian to win a popular election to the British Parliament during the colonial era. Naoroji was born in September 1825 to a Parsi family in Mumbai and first travelled to England in 1855 for business reasons before going on to become an influential figure in its political landscape. Lord Karan Bilimoria, a fellow Parsi parliamentarian, hosted Friday’s reception in honour of the life and legacy of the polymath who straddled multiple roles of a Zoroastrian priest, businessman, academic and politician. “In many ways, I have followed in the footsteps of Dadabhai Naoroji, who came initially for business to the UK,” said Bilimoria, founder of Cobra Beer. “He was also an academic as a professor at Elphinstone College and, of course, he was a politician – the first Indian, first ethnic minority ever to be elected to this Parliament,” he noted. Bilimoria revealed that the bicentenary commemoration was initially planned for September, to coincide with the month of Dadabhai Naoroji’s birth 200 years ago, but had to be postponed due to strike action. “But we were adamant in making sure that this event would take place during the year of his 200th birth anniversary, and here we are,” he added. The Indian High Commissioner to the UK, Vikram Doraiswami, reflected upon the legacy of Naoroji and the impact of the Parsi community in the political and social life of India.

Bulgaria’s president will start talks on new cabinet

ASSOCIATED PRESS ■ Sofia

Bulgaria’s president will start consultations with parliamentary groups next week on forming a new cabinet following the collapse of the Government in nationwide anti-corruption protests. Rosen Zhelyazkov’s minority Government had survived six no-confidence votes since it was appointed in January, only to be toppled in the street protests on Thursday by tens of thousands. President Rumen Radev is set to invite the biggest group in parliament for talks on forming a Government. If that fails, the second-largest grouping will get its chance before the president chooses a candidate. If all attempts fail – which is likely – he will appoint a caretaker cabinet until a new election is held in two months. Analysts expect another election – the eighth since 2021 – would likely produce a deeply fragmented parliament and more political instability as Bulgaria readies to join the common European currency on January 1. Fears of inflation, reportedly fuelled by a disinformation campaign by Moscow, have dampen enthusiasm for the euro. Bulgaria joined the European Union in 2007. In a last-moment effort to block the country’s path to the euro, the pro-Russian Vazrazhdane party submitted in parliament a draft resolution requesting a one-year postponement of Bulgaria’s entry into the eurozone, citing the absence of a new budget and political instability.

Three US lawmakers introduce resolution to end 50% tariffs imposed by Trump on India

Three influential US lawmakers have introduced a resolution in Congress aimed at ending the tariffs imposed by President Donald Trump on India, saying the “irresponsible tariff strategy” toward Delhi is a counterproductive approach that “weakens a critical partnership”.

Representatives Deborah Ross of North Carolina, Marc Veasey of Texas and Raja Krishnamoorthi of Illinois introduced the resolution on Friday in the House of Representatives to terminate Trump’s national emergency authorising tariffs of up to 50 per cent on imports from India, helping to restore Congress’ constitutional authority over trade.

the national emergency that Trump invoked to impose sweeping tariffs on Indian goods under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (IEEPA) and rescind the additional 25 per cent “secondary” duties that took effect on August 27 on top of earlier reciprocal tariffs. Together, these measures raised duties on many Indian-origin products to 50 per cent, a statement issued by Ross said.

Krishnamoorthi said that Trump’s “irresponsible tariff strategy toward India is a counterproductive approach that weakens a critical partnership.” “Instead of advancing American interests or security, these duties disrupt supply chains, harm

American workers, and drive up costs for consumers. Ending these damaging tariffs will allow the United States to engage with India to advance our shared economic and security needs,” the Indian-American lawmaker said. The resolution follows a bipartisan Senate-passed measure to end Trump’s Brazil tariffs and rein in his abuse of emergency powers to raise duties on imports, the statement said. “North Carolina’s economy is deeply connected to India through trade, investment, and a vibrant Indian-American community,” Ross added.

She said that Indian companies have invested over a billion dollars and created thousands of good-paying jobs in our state – especially in the Research Triangle’s life sciences and technology sectors. North Carolina manufacturers export hundreds of millions of dollars in goods to India each year.

UN chief visits Iraq

■ Baghdad

United Nations Secretary-General Antonio Guterres was in Baghdad on Saturday to mark the end of the political mission set up in 2003 following the US-led invasion of Iraq that toppled Saddam Hussein.

The UN Security Council, at Iraq’s request, voted last year to wind down the mandate of the United Nations Assistance Mission in Iraq (UNAMI) by the end of 2025. The mission was set up to coordinate post-conflict humanitarian and reconstruction efforts and help restore a representative Government in the country. Iraqi caretaker Prime Minister Mohammed Shia al-Sudani said his country “highly values” the mission’s work in a region “that has suffered for decades from dictatorship, wars, and terrorism.” He said its conclusion showed Iraq had reached a stage of “full self-reliance.”

“Iraq emerged victorious thanks to the sacrifices and courage of its people,” he said in a joint statement with Guterres.

The ending of UNAMI’s mandate “does not signify the end of the partnership between Iraq and the UN,” Sudani said, adding that it represents the beginning of a new chapter of cooperation focused on development and inclusive economic growth.

The prime minister said a street in Baghdad would be named “United Nations Street” in honour of the UN’s work and in recognition of 22 UN staff who were killed in an Aug. 19, 2003, truck bomb attack on the Canal Hotel in Baghdad, which housed the UN headquarters.

Guterres praised “the courage, fortitude and determination of the Iraqi people” and the country’s efforts to restore security and order after years of sectarian violence and the rise of extremist groups, including the Islamic State group.

Bangladesh Govt orders security clampdown

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

Chief Adviser Muhammad Yunus-led interim Government on Saturday ordered a nationwide security clampdown as fresh unrest gripped Bangladesh following the shooting of a youth leader of a right-wing cultural group, also a candidate in the February 12 general elections.

“The Government is going to start the second phase of Operation Devil Hunt to help ensure public safety and combat the growing threat of illegal arms,” Home Affairs adviser Lt Gen (rtd) Jahangir

Alam Chowdhury told a press conference. The announcement came after three assailants shot Inquilab Mancha leader Sharif Osmann Hadi on Friday, as he initiated his election campaign at central Dhaka’s Bijoynagar area – from where he is contesting as an independent candidate. According to doctors, his condition is very critical. Chowdhury announced a reward of Taka 50 lakh for information leading to the arrest of one of the suspects who shot Hadi, while police issued his picture, identifying him as Faisal Karim Masud.

The interim Government first launched the Operation Devil hunt in February this year, following protests over an attack on the private house of a former minister in the northern suburb of the capital.

Belarus releases Nobel prize laureate in exchange for US sanctions relief

ASSOCIATED PRESS ■ Vilnius

Belarusian authorities have released Nobel Peace Prize laureate Ales Bialiatski and key opposition figure Maria Kolesnikova from prison, Pavel Sapelka, human rights advocate with the Viasna rights group.

Their release comes as authoritarian President Alexander Lukashenko seeks to improve relations with Washington. The US earlier on Saturday announced lifting sanctions on the country’s potash sector. In exchange for sanctions relief, Lukashenko pardoned 123 prisoners, the Belta State news agency reported.

A close ally of Russia, Minsk has faced Western isolation and sanctions for years.

Lukashenko has ruled the nation of 9.5 million with an iron fist for more than three decades, and the country has been repeatedly sanctioned by Western countries both for its crackdown on human rights and for allowing Moscow to use its territory in the invasion of Ukraine in 2022. Belarus has released hundreds of prisoners since July 2024.

Earlier Saturday, the United States said it was lifting sanctions on Belarusian potash in the latest sign of a thaw between Washington and the isolated autocracy.

John Coale, the US special envoy for Belarus, made the announcement after meeting Lukashenko in Minsk on Friday and Saturday.

Speaking with journalists, Coale described the two-day talks as “very productive,” Belarus’ state news agency Belta reported Saturday.

The US envoy said that normalising relations between Washington and Minsk was “our goal.”

“We’re lifting sanctions, releasing prisoners. We’re constantly talking to each other,”

he said, according to Belta. He also said that the relationship between the countries was moving from “baby steps to more confident steps” as they increased dialogue.

The last time US officials met with Lukashenko in September 2025, Washington announced easing some of the sanctions against Belarus while Minsk released more than 50 political prisoners into Lithuania.

Overall, Belarus released more than 430 political prisoners since July 2024, in what was widely seen as an effort at an rapprochement with the West. Belarusian opposition leader Sviatlana Tsikhanouskaya —

Bialiatski’s wife — told The Associated Press on Saturday that sanctions relief was part of a deal between Minsk and Washington, in which another large group of political prisoners in Belarus were expected to be released.

“The freeing of political prisoners means that Lukashenko understands the pain of Western sanctions and is seeking to ease them,” Tsikhanouskaya said. She added: “But let’s not be naive: Lukashenko hasn’t changed his policies, his crackdown continues, and he keeps on supporting Russia’s war against Ukraine.”

Iran raises gasoline prices after deadly 2019 protests

ASSOCIATED PRESS ■ Tehran

Iran introduced a new pricing tier on Saturday for its nationally subsidised gasoline, attempting to rein in spiralling costs for the first time since a price hike in 2019 that sparked nationwide protests and a crackdown that reportedly killed over 300 people. Cheap gasoline has been viewed for generations as a birthright in Iran, sparking mass demonstrations as far back as 1964 when a price increase forced the shah to put military vehicles on the streets to replace those of striking taxi drivers. But Iran’s theocracy faces a growing squeeze from the country’s rapidly depreciating rial currency and economic sanctions imposed due to Tehran’s nuclear program. That has made the cost of having some of the world’s cheapest gasoline at a few pennies per gallon that much more expensive.

US removes Brazilian SC justice from sanctions list

The US removed Brazilian Supreme Court Justice Alexandre de Moraes from its sanctions list after initially adding him over his role in leading the trial against former Brazilian President Jair Bolsonaro De Moraes’ wife and the Lex Institute, which she leads, were also taken off the list, according to documents from the Treasury Office of Foreign Assets Control. The Treasury Department did not immediately return a message seeking comment on why de Moraes had been taken off the list. The Trump administration had sanctioned the judge in July, accusing him of using his position to authorize arbitrary pretrial detentions and suppress freedom of expression in Brazil. Bolsonaro was accused of masterminding a plot to stay in power despite his 2022 election defeat to current President Luiz Inácio Lula.

Gill to face three-game Test to secure T20I future

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
■ Dharamsala

The countdown to save his place in the playing XI begins for a beleaguered Shubman Gill, who is likely to get three matches against South Africa to prove his worth before the Indian team management switches to a 'Plan B' ahead of the T20 World Cup, starting in six weeks.

As India gear up to play the third T20I against the Proteas on Sunday in sub-10-degree temperatures in the lap of the ice-clad Dhauladhar range, things are suddenly heating up in the Indian dressing room, with the prolonged poor form of skipper Suryakumar Yadav coming under the scanner.

Worse, his deputy Shubman Gill, who was pushed into the XI at the expense of a settled Sanju Samson, is not inspiring much confidence.

The South African pace attack featuring Anrich Nortje, Marco Jansen, Lungi Ngidi, Ottniel Baartman and Lutho Sipamla — has shown how to bowl on Indian tracks, and the HPCA Stadium strip, offering extra bounce and some movement off the surface, will certainly keep them interested.

Among all T20 sides, South Africa, in terms of personnel, appears to have the requisite balance to win the trophy in the Indian subcontinent this time. Quinton de Kock's return, along with the likes of

India's Shubman Gill, Jitesh Sharma and Abhishek Sharma during a training session ahead of the third T20I cricket match between India and South Africa at HPCA Stadium in Dharamshala, Himachal Pradesh

Aiden Markram, Dewald Brevis, Donovan Ferreira, David Miller and all-rounder Jansen, gives their batting an intimidating look.

With only eight games, starting from the third T20I, left before the start of the T20 World Cup title defence, India's under-fire head coach Gautam Gambhir won't be able to afford, two out-of-form top-order batters in the starting line-up.

Being the skipper of the side, Surya will certainly have immunity going into the T20 World Cup despite being completely out of form for the past one year but same can't be said about Gill, who wasn't the original choice as an opener.

Gill's entry into the T20 set-up was a classic case of trying to fix something that ain't broken and things haven't looked good so far. In this backdrop, Gill would need to bat out of his skin to prove that Ajit Agarkar-led committee wasn't wrong in throwing Samson under the bus for one bad series against England.

The stylish Indian Test and ODI skipper will have to find his T20 game and at least score in two of the three matches if he doesn't want Samson to get his rightful place back or for that matter, find Yashasvi Jaiswal, with a fabulous T20I strike-rate of 165, enter the fray during New Zealand series.

While head coach Gambhir is too proud a person to admit but sending Axar Patel as a one drop batter during the second T20I was a "tactical brain fade" from the team's think-tank.

The kind misstep that was taken with Axar's promotion is unlikely to be repeated in the third game where skipper is expected to go back to number 3 where he has got a lot of success in his first few years at the international level.

Similarly, Shivam Dube being sent at number eight due to the shuffling of batting order was another poor call which would need course correction in the next game.

Kuldeep Yadav is one bowler who has consistently troubled the Proteas batter but in an Indian team where batting till number 8 is non-negotiable, the left-arm wrist spinner often finds himself getting the rough end of the stick.

At Dharamsala too, he might have to sit out as Kuldeep and Varun Chakravathy, two non-batters can't be clubbed in the same T20 playing eleven as that would lead to compromise in batting depth.

While Arshdeep hasn't had a good series so far, it will be interesting to find if team management can find a place for Kuldeep in the playing eleven with Hardik Pandya sharing the new ball with Jasprit Bumrah.

The five-match series is currently tied 1-1.

Teams:

India: Suryakumar Yadav (captain), Shubman Gill, Abhishek Sharma, NT Tilak Verma, Axar Patel, Hardik Pandya, Shivam Dube, Jitesh Sharma (wk), Varun Chakravathy, Arshdeep Singh, Jasprit Bumrah, Sanju Samson (wk), Harshit Rana, Kuldeep Yadav, Washington Sundar.

South Africa: Aiden Markram (captain), Quinton de Kock, Reeza Hendricks, Dewald Brevis, David Miller, Tristan Stubbs, Donovan Ferreira, Marco Jansen, Lutho Sipamla, Ottniel Baartman, Anrich Nortje, Lungi Ngidi, Corbin Bosch, Keshav Maharaj, George Linde. Match Starts at 7 pm.

Uthappa calls out clarity issues in Indian batting

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
■ New Delhi

Former India batter Robin Uthappa has flagged a lack of role clarity in India's batting approach during a big chase, saying excessive flexibility early in the innings made run-scoring more complicated.

India suffered a 51-run loss in the second T20I against South Africa after folding for 162 in 19.1 overs while chasing a target of 214 at Mullanpur on Thursday.

Uthappa said the issue was not the loss of early wickets but the strategy adopted after Shubman Gill's dismissal, particularly with a deep batting line-up at India's disposal.

"When Shubman Gill got out, Axar Patel walked in with plenty of batting still to come. At that stage, he had to play the role of a pinch-hitter — someone you are willing to risk early to get quick runs and take pressure off Abhishek Sharma," Uthappa said on jio Hotstar.

Instead, Uthappa felt Axar's cautious run-a-ball 21 failed to ease the pressure, forcing a shift in approach as wickets fell around him and slowing the chase further.

"At the international level, batters need clear roles and a clear idea of how they're going to construct an innings," he said.

"Flexibility with match-ups after the first six to eight overs is fine, but you still need a solid foundation before you can chase a big score — you can't build a skyscraper without a base.

"Asking players to prepare for multiple roles in the same game makes run-scoring more complicated, and that's where India are missing a trick. I don't agree with being overly flexible so early in the innings beyond the openers," said the key member of the 2007 T20 World Cup winning side.

Desert Vipers cruise to easy eighth wicket victory over Gulf Giants

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
■ Dubai

Khuzaima Tanveer grabbed four wickets before Sam Curran and Max Holden stitched an unbeaten 123-run partnership as Desert Vipers registered an easy eight-wicket win over Gulf Giants for their fifth straight win in the DP World ILT20 Season 4.

Tanveer finished with 4/10 in the first innings, the best by a UAE bowler in DP World ILT20 history, and also became the first to claim four wickets in the power-play. His early attack kept the Giants on the backfoot throughout, restricting them to 157/7 in 20 overs at the Dubai International Cricket Stadium on Friday.

Then, Curran's unbeaten 67 off 43 balls with five fours and three sixes complemented Max Holden's 64 runs off 41 balls, as they chased down the target with ease.

Fakhar Zaman (14 off 8) was the first Vipers batter to fall in the second over, courtesy a beautiful ball by Chris Wood.

Holden kept the runs flowing, and other than a run out of Hasan Nawaz (7 off 9) in the fourth over, the Vipers looked in control of the run-chase. They finished the powerplay at 53/2.

Curran joined the attack in the 11th over, smashing 19 runs off left-arm spinner Liam Dawson's bowling, including three sixes, considerably reducing the required run-rate.

His power-hitting continued off Kyle Mayers' bowling, completing his half century in just 32 balls with a lovely four, scoring 18 runs in the 14th over.

This gave the Vipers momentum as Holden joined Curran on the half century list, in just 31 balls, also with a four. The two batters kept the scoreboard ticking as they found the regular boundaries while also rotating the strike.

The likes of Chris Wood and Mark Adair were unable to keep them in check and they smashed an unbeaten 123-run partnership in just 77 balls to chase down the target in 16.5 overs.

Most players are ready to bat anywhere: Tilak Varma

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
■ Dharamsala

India batter Tilak Varma on Saturday underlined the team management's push for a flexible batting order, saying most players are ready to bat anywhere depending on match situations.

The hosts eye an edge in the five-match T20I series against South Africa, locked 1-1 ahead of the third game to be played on Sunday.

With India continuing to experiment in the middle-order in the build-up to next year's T20 World Cup, Tilak said adaptability has become a key requirement in the shortest format.

"Everyone is flexible except the openers. I am up for batting at 3, 4, 5 or 6 — wherever the team prefers for me," Tilak said during the pre-match press conference. "If the team feels a particular move is tactically best, everyone goes with the team."

Drawing parallels with recent examples, Tilak said such decisions are situation-based rather than role-driven. "One-off games keep happening. Axar Patel has already done the same thing and he did well there. It depends on the situation," he said, citing examples of similar roles being successfully executed in recent international tournaments.

Providing context to the conditions in Dharamsala, the 23-year-old said the surface could still favour batters despite the cold weather.

"I have played an Under-19 India series here before. We are watching the wicket and I feel it will be a high-scoring one," he said.

However, he cautioned that low temperatures could offer some help to bowlers early on.

With dew expected to play a role as the match begins at 7 pm, Tilak said India are mentally prepared for the challenge.

"We don't have the toss in our hands. We are preparing for the dew and have practised with a slightly wet ball," he said.

Addressing concerns about playing in unfamiliar cold conditions, Tilak said mental strength is key.

"It's very cold here, but we are prepared mentally and physically. Those who

Tilak Varma during a training session ahead of the third T20I cricket match between India and South Africa in Dharamshala are mentally strong succeed everywhere," he said.

Tilak added that moving across the batting order does not affect his preparation.

"We follow the basics in practice. I always think about what I can do for the team," he said.

On the toss factor, Tilak felt batting first or second may not make a major difference.

"In the first two matches, the team batting first won because there was some seam and swing in the cold. Overall, there isn't much difference as dew comes in early," he said.

Confident of India's approach, the left-hander said the side would stick to its attacking template.

"We will play with the same intent we have shown in the last 15-20 matches. We are confident of winning the series," he said.

PCB MIFFED OVER AGHA'S OMISSION FROM ICC T20 WC POSTER

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
■ Karachi

The Pakistan Cricket Board is unhappy with the International Cricket Council after the global governing body released a promotional poster of next year's T20 World Cup ticket sales without the country's captain Salman Ali Agha on it.

A reliable source in the PCB said the matter had been taken up with the ICC as the promotional poster featured only five captains — Suryakumar Yadav (India), Aiden Markram (South Africa), Mitchell Marsh (Australia), Dasun Shanaka (Sri Lanka) and Harry Brook (England).

"We faced the same issues when the Asia Cup was held a few months back and that time the broadcasters had started a promotional campaign without our captain featuring in it," the source said.

He said it was only after the PCB spoke to the Asian Cricket Council (ACC), the situation changed.

"We are facing a similar situation this time as the ICC has not projected our captain on the promotional poster for ticket sales," he added.

He said while Pakistan was not in the top five teams in the ICC T20 rankings but it had a rich legacy and remains one of the top draws in the World Cup.

Lindsey Vonn runner-up day after becoming oldest World Cup winner

ASSOCIATED PRESS
■ St Moritz (Switzerland)

Lindsey Vonn nearly did it again. The 41-year-old American finished second in a World Cup downhill on Saturday, a day after becoming the oldest winner in the circuit's history.

After winning the season's opening downhill by nearly a full second on Friday, Vonn was beaten by only one racer this time: Emma Aicher of Germany was 0.24 seconds faster.

Vonn attributed a mistake landing a jump midway down her run for the gap, when she nearly lost her balance for an instant and leaned heavily on her left leg to raise herself back up.

"I'm a little bit tired from yesterday, there was a lot of emotion," Vonn told Swiss broadcaster RTS. "I thought I skied pretty well on top then I was just out of balance, I fell on my hip. Yeah, didn't ski the bottom the way I wanted to."

Sofia Goggia, the 2018 Olympic champion from Italy, finished third, 0.29 behind, and Breezy Johnson, the American world champion, was fourth, 0.40 back.

Vonn, who is preparing for the Milan Cortina Olympics, went into first position with her run down the sun-drenched Corviglia course. But the 22-year-old Aicher came down next and quickly pushed Vonn out of the leader's seat.

Vonn returned to skiing last season after nearly six years of retirement — following a partial replacement surgery on her right knee, which included inserting two pieces of titanium.

Vonn's results are shaping up to make her a top medal contender at the Olympics — and able to compete with skiers half her age. Women's Alpine skiing at the Feb. 6-22 Winter Games will be contested at Cortina d'Ampezzo, where Vonn holds the record of 12 World Cup wins.

Vonn registered the top speed of 102.45 kph (64 mph) on the top section; increased her speed to 110.02 kph (68 mph) on the bottom and flew a massive 41 meters (yards) off a jump toward the end of her run

The Carnival of Cinema

TEAM VIVA

Cinema, at its core, is a collective experience. It draws strangers into a shared space, invites them to observe, reflect and respond together, and in doing so, shapes public imagination. For more than seven decades, the International Film Festival of India has functioned as a vital platform for this exchange, bringing global cinema into conversation with India's evolving cultural identity. Founded in 1952 as a modest showcase of international films, IFFI has grown into South Asia's most significant film festival, mirroring the country's changing relationship with storytelling, technology and creative ambition.

The 56th edition of IFFI, held in Goa from November 20 to 28, 2025, marked a deliberate shift in scale and intent. Anchored in the theme "Convergence of Creativity and Technology," the festival positioned cinema not only as an artistic practice but as a strategic driver of cultural influence and economic growth. Its timing alongside the Golden Jubilee year of the National Film Development Corporation further underscored this moment of transition, reinforcing NFDC's renewed role in preserving legacy while actively shaping the future of Indian cinema.

The history that underpins IFFI

To appreciate the festival's importance, one must first look at the foundations of Indian cinema. The nation's screen story began in 1913 with Dadasaheb Phalke's silent landmark, Raja Harishchandra, which used mythological narratives to establish a powerful, indigenous storytelling form. The coming of sound in 1931 with Alam Ara permanently embedded music and dialogue, forging the complex, multi-genre identity of Indian film. The artistic maturity of the 1950s and 60s saw the rise of visionaries like Satyajit Ray, whose profound humanism earned India enduring and respected status in the global artistic domain.

This dedication to cultural exchange led to the establishment of the IFFI in 1952. Inspired by the ancient philosophy of Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam ("the world is one family"), its purpose was to build bridges across nations through film. IFFI achieved competitive status in 1965 and holds the distinction of being the sole South Asian film festival accredited by the International Federation of Film Producers' Associations (FIAPF). Since permanently moving to its tropical home in Goa in 2004, IFFI has become Asia's most crucial annual forum for artistic, commercial, and policy dialogue.

The Festival Chronicle

The 56th edition made a bold opening statement by commencing with a Historic Grand Parade in Panaji, rather than an exclusive indoor event. This unprecedented move instantly rendered the opening ceremony accessible and inclusive, dissolving the traditional boundary between an elite festival and the general public.

The procession was a powerful display of cultural federalism, featuring magnificent floats and vibrant state tableaux from Andhra Pradesh, Haryana, and Goa. The emotional peak was the "Bharat Ek Soor" collective-over a hundred folk artists from sixteen states whose combined rhythms and synchronized movement culminated in a breathtaking, living tribute to the national flag.

In his official address, Chief Minister Dr Pramod Sawant cemented the state's long-term vision, formally declaring Goa's ambition to become the "Creative Capital of India." The ceremony also paid profound respect to the industry's icons, honouring legendary actor Nandamuri Balakrishna for his fifty-year screen career.

The choice of films set an immediate standard of artistic and intellectual engagement:

INTERNATIONAL OPENING FILM: THE BLUE TRAIL (O ÚLTIMO AZUL)

- The competitive section was led by this Brazilian dystopian drama, directed by Gabriel Mascaro. Having previously won the Silver Bear Grand Jury Prize at Berlinale 2025, the film, which follows an odyssey through the collapsing Amazon, compelled audiences to confront climate anxieties through a singular, human lens.

INDIAN PANORAMA:

- Feature Film: Rajkumar Periasamy's Tamil film, Amaran, was selected to showcase the sophisticated craft and storytelling depth emerging from India's regional powerhouses.
- Non-Feature Film: Kamlesh K Mishra's Hindi film, Kakori, reaffirmed the festival's dedication to powerful, non-fiction narratives dealing with crucial historical and social moments.

A deeply insightful "In-Conversation" session, "Cinema and Culture: Reflections from Two Eras," featured filmmakers Muzaffar Ali and Shaad Ali, providing a critical lens on the evolution of artistic practice across generations.
- The Engine Room The WAVES Film Bazaar was operating at peak efficiency as South Asia's largest film market, creating a robust ecosystem for deal-making, co-productions, and project funding.

Resilience and Reflection

The Day became a day of intellectual and emotional climax, dedicated to the sheer tenacity required to sustain an artistic career.

- The Masterclass of Willpower: The most significant event was the Masterclass delivered by the veteran actor and speaker Anupam Kher, powerfully titled: "Giving Up is NOT a Choice!" Held at Kala Academy, the session transcended mere acting technique, offering a profound, motivational blueprint for sustaining a life in the arts through conviction and perseverance.
- Creative Minds Present: The intensive 48-hour Challenge of CMOT officially concluded, with the young filmmakers presenting their final works—a raw demonstration of their ability to execute a creative vision under rigorous pressure.

 - Indian filmmakers representing diverse regional and documentary work, including Sandesh Kadur (Nilgiris — A Shared Wilderness), Paresh Mokashi (Mukkam Post Bombilwadi), and Debangkar Borgohain (Sikaar), engaged the media.

- A Sound Legacy: The day concluded with an intellectual tribute during the Lata Mangeskar Memorial Talk, "The Rhythms of India: From the Himalayas to the Deccan," where composers Vishal Bhardwaj and B. Ajaneesh Loknath discussed the complex, emotional, and structural role of music in shaping the identity of Indian cinema.

Why does a festival like IFFI matter in today's world of cinema?

The 56th IFFI, through its radical public opening, focused diplomatic efforts, and masterclasses, showcased films while shaping the future ecosystem of film creation and distribution. In a fragmented, digital world saturated with content, IFFI emerged as an essential physical nexus — a place where deals are struck, co-production treaties are signed, and the human spark of a young creator is ignited through mentorship. It stood as a powerful international corrective, reaffirming that cinematic value lies in cultural depth, technological innovation, and artistic excellence, not commercial returns alone.

As technology grows capable of replicating spectacle with ease, the festival leaves behind a quieter, more urgent reflection: how will global cinema protect the human heart of storytelling in a future increasingly shaped by machines?

For nine days, Goa lived cinema as filmmakers, audiences and stories from across the world came together, sharing screens, streets, conversations and memories

TEAM VIVA

Flashbulbs popped as Goa's evenings slipped into festival mode at the 56th International Film Festival of India, with the red carpet setting the pace each day. Cinema legends and emerging faces moved through the same space, turning it into the festival's most visible meeting point.

Across nine days, daily premieres reflected the breadth of Indian and global cinema. Rajinikanth, Ranveer Singh, Rishabh Shetty and Aamir Khan appeared alongside teams from Gustaakh Ishq and Tere Ishq Mein. Highlights included the world premiere of The Family Man (Season 3) with Manoj Bajpayee, Nimrat Kaur, Sharib Hashmi, Priyamani and Jaideep Ahlawat; a special showcase of 120 Bahadur featuring Farhan Akhtar, Raashi Khanna and Sparsh Wallia; and the Marathi film Asambhav with Sachit Patil, Mukta Barve, Priya Bapat and Sandeep Kulkarni. Filmmaker Vidhu Vinod Chopra also attended the special screening of his restored classic 1942: A Love Story.

A defining feature of IFFI 2025 was its effort to place new cinema alongside traditions of craft, performance and exhibition. The Vintage Camera Exhibition offered a tactile glimpse into the tools that shaped early filmmaking, while the Handloom Sarees in Motion showcase linked cinematic presentation with India's textile heritage. Adding to this was a Photo Exhibition inaugurated by Indian actress Amiee Baruah and Goa Chief Minister Dr Pramod Sawant at the Kala Academy, showcasing photographs from IFFI's 22-year journey in Goa. The exhibition also featured a collection of antique cameras, tracing the visual and technological evolution of the festival and cinema itself.

The intellectual core of IFFI remained strong through masterclasses and in-conversation sessions at the Kala Academy. Filmmakers such as Vidhu Vinod Chopra, Anupam Kher and Shekhar Kapur spoke about filmmaking as an emotional, ethical and technical practice. The festival also paid tribute to legendary actor Dharmendra, acknowledging his remarkable range and contribution to Indian cinema. A special celebration marked 50 years of Sholay, with director Ramesh Sippy's landmark film revisited as a defining moment in popular cinema and collective memory.

The penultimate evening belonged to Aamir Khan, who closed the festival's final Fireside Chat with candour and wit. Speaking to a packed hall, Khan described his instinct-driven approach to cinema, saying he liked to surprise both his audience and himself. Calling himself "a complete film personality, not an activist," he stressed that entertainment remained his primary objective, adding that the day he consciously chose to direct, he would likely stop acting. IFFI 2025 also advanced international collaboration through industry engagement. A Memorandum of Understanding signed between IFFI, NFDC and the Indian Film Festival of Melbourne marked a step towards strengthening Indo-Australian screen relations. Tributes and restored classics provided continuity across generations, with films by Guru Dutt, Ritwik Ghatak and V Shantaram screened alongside contemporary works.

As the festival drew towards its conclusion, participation took on a personal dimension through India Post's 'My Stamp' initiative. Visitors converted their photographs into official, postage-valid stamps using an IFFI-themed template, taking home a tangible memory of the event.

Together, screenings, performances, learning sessions, industry initiatives and personal mementoes shaped an experience that extended beyond the screen. IFFI 2025 presented cinema as an art form shaped by history, refined by craft and sustained through collective experience, while remaining open to new voices and future possibilities.

Fought in the unforgiving sands of the Thar Desert, the Battle of Longewala remains one of the most extraordinary defensive stands in military history. From December 4-7, 1971, a small Indian Army company—vastly outnumbered and facing overwhelming armour—held its ground against a major Pakistani offensive. Longewala is now regarded globally as a case study in battlefield strategy, leadership and grit. It is celebrated as Vijay Diwas in December every year

The Lions of Longewala

A Pivotal Engagement in the 1971 Indo-Pak War

The Battle of Longewala, immortalised in the film Border, was one of the most decisive engagements of the 1971 Indo-Pakistani War. Fought between December 4 and 7 in the Thar Desert of Rajasthan, it showcased the extraordinary courage, tactical brilliance, and resilience of the Indian Army. This defensive victory not only halted a major Pakistani armoured thrust but also reshaped the outcome of the war. Owing to its unique character, Longewala is now taught as a case study in leading military academies across the world. The 1971 war was triggered by the Bangladesh Liberation movement, as East Pakistan (now Bangladesh) fought for independence from West Pakistan. As Indian forces advanced rapidly in the East, Pakistan-anticipating imminent defeat—planned a major offensive in the Western theatre. The strategy was to capture Indian territory and use it as leverage during post-war negotiations.

In Rajasthan, the Pakistani Army launched attacks along the border, with its main and most formidable thrust directed at the Longewala post. This post was defended by Alfa Company of the 23rd Battalion of the Punjab Regiment, commanded by Major Kuldip Singh Chandpuri. On December 4, 1971, Captain Dharam Vir of Alfa Company was on patrol along the International Border. Around 8:00 pm, he detected the unmistakable sound of tank movement across the border—indicating a large mechanized column approaching Longewala. He immediately relayed the information to Major Chandpuri, who at first found the scale hard to believe. But repeated confirmations from Capt Dharam Vir soon made it clear: an enemy infantry brigade supported by a tank regiment and an armoured squadron was advancing towards them.

This timely intelligence allowed the Indian defenders to quickly assume battle positions. Capt Dharam Vir was ordered to shadow the enemy column, provide continuous updates, and then withdraw to join the main defensive stand. Battalion Headquarters at Sadhewala rushed two recoilless guns to reinforce the post.

Defence Against Impossible Odds
As darkness descended, the Pakistani armour advanced towards Longewala. Outnumbered and outgunned, Alfa Company held its fire until the enemy came within striking distance. Major Chandpuri moved across the defences, encouraging his men and coordinating urgently requested reinforcements and air support. Throughout the night of December 4, Alfa Company withstood repeated enemy assaults, repelling them with fierce determination. Their defensive stance prevented Pakistani forces from overrunning the post before dawn—a critical factor that would change the course of the battle.

The Turning Point
At first light on December 5, the Indian Air Force launched a devastating air campaign. Hawker Hunter and HF-24 Marut aircraft, guided by a Forward Air Controller, conducted precise bombing runs. Pakistani tanks, stranded in the dunes and unable to manoeuvre effectively, became easy targets.
By evening, the Pakistani advance had collapsed. They abandoned the battlefield, leaving behind 37 destroyed tanks and numerous vehicles. The Indian Army had secured a resounding victory.

Honours and Legacy
Major Kuldip Singh Chandpuri was awarded the Maha Vir Chakra for exceptional leadership. Many soldiers of Alfa Company received honours for their valour. The battle stands as a powerful reminder of the importance of defending sovereignty, adapting under pressure, and leveraging joint operations.

Strategic Significance
■ Decisive Defensive Victory: Longewala demonstrated India's ability to repel a major armoured offensive with minimal resources.
■ Protection of Rajasthan: The stand at Longewala prevented Pakistani forces from advancing towards Ramgarh and Jaisalmer.

■ Morale Booster: The victory significantly uplifted Indian Army morale.
■ Global Military Lessons: Longewala continues to be studied for its exemplary use of defensive tactics, intelligence, and air-land coordination.

Key Factors Behind the Victory

Timely Intelligence: Capt Dharam Vir's early detection of Pakistani armour was critical in preparing the defences.
Effective Air Support: The Indian Air Force's relentless assaults played a decisive role in neutralising enemy armour.
Strong Defensive Positioning: The Indian Army's well-prepared positions and coordinated firepower proved superior despite being heavily outnumbered.
The Battle of Longewala remains one of the greatest examples of courage under fire. It is a testament to how determination, leadership, and strategic clarity can overcome overwhelming odds—and how a single night's stand can alter the destiny of a nation.

Behind the Scenes: The Making of Border

The 1997 war epic Border, directed by JP Dutta, remains one of Indian cinema's most iconic portrayals of patriotism. Based on the Battle of Longewala during the 1971 Indo-Pak War, the film's creation is filled with fascinating behind-the-scenes stories that shaped its authenticity and legacy.

INSPIRED BY A TRUE HERO

JP Dutta drew heavily from the real-life experiences of Major (later Brigadier) Kuldip Singh Chandpuri, who commanded the outnumbered Indian troops at Longewala. The film's character played by Sunny Deol is closely modelled on him, and the officer himself visited the sets during shooting.

SHOT IN REAL DESERT TERRAIN

To recreate the harsh conditions of the Thar desert, the crew shot extensively in Bikaner and Jaisalmer. The temperatures soared above 45°C, posing challenges for actors and crew, but lending the visuals a raw, authentic feel.

AUTHENTIC MILITARY SUPPORT

The Indian Army offered extensive support to the film, providing tanks, artillery, vehicles, and access to border posts. Many soldiers even appeared as extras, adding remarkable realism to the battle sequences.

A TRIBUTE BORN FROM PERSONAL LOSS

Director J.P. Dutta dedicated Border to his brother, Squadron Leader Deepak Dutta, who lost his life in the 1971 war.

This personal connection infused the film with emotional depth and sincerity.

REAL TANKS, REAL EXPLOSIONS

Modern CGI-heavy battle films, Border used real explosives, controlled blasts, and actual military hardware. This practical approach gave the combat scenes their gritty impact.

THE ICONIC MUSIC WAS ALMOST DIFFERENT

The now-classic soundtrack by Anu Malik—featuring "Sandese Aate Hain" and "Mere Dushman"—was recorded with live orchestration. Interestingly, the producers initially considered a different composer, but Malik's patriotic melodies became immortal.

SUNNY DEOL'S POWERFUL DIALOGUE DELIVERY

It was one of the best performance by Sunny Deol who shined in his role, his powerful dialogues are still remembered and float on social media.

A MASSIVE ENSEMBLE CAST

Putting together the star-studded team—Sunny Deol, Jackie Shroff, Suniel Shetty, Akshay Khanna, Tabu, and others—was a logistical feat. Many actors agreed to reduced fees due to the film's patriotic subject.

ONE OF INDIA'S BIGGEST BLOCKBUSTERS

Despite being over three hours long, Border became one of the highest-grossing films of 1997 and remains a benchmark for Indian war cinema.

Partition of India A Human Catastrophe

In August 1947, India was partitioned into India and Pakistan. What was intended to be a political solution to terminate colonial control resulted in one of history's largest, most violent, and most inhumane partitions, fuelled by religion. Millions were uprooted; communal riots, massacres, abductions, forced conversions, and sexual assault ensued as people fled over hastily formed borders. The human toll—lives lost, families fractured, and communities torn apart—became the defining tragedy of the subcontinent's fall from empire.

A History of Cultural Integration

Long before 1947, the Indian subcontinent was a layered, composite civilisation. Over many centuries it assimilated migrants and conquerors. India developed as a cross-cultural civilisation; Greeks, Kushans, Huns, and Persians all contributed to the development of India's culture; Amir Khusrau shaped early Hindavi-Urdu; Akbar's Din-i-Ilahi and Sulh-i-Kul promoted pluralism; Dara Shikoh connected Sufism and Vedanta; and Jayasi's Padmavat combined Islamic mythology with Indian ethos, creating a shared, composite civilisation that transcended strict boundaries.

The Tragic Anomaly

Sheikh Ahmad Sirhindi opposed syncretism; Altaf Hussain Hali emphasised a distinct Muslim identity; Sir Syed Ahmad Khan advocated for separate Muslim sociopolitical interests; Muhammad Iqbal envisioned autonomous Muslim destiny; Muhammad Ali Jinnah turned this into political separatism; extremist sects later inflamed hostility—but some humane stories of partition emerged amidst the chaos.

Their swords were gleaming, icy, and ruthless

I was only 12 years old when Pakistan was formed, but those moments still live inside me as if they happened yesterday. My mother, Gyanvati; father, Anant Ram; uncle, Santaram; older brothers, Ramnath and Prannath; and my six-month-old baby sister all resided in Bahdemalli at the time. Before everything turned red one day, life was straightforward and tranquil.

I can recall the thudding footsteps of men hurrying into our home and the sound of angry voices. Their swords were gleaming, cold, and ruthless. They attacked and killed my father, my uncle, and my older brother Ramnath before I could comprehend anything. I saw firsthand how repeatedly they struck them. I can still hear their cries of “hai, hail!” They cried out, but nobody responded. As a small child witnessing her world being torn apart, I was frozen.

My brother Prannath grabbed my hand, crying and shouting. We ran. My mother carried my infant sister in her arms and ran. She looked for a well to jump into to save their honour. To her shock, the well was already filled with women's dead bodies. Unfortunately, my little sister died due to suffocation. My mother survived, along with around thirty-five other women. Hours later, the military arrived and pulled the 35 survivors out of the well. From there, they were taken to the refugee camp, where my mother and I were reunited—thanks to the jawans of the Gorkha Rifles.

Even now, when I try to talk about it, the words break on my tongue. My heart starts to shake. I survived, but I lost my father, uncle, brother, and my youngest sibling at home, whom I never saw again. That youngster inside me is still looking for them.

Terror consume even the toughest men

I was around thirteen or fourteen when Partition tore through our lives. We lived near Shakargarh, in a community where Hindus and Muslims had coexisted for years. My father, Ram Lal; my mother, Chaman Dai; and all of our relatives were present. We never anticipated that one day we would be running for our lives.

I visited Gota Sarajwali with my maternal grandparents a few days before the actual violence began. I had no idea that I would be separated from my entire family. When the killings began, people in my community started fleeing on foot—afraid, unarmed, and trying to save their children. My family crossed the Rawi Bridge and arrived in Sarajwali. There, Muslims urged us, “If you want to save your life, convert,” and we all converted to Islam. For nearly a month, this continued, and I witnessed terror consume even the toughest men. “Many who converted then used to go to the masjid for namaz, adopting a distinct identity.”

One day, Indian military vehicles entered the village. Their voices broke through the dread like a miracle. They saved the surviving Hindus and led us to safety. I was reunited with my mother and brothers in a refugee camp, and it felt as though I had been given my life back.

Years later, we rebuilt our lives in Ghuman. I married there, my family expanded, and life progressed. Her son Rajakumar has narrated this account.

They gave the girls poison pills

My father, Sardar Gulab Singh, was an industrialist. He owned a cotton factory. We were four brothers and five sisters. The population of the Sillanwali mandi was about 10,000. More than half of them were Muslims. Inside the town there were Hindus, and around the outside were Muslim bastis. There were mostly bhatti (labourer) Muslims there. There was a municipality.

We had a very big haveli. The haveli's name was “Guru Arjun Building.” There were many servants.

Nawab Allahbakhsh, who was the uncle of CM Malik Khizar Hayat Tiwana and happened to be my father's friend, told us that we need not worry as long as he was with us. My father told all of us brothers and sisters that if ever there was an attack on our haveli by the Muslims, how would we face it? What should we do in that situation? Above all, he worried about his three daughters, who were aged about 12 to 17. He gave them, one by one, small sachets of poison (zehir ki pudiya) and told them that if such a situation arose and they fell into the hands of Muslims, then at that time they should take this poison.

Pakistan was formed, and conditions became worse and worse. Nawab Allahbakhsh said, “Sardar ji, now it is not right for you to remain here. Now you must leave this place.” Another friend from the bhatti also said, “Now you should leave and sell your kothi to me; I will give fifty thousand rupees for it.” But my father said that he would give him the haveli without him purchasing it and come back later on when all this ended—little did he know that we would not be able to return.

So one day we decided to leave the place and went to the station in the dark. Others soon followed, saying, “If you leave, we will leave as well.” Unfortunately, we could not leave because the train was full of dead bodies. By mid-August 1947, tensions in Punjab were rising, with allegations of looting and killings. Many Muslims' behaviour in Sillanwali had also changed, causing concerns.

We fled in a truck to Sardogha and from there to Amritsar, then spent a year in Rajasthan before settling in Ludhiana. There my father reopened our ration depot and rebuilt life from scratch. In 1963, I joined the Punjab Police, later serving in anti-terror operations and eventually becoming IGP. I also led the RAF and handled communal crises, retiring with Partition's memories still engraved in my soul.

THE 1947 PARTITION WAS A TRAGEDY ON A MASSIVE SCALE. SIR CYRIL RADCLIFFE, THE BRITISH LAWYER WHO DREW THE LINES, WAS UNFAMILIAR WITH INDIA'S GEOGRAPHY. HE DIVIDED THE PROVINCES OF PUNJAB AND BENGAL BASED ON MAPS AND RELIGIOUS/CASTE DATA, A TASK HE CARRIED OUT WITHOUT EVER VISITING INDIA. AROUND 15 MILLION PEOPLE WERE DISPLACED, AND AROUND 1-2 MILLION PEOPLE WERE KILLED.

Diljit Rai Wadhawan

I was born in Gujranwala, in my nanaka, in 1936. My Nana ji, Nand Lal Chopra, was always ill, and I mostly remember him lying on his bed. Nani ji, Goma Devi, was active in Congress—always going to meetings. I spent my first four years with them before returning to Muraliwalla, our village in Gujranwala district. As 1947 approached, the atmosphere worsened. Muslims in nearby villages began turning hostile. Even the local police were Muslim, so their “assurances” meant nothing.

One day, some friends came to warn my father: Muslims were planning a raat ka hamla, a midnight attack. My father refused to put Hindu guards outside; he did not want to provoke anyone. But the attack still came. Around midnight, hundreds surrounded our haveli. Cries of “maar do, kaat do!” echoed from all sides. Rain began pouring, making the chaos even darker. My father shouted, “Musalman? no? ne dhokha de diya!” as we scrambled inside. Father locked my mother, siblings, and me inside a small room, saying, “Main apne saamne tumhe marta hua nahi dekh sakta.” He and my elder brother hid elsewhere.

I was looking through the tiny ventilation hole, at the faces who were very well known to us from our neighbouring houses, assassinating my relatives and family members in wrath. We heard blows, screams, and the pounding of doors through the night.

Even today, that night feels like it never truly ended.

We extend our heartfelt thanks to the author, Krishnanand Sagar, who wrote the book titled Witnesses of Partition-era India, and who preserved these precious testimonies with such dedication and care. Because of your patient interviews, sensitive listening, and commitment to documenting lived memories, we were able to compile these stories with depth, authenticity, and respect. These voices—once scattered by violence and displacement—have found a place, a dignity, and a permanence through your work, ensuring that these experiences are not forgotten and giving future generations the chance to understand the courage, loss, and resilience of Partition survivors.

Mizoram: Where scenic splendour meets soulful cuisine

ANIL RAJPUT

Mizoram, a strikingly beautiful state of North-East India is known as much for its brave people as it is for its breathtaking landscape. As if defining this character, its name derives from two Mizo words, mi meaning people and ram meaning land, together meaning the land of the Mizo people. Situated in the eastern Himalayan region, Mizoram is bordered by Myanmar to the east and south, Bangladesh to the west, and the Indian states of Tripura, Assam and Manipur to the north, making it a strategic and cultural cross-road between South and Southeast Asia.

Much of Mizoram lies at elevations ranging from 2,000 to over 7,000 feet above sea level, giving the state a cool and welcoming climate for much of the year. Aizawl, the capital city, is situated along a ridge at an elevation of 3,714 feet, as if to keep watch upon the rest of the state, and is among the highest state capitals in India. The terrain is rugged and marked by narrow valleys and steep slopes and almost 85 per cent of the state is covered by emerald green forests making it one of the most forested states in the country. This geography has encouraged carefully planned systems of habitation and food production that respected the contours of the land. Rivers such as the Tlawng, Chhimtuipui also known as the Kaladan, and Tuivawl flow through the hills, supporting fishing, small-scale farming and are used effectively as transport routes to connect remote towns and regions.

The historical roots of Mizoram can be traced to the migratory movements of Tibeto-Burman people who travelled southward over centuries from, between approximately 1000 BCE and 500 CE. Oral traditions, clan genetics, and linguistic evidence suggest a gradual settlement process rather than a single migration. These early communities formed the foundations of what later came to be known collectively as the Mizo people. These clans shared similar languages, customs and agricultural practices while maintaining their own distinct identities. Settlements were built along hill ridges for protection and ease of defence while village life facilitated close and intimate social interaction. An enduring feature of this community was mutual support and a strong sense of collective identity that extended to sharing in the preparation and consumption of food making it an ideal community-based life.

These groups initially established settlements between the 4th and 7th centuries CE, across the Lushai Hills, and were governed by hereditary chiefs known as lal. Each village functioned as an independent political unit, with land allocated by the chief. This system governed patterns of agriculture, food sharing and rituals. Loyalty to the village and clan formed the backbone of social organisation and inter-village relations were defined by alliances, common celebrations and at times conflict, which were often settled by sharing food and reconciliation. Communal feasting also marked important occasions such as harvests, victories and funerals, reinforcing food as a social binding force long before formal state structures emerged.

The famed forests of Mizoram are rich with bamboo, wild greens, medicinal herbs and edible roots. Bamboo forests in particular dominate much of the landscape and influence many aspects of Mizo life, from housing and tools to food and ritual practices. The state's high rainfall also nourishes this ecosystem, and determines its agricultural patterns and produce. This intimate connection between forests and hills shaped not only how people lived and moved, but also how they cooked, ate and preserved food, giving rise to a cuisine that is austere but nourishing and deeply connected to nature.

Agriculture in Mizoram historically relied on jhum or shifting cultivation, locally known as lo. Land in forests were cleared and cultivated for a few years at a time and then allowed to regenerate, ensuring fertility and sustainability. Traditional jhum cycles were carefully balanced with long fallow periods that allowed forests to recover fully and retain their natural nutrients. Rice, maize, millets, colocasia, legumes and chillies formed the backbone of crops, and were supplemented by forest foraging and hunting. The agricultural patterns were naturally determined by the seasons and the local festivals, songs and rituals revolved around them ensuring that cooking methods were adapted in harmony with seasonal availability.

Social life in traditional Mizo society was centered around the zawlbuk, a youth center that transmitted traditional community led practices in decision-making, cooperation and culture over generations. This served well in perpetuating their distinctive lifestyle, customs, morality and rituals. Food played a vital role in this process, reinforcing traditional communal bonds. Meat obtained from hunting, vegetables gathered from forests and grains harvested from jhum fields were shared and celebrated among the people and communities. This collective approach shaped a cuisine that valued simplicity, honesty of flavour and nourishment over complexity or excess.

The 19th century CE marked a period of profound political transformation. Following a series of expeditions, the British formally annexed the Lushai Hills in the 1890s, integrating the region into colonial administrative frameworks. The introduction of written records, census practices and new economic systems altered traditional structures, yet everyday life within villages remained largely rooted in customary practices, especially in food and traditions. Missionaries, however, introduced formal education and Christianity, bringing changes to social structure and belief systems. Over time, Christianity became the dominant faith (87.16% of the population as per the 2011 census) though traditional lifestyles endured and older values of community cooperation, respect for nature and disciplined living remained intact and continued to influence the lives of the people.

Christianity also reshaped festival calendars and dietary customs, even as traditional agricultural rhythms persisted. Sunday gatherings, church feasts and communal meals became new markers of social life. Meat consumption, especially pork, gained prominence during celebrations, even while everyday meals retained their characteristic simplicity. The Mizo ethos of moderation and humility found expression in the kitchen, where food remained functional, nutritional and rooted in local produce rather than indulgence.

The strategic position of Mizoram also connected it historically to trade routes linking present-day Myanmar and Bangladesh. Salt, dried fish, forest produce and textiles moved along these hill pathways, bringing subtle culinary influences without altering the core simplicity of Mizo cooking. Even today, the cuisine reflects a seamless blending of influences from neighbouring hill cultures and Southeast Asia, that filtered into local tastes.

In keeping with this adaptation but also the availability of local produce determined by its geography and weather, Mizo cuisine is deeply seasonal and unique to its people. It is defined by boiling, steaming and light smoking rather than frying. Oil is used sparingly, spices are minimal and flavours rely on freshness and natural taste. Food is prepared to sustain, mindful of nutrition rather than flavours that overwhelm the senses. This culinary philosophy aligns closely with the Mizo lifestyle that values restraint, discipline and harmony with nature.

Rice is the staple and forms the basis of most meals. It is normally eaten plain, accompanied by an assortment of vegetables, meat or fish. One of the most iconic components of Mizo food is bai, a light stew that is prepared in many variations across households and regions. Bai is usually made by boiling seasonal vegetables such as pumpkin leaves, jungle greens, beans or mustard leaves with herbs, bamboo shoots and sometimes fermented soybean paste. Pork fat or smoked meat is sometimes added for flavour, but the dish remains gentle and nourishing. Bai reflects the Mizo approach to cooking that allows ingredients to express themselves with minimal intervention.

Another important dish is sawhchiar, a rice porridge cooked with meat, usually pork or chicken, and seasoned lightly with ginger and local herbs. It is both a normal household meal but also a dish offered during community gatherings. Variants like sawhchiar chawhpaw, enriched with rice flour, are prepared during festivals or for those recovering from illness, underlining food's role as curative and sustenance. Meat occupies a prominent place in Mizo cuisine, particularly pork, which is a preferred option. Traditional Mizo households often preserved meat by smoking it over kitchen fires. Smoked pork, known for its firm texture and deep aroma, is used in stews, bai preparations or eaten simply with rice and boiled greens. Smoking not only ensured preservation in humid climate but also added complexity without the need for spices.

Forest produce plays an equally vital role. Bamboo shoots, known locally as mautak or rawtuai, are used fresh, fermented or dried. Fermented bamboo shoot preparations add depth and mild acidity to otherwise plain dishes. Bamboo shoot chutneys, stews and accompaniments are common during particular seasons, reinforcing the link between forest cycles and food.

Leafy greens gathered from hillsides and forests are also standard in Mizo meals. Leaves of mustard, colocasia, pumpkin and wild herbs are used by lightly boiling and sometimes mashing them into coarse pastes. These greens provide essential nutrients and are also valued for their medicinal properties. The emphasis on greens reflects an intuitive understanding of curative and nutritional diets long before formal nutritional science became popular knowledge. I believe these are lessons from our ancient traditions that we should make known with a view to preserving their memory and informing future generations of our wise ancestors.

Besides meat, fresh water fish is also an important culinary delicacy specially in areas closer to rivers such as the Chhimtuipui. Small river fish are boiled or smoked and added to vegetable stews while dried fish is also relished, lending intensity to mild dishes. Fish preparation remains simple, focusing on texture and natural taste rather than being overpowered by spices. Chillies are often used in Mizo cooking but not excessively. They are added fresh or roasted and mashed into simple accompaniments rather than elaborate curries. One common side dish is a crushed chilli and herb mix, sometimes combined with fermented bamboo shoot or dried fish, served in small quantities to add heat to bland staples. In the southern districts inhabited by the Lai and Mara communities, culinary practices show subtle variations. Rice remains central, but greater use of fermented ingredients and local herbs is preferred. Pork and chicken stews are slightly richer, though still restrained. Bamboo shoot fermentation techniques here are more pronounced, producing sharper flavours that complement plain rice.

In eastern regions near the Myanmar border, rice noodle preparations appear, reflecting cross-border cultural exchanges. These noodles are served in light broths with greens, herbs and bits of meat or fish. The cooking methods remain aligned with Mizo sensibilities, emphasising boiling and steaming rather than heavy seasoning, suggesting influence without cultural dilution.

Fermentation occupies an important place in Mizo gastronomy, though in a quieter form than in some neighbouring cuisines. Fermented bamboo shoots and soybean paste are used sparingly, also unlike neighbouring states, to add depth and preserve nutrients. Traditional fermentation methods rely on ambient temperatures and natural microbes, demonstrating empirical knowledge passed down through generations. These techniques ensured food security during lean periods and allowed forest abundance to be extended across seasons.

Traditional beverages brewed from rice and using local fermentation techniques have existed for long in the region. However, some anthropological studies show that rice-beer and traditional alcoholic beverages lost their social and ritual status in Christian households who preferred tea or other non-alcoholic drinks. Food rituals have also shifted towards church-centred gatherings, but even these occasions bring communities together in faith, bonding and goodwill. In contemporary times, Mizoram's cuisine is witnessing renewed interest and revival specially among the youth. Cafes and home kitchens are retaining traditional dishes with pride, adapting presentation without altering core practices. Smoked pork, bai, bamboo shoot preparations and sawhchiar are appearing in curated menus in contemporary cafes and restaurants seeking to highlight both heritage and health. Its low oil content, liberal use of greens and reliance on natural preservation has aligned well with mindful dietary habits. This is indeed a welcome development and must be encouraged.

It is my belief, therefore, that preserving Mizo cuisine in its simplicity and traditions is not about nostalgia but about recognising its relevance for future generations. They are a narrative of a people shaped by hills, rain and forests, who learned to live with what the land offered rather than in depleting it. Each bowl of bai, each serving of smoked pork or plain rice accompanied by forest greens reflects generations of practical wisdom, discipline and respect for balance.

To value this cuisine is to value the cultural intelligence of the Mizo people and their ability to adapt without excess. By safeguarding these food traditions, we honour a way of life that sees nourishment not only as sustenance for the body but as an expression of harmony between people, land and belief. Let us all play a role in ensuring that Mizoram's culinary heritage continues to nourish, instruct and inspire those who inherit its hills and forests and, indeed, even beyond.

A passage through ritual

MYTHRI TEWARY

When a soul crosses the river, a granddaughter's journey through the Vedic art of saying goodbye.

To everyone who loves quietly and loses suddenly.

In the quiet, early hours of 4 November, before the day could even break, my grandfather - as we fondly called him 'Baba' — exhaled for one final time. And in that silent moment, something arose within the walls of our Patna home: a language of grief older than our memories, older than the family he built and left behind. Something far older than desolation, cries, and silence awakened. It was the Vedic language of leave-taking: a departure in honour of the one who not only lived but completed the cycle of life given, and guidance to the one leaving the physical world.

A pilgrimage, a process. A process of returning, cleansing, remembering, releasing, and finally transcending. In our part of existence, passing away is not an ending. It is a journey, undertaken not by the living but accompanied by them — at every step, every ritual, every breath, until the soul proceeds on its journey to the next world. A set of traditions that do not rush sorrow, nor fear departure, and that do not let the soul take its leave unattended. A subtle way of being, a gentle whisper: 'You were not alone here, neither shall you walk ahead alone, even there.'

The thirteen days that followed my Baba's transcendence seemed like walking on a land unknown, following a map across an unseen terrain. It brought not just grief, loss, 'ifs' and 'buts' or a desperate 'one last time', but a philosophy of a sequence of customs, elaborate and unexpectedly tender. The loss is personal yet felt civilisational. An entire community of people gathered together in mourning and support, reciting a story of how it is not one man's departure but a reminder that 'you do not walk through this alone'. Not only us, but the soul. It is eerie, but comforting.

This is the story of that journey: of petals and pyres, of pepper and jaggery, of hidden lamps and clay pots hung under ancient trees; every step, every tear, every symbol and the world it carries forward. Of how humanity helps the living walk alongside the gone, one step at a time.

Life to Light

The morning our Baba left this world, time shifted its rhythm. What happened behind the mocha-brown iron gates of our residence was not panic or haste but quiet. A soft glance of affirmation among each other to place him in the earth he belonged to. He was lifted from the cot, along with his pillow and comforter, and placed gently on the floor to make sure he had a departure of utmost comfort. The Vedas call it not floor or ground but

'prithvi', the primordial mother, who absorbs the turbulence of the 'prana' as it leaves. Holding true to its essence and meaning came to mind with an unusual clarity Longfellow's 'A Psalm of Life': "Dust thou art, to dust returnest." Drawing a sharp connection to the Vedas and literature, science agrees - though unknowingly — that ground is the most stabilising conductor that helps discharge the final residual electrical impulses of a human system, ultimately bringing it into equilibrium.

Maybe this is what alignment actually is. Every aspect of what comprises the earth, science, faith and literature, in their own ways, align in perfect symmetry for one last time.

South, the Soul, and the Lord of Time

The Indian Vedic belief is to lay the departed to rest in a specific direction: south. The belief, as it elucidates, is that south has been considered the direction of Yama, the deity who receives the soul once it leaves the physical world. Contrary to the widely known, south is not negative; it is simply the correct spiritual orientation for a soul that has begun its divine journey.

It is also said that the soul subtly remains connected for some time, and that placing the head towards the south is a gentle symbolisation of closure, of peaceful surrender, an acceptance of the greatest transition. South ensures the soul follows the correct cosmic pathway, preventing the soul from wandering back.

Southward movement is for those who have completed their earthly cycle and are now moving to the realm of ancestors, called Pitrioka. Every gesture in Hindu funerary rites is designed not only spiritually but also psychologically to help the living release the departed. Facing south becomes a quiet act of letting go, a way of saying that we do not intend to pull you back energetically.

Science, yet again, remains in alignment with the cosmic order. The human body still holds some bioelectromagnetic charge for a few hours after it stops breathing. The earth's magnetic field runs from north to south; if placed towards the north, the remaining currents may cause disturbances leading to rigidity, while facing south makes it stable and electrically grounded.

The Touch of Ganga, the Sanctity of Tulsi

Born from the locks of Lord Shiva, the Ganga is said to represent piouness, a transition, the eternal cycle of life and beyond. She is a goddess, the locus of Hindu mythology, whose waters are believed to sanctify everything they touch. It is a symbol of purification, spiritual merit, a pristine passage from the material world to the divine.

As Baba rested there, still, we were asked to put a few drops of this holy water — gangajal — in his mouth. Vedic literature calls it 'amrita' (the divine nectar of immortality). This symbolic final sip denotes that the soul has begun its next journey with utmost purity. When one turns to science regarding this, it can be noted that Ganga water contains self-purifying bacteriophages, surprisingly. Thus, both realities — mystical and scientific — co-exist without conflict.

With 'amrita' in his mouth and Tulsi beside him, he slept. His sleep was deep, peaceful but most significantly heavenly. Tulsi is a sacred plant in Vedic Hindu households dating back to its origin. It is believed to guide the departing consciousness onto the state of being. Contemporary studies have shown that the fragrant oil of this plant slows down the initial process of decay for a brief and blessed interval. The faith of our ancestors is now chemistry for us, but what remains constant is the tenderness and intention behind following the system. Translucent grey spirals of lit incense sticks rose around him all through the day and the night.

The 15 second rule: A pause is powerful

GURUDEV SRI SRI RAVI SHANKAR

A long time ago, a CEO called me and said, "Gurudev, you saved my job. Once, I had written a nasty letter to my boss, and I was going to send it off. Then I remembered what you said: 'Give yourself a 15-second pause before you are about to do anything important.' I took a 15-second pause. And when I read through the letter again, I couldn't send it! I had written such a nasty letter that, if I had sent it out, I would have lost my job."

If you look back at your own life, you will notice that all mistakes happen at the spur of the moment due to a lack of awareness. When you are in a great rush and under a lot of stress, you are bound to make mistakes. Also, when you are in the midst of a storm of emotions, you are more likely to make mistakes. See, for example, when you are upset, what do you want to do? You just want to pick up the phone and yell at somebody! You want to get it off your chest. Before you do that, just give yourself 15 seconds. Freeze for those 15 seconds. What happens when you do that? Your emotions get time to settle; you regain your awareness and alertness. And your whole attitude changes. Everything changes around you. When you hold your breath, the mind stops too.

Let's do an exercise. Are you breathing? Continue to breathe. Now stop the breath for a few seconds. Breathe again. Stop. Hold your breath. Continue breathing. Did you observe what was happening within? Stillness dawns in you. Stillness is the precursor to infinity. In this moment of stillness, awareness blossoms inside you.

Taking that little time, that 15-second gap, can make a big difference. You can do this several times during the course of the day. As children, we used to play a game called 'Statue', where we would be running and someone would say 'Statue', and we had to stand still wherever we were. This game is a brilliant activity to help bring the mind to the present moment. Just a few seconds of pausing transports the mind from a state of impulsiveness to greater centredness.

How important are these momentary pauses? Everything emerges from silencing the mind. The purpose of speech is to create silence within you. If it doesn't, then the speech hasn't fulfilled its purpose. Whenever you say 'Yes!' or whenever you have a sense of wonder, your mind pauses. In such a state, you want to know about that object or person more closely. When you know something, it leaves you with a deeper sense of wonder. And wonder is the doorway to a mental pause. When you are amazed at the whole of creation - with all that you see, smell, or taste — each of these experiences that we derive from our senses leads us to a space of absolute tranquillity. And that is what meditation is.

When you start meditating regularly for a few minutes, when you are calm and collected, you become spontaneous and intuitive, which is quite different from being impulsive, which happens when you are emotional and restless. Once you calm your emotions, the decisions you take are spontaneous, intuitive, and correct.

No matter how busy you are, take a few moments and observe your breath. Using simple meditation techniques, calm down your mind. Bring it to this moment, relax each part of your body, relax your mind, your senses. You'll find such peace, so much love gushing from within. We are all born with this gift of love and peace. And somehow, we forget to look within. That is most important. Take a few moments to see what is happening inside.

Very ambitious people cannot have deep sleep because the mind isn't free. The more anxious you are about doing or achieving something, the tougher it becomes to sleep. Before going to sleep, if you pause, surrender your worries and ambitions to some Higher Power, and simply let go of everything, only then are you able to rest, isn't it? Why not apply the same thing to life as you live from one moment to another? When you want to sit for meditation, let go of everything.

The human mind is very complex; it has both delicate and tough aspects. If you have had a misunderstanding with a friend or colleague at work, you can become stiff inside, and this can distort your emotions, leading to negativity, which you carry wherever you go. In your day-to-day activities, the mind gathers many such impressions, anxieties, and tensions. They do not allow you to be happy; they block your intuition and your joy. These impressions strain and burden the mind, and eventually they can lead to many psychosomatic issues. But when you pause the mind with meditation, its tendency to hold on to negative emotions simply disappears. You gain the ability to live happily in the present moment and let go of the past. Pausing the mind for a few minutes every day is how you move it from a state of chaos to a state of bliss and clarity, and from restlessness to deep restfulness. And it is only from this state of deep rest that something creative can emerge. Deep silence is the mother of creativity. No creativity can come from one who is too busy, worried, over-ambitious, or lethargic.

The mind vacillates between the past and the future. It is either occupied with what has happened or busy thinking, planning, or feeling uncertain and anxious about what is to come. Wisdom is being aware of this phenomenon of the mind - of what is happening right now in your mind as you are reading this column. Information can be acquired by reading books or browsing the internet. You can open a book on any subject — how to lose weight, how to prepare for an interview, success 101, and so on. There are innumerable volumes on countless topics, but awareness of your own mind cannot be learnt from a book. That can come only from meditation.

Total rest is meditation. Only when the mind settles down can total rest happen. Restlessness, agitation, desire, and ambition stir up the mind and keep it busy planning for the future or feeling regretful and angry about the past. A mind in the present moment is meditation. A mind without agitation is meditation.

Why have practices like meditation and silence been given so much importance in our spiritual traditions? Greater awareness alone can root out misery from our lives and break the patterns we live with. Nothing helps achieve this more than stepping into brief periods of meditative silence. This is not something alien to us; it is built into our nature. The human body is made that way. You'll notice that when you are faced with something too much for the mind to take, the mind goes into silence. What happens when you are surprised or shocked? The mind drifts into silence. Something stunning takes you into silence. Words disappear. At the helm of every emotion, at the peak of every event, there is silence. And by recognising it, practising it, and manifesting it in your life, you cross the ocean of 'samsara', the sea of misery.

The Indian paradox of power, participation, and exclusion

TEAM AGENDA

In Democracy for Winners Only, retired civil servant Raj Kumar Srivastava presents a deeply reflective and unsettling account of how India's democratic journey has drifted away from its founding ideals. Drawing on over thirty years in public service across India's forests, villages, and administrative corridors, Srivastava offers a powerful meditation on the widening gap between democratic participation and democratic power. The core argument is arresting: India's democracy increasingly privileges the victorious rather than the virtuous. Electoral triumphs, he argues, have evolved into tools that legitimise centralisation, weaken institutions, and reduce citizens to spectators. Participation remains high, yet its influence on decision-making diminishes. This is the paradox at the heart of what Srivastava terms a "winner's democracy".

Democracy from the Ground Up

What distinguishes this book from typical political commentaries is its grounded storytelling. Srivastava draws from village panchayat meetings, forest rights disputes, drought relief interventions, and encounters with marginalised communities. These vignettes reveal the asymmetry between those who govern and those who bear the weight of governance. They illustrate how structural inequities—caste, class, bureaucracy, and political patronage—continue to shape democratic outcomes at the grassroots level.

His training as both a forester and administrator allows him to see democracy not as an abstract theory but as a lived ecosystem. Forest clearances, land conflicts, and community rights become windows through which the reader glimpses the contradictions of democratic practice.

The Digital Illusion of Participation

Srivastava's exploration of the digital age is particularly compelling. He warns that India's expanding online participation—tweets, hashtags, and viral campaigns—may be creating the illusion of empowerment without the substance of influence. When narratives overpower nuance and algorithms amplify majoritarian sentiment, the democratic conversation becomes shallow, polarised, and easily manipulated.

Institutions Under Strain

From legislatures to the media, from civil services to citizen forums, the book traces how key institutions struggle under the pressure of populism and speed-driven politics. Srivastava argues that institutional resilience—not electoral arithmetic—is the true measure of a functioning democracy. When institutions bend too easily, power becomes personalised and accountability erodes.

A Blueprint for Reclaiming Democracy

Despite its sharp critique, the book is not despairing. Srivastava lays out a reform agenda grounded in constitutional values:

- revitalising local governance structures
 - ensuring transparency in political finance
 - strengthening the autonomy of regulatory and oversight bodies
 - embedding community voice in development decisions
 - rebuilding civic education and democratic culture
- His message is clear: democracy must be continuously defended, renewed, and reclaimed.

A Timely and Courageous Work

Democracy for Winners Only stands out for its clarity of thought, graceful prose, and rare combination of practitioner insight and philosophical depth. It challenges readers without overwhelming them and urges introspection without cynicism. In a time of loud slogans and shrinking democratic space, Srivastava's voice is steady, principled, and necessary.

This book is essential reading for policymakers, administrators, scholars, and any citizen who cares about the future of India's democratic experiment. It raises a question that cannot be ignored: If democracy serves only those who win, what remains of its promise to the rest of us?

Why states act the way they do: A defence of rationality in global politics

KANISHK SHEKHAR

To comprehend global politics, it is essential to grasp the mind-set of states. A significant portion of international relations theory wants us to believe that states act rationally. However, numerous scholars contend that political leaders seldom behave rationally.

This question is vital for both the analysis and application of international politics, as only if states are rational can scholars and policymakers effectively understand and anticipate their actions. In contrast to individuals, states do not act impulsively; rather, policymakers evaluate threats in a strategic manner. Based on this reasoning, they argue that states typically place a higher value on survival and security than on any other considerations.

John J Mearsheimer and Sebastian Rosato assert that rational choices in international politics are based on credible theories regarding the functioning of the world and arise from thoughtful decision-making processes. By applying these standards, they conclude that the majority of states act rationally most of the time, even if they do not always achieve success.

Mearsheimer and Rosato support their argument by investigating whether historical and contemporary world leaders, such as George W. Bush and Vladimir Putin, have made rational decisions in the context of significant historical events, including both world wars, the Cold War, and the post-Cold War period. This book presents the concept of the decision-maker as homo theoreticus, an individual who is directed by coherent theories regarding the functioning of the world.

Mearsheimer is recognised for his ground-breaking contributions to the theory of offensive realism. With a notable career, he has written many influential works, including his magnum opus The Tragedy of Great Power Politics. Rosato, an emerging talent in the field, contributes his expertise in international relations to this collaboration. Together, they delve into the intricacies of state decision-making, challenging established beliefs and offering fresh insights into the rationale behind foreign policy. Through thorough investigation and persuasive arguments, the authors illuminate the complex processes that shape state behaviour in the international sphere.

In the initial chapter, the authors contend that states typically act rationally in their pursuit of foreign policy objectives, rather than being irrational entities motivated solely by emotions or ideologies. The book evaluates alternative theories such as liberalism and constructivism, claiming that the fundamental driving force behind state actions is a rational reaction to security issues rather than ethical principles or cultural influences.

Although liberal theories — including democratic peace, interdependence, and constructivist concepts — possess some validity, they ultimately fall short when compared to fundamental security concerns. Realism's emphasis on material factors serves as the most dependable framework for understanding state behaviour. States place a premium on survival over other aims, and failure to do so results in their classification as non-rational. Through a variety of examples, the authors illustrate that states adhere to the theory of expected utility maximisation, making calculated choices to enhance their security and interests.

In the subsequent chapter, the authors examine strategic rationality within the context of international relations, addressing the challenges faced by policymakers and states in a world filled with uncertainties. This is illustrated through historical instances such as American policy during the Second World War, strategies in East Asia, the post-Cold War era, Japanese decisions prior to the Pearl Harbor attack, and American actions during the Cuban Missile Crisis. They underscore the widespread uncertainty and lack of information that complicate decision-making processes. Whether in military strategy, diplomacy, or alliance formation, decision-makers encounter uncertainties that hinder risk assessment and rational choice. Mearsheimer and Rosato recognise the constraints of state rationality, investigating instances where external factors might affect decision-making. They contend that although states aim for rationality, internal dynamics and external pressures can occasionally result in irrational actions. The authors delve into the complexities of state decision-making processes, scrutinising the influence of leaders, bureaucracies, and other elements in determining foreign policy choices.

They emphasise the necessity of comprehending these processes to accurately evaluate state behaviour. Furthermore, the authors underscore the significance of goal rationality in the context of rational decision-making.
