Death of a dwelling: Bhopal forgets its vernacular design language

STAFF REPORTER ■ Bhopal

Hidden behind the modern sprawl of Bhopal, tucked away in narrow lanes, are homes that once defined the city's soul. Their walls, built from alanga stone and thin lakhori bricks, have stood for generations, their courtyards paved with flat red sandstone slabs that allowed rain to seep gently into the earth.

home had an aangan, open to the sky, a silent witness to the rhythm of daily life. Rain fell, seeped through the porous patiyas, and disappeared into the soil, leaving the air cool and the ground damp with memory.

gave so much in return. The thick walls, bound with nothing more than urad dal, jaggery, yellow mud, cow dung, and bhusha—wheat straw or husk—breathed with the seasons. The bhusha gave the mortar a fibrous grip, binding the mix together, making it strong yet flexible, allowing the structure to settle and shift with time instead of cracking under it.

craftsman, have not been kind. The craftsmen who once cared for these homes, who knew how to repair a kawelu roof or mix the perfect mortar, have disappeared. The kilns that once fired curved terracotta tiles are long shut, their flames doused by a world that no longer needs them.

dalaan, chhabaiyya, kawelu—faded from the lexicon, slipping out of memory like the air from their once-breathing walls. And yet, in the silence of an old courtyard, in the warmth of a sunlit stone, there lingers a whisper of all that we once shared.

New stadium for Brisbane 2032 Olympics unveiled

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA ■ Brisbane

Sailing the Whitsunday islands. Surfing an iconic Gold Coast break. Rowing in a crocodile-inhabited river in Rockhampton.

Extra tourism-focused venues and a new 60,000-seat Olympic stadium to be built in inner-city parkland have been unveiled as part of a major overhaul of planning for the 2032 Brisbane Games.

David Crisafulli, the third premier of Queensland state in the almost four years since the International Olympic Committee awarded the 2032 Games to the capital of Queensland state, announced the latest plans on a rainy Tuesday.

He said it's not going to be like last year's Paris Olympics or the 2028 Summer Games in Los Angeles, promising instead it'll be uniquely-Queensland.

It's been more than 1,340 days since that IOC decision in 2021, and local organisers still haven't started the Olympic venue construction program.

"The time has come to just get on with it — get on with it, and build," Crisafulli said, marking his 150th day in office.

"We are going to start immediately. We've got seven years to make it work — and make it work we will."

A 25,000-seat aquatics centre has also been proposed in an Olympic precinct that includes the new main stadium at Victoria Park, a former golf course near downtown Brisbane. The 11 years that Brisbane had to prepare is now down to seven, and leaders at federal, state and local levels agree it's time to stop squabbling over venues and start building them.

Newly elected IOC president Kirsty Coventry, who oversaw the initial planning stages as head of the IOC's coordination commission, has been updated on the changes by Andrew Liveris, chairman of the 2032 organizing committee.

"The stage matters," Liveris said.

"We've still got 7½ years to go, and we have a plan. This is a go-get-it-done plan." Brisbane was the first Summer Games host picked in a new process to put a preferred candidate into exclusive, fast-track talks without facing a rival bidder in a vote. With it, the IOC aimed to cut the cost of campaigning and building venues.

A croc, or not? Domestic media earlier this week raised concerns about crocodiles at the Olympic rowing venue when it emerged that events would be staged on the Fitzroy River.

Crisafulli confirmed the Fitzroy River venue at Rockhampton, on the central Queensland coast, and said a "multitude" of events had been staged there — including Australia's pre-Olympic rowing camps. He said local kids swam and paddled in the river and crocodiles wouldn't be a problem. Sarah Cook, the head of Rowing Australia, said the crocodile concerns were overblown in the media. But she raised some issues about the river current and its suitability for Olympic competition. Liveris, who said World Rowing would visit the venue in May, also wasn't worried about crocs.

"There are sharks in the ocean and we still do surfing... This is can do, not can't do, please flip the mindset here," he said. "Creatures below the water.. That's a bit kind of Hollywood-ish."

False starts

It's been a year since local organisers scrapped initial plans to demolish and rebuild the Gabba, an iconic cricket ground, as the Games centerpiece when a previous review panel appointed in 2023 recommended a new stadium in city parkland. The costs soared and the concept lost the support of the Australian Olympic Committee.

Sepp Blatter, Michel Platini acquitted again at second trial of financial wrongdoing at FIFA

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA ■ Muttenz (Switzerland)

Sepp Blatter and Michel Platini won again in court on Tuesday and now lead 2-0 in trial verdicts against Swiss federal prosecutors.

The former FIFA president and former UEFA president were acquitted for a second time on charges of fraud, forgery, mismanagement and misappropriation of more than $2 million of FIFA money in 2011. Blatter, now aged 89, gave little reaction listening to the verdict of three cantonal (state) judges acting as a federal criminal appeals court. Sitting in the row in front of Platini, Blatter alternately tapped his fingers on his desk or held his left hand over his mouth.

Platini sat with his arms folded or rubbing his hands as he listened to a translator sitting beside him relating the court's verdict in German into his native French.

The attorney general's office in Switzerland had challenged a first acquittal in July 2022 and asked for sentences of 20 months, suspended for two years. The indictment alleged the payment "damaged FIFA's assets and unlawfully enriched Platini." "Michel Platini must finally be left in peace in criminal matters," his lawyer Dominic Nellen said in a statement. "After two acquittals, even the Office of the Attorney General of Switzerland must realize that these criminal proceedings have definitively failed."

A further appeal to the Swiss supreme court can be filed by prosecutors.

Decade-long case Blatter and Platini have consistently denied wrongdoing in a decade-long case that swung on their claims of a verbal agreement to one day settle the money in question.

Blatter approved FIFA paying 2 million Swiss francs (now $2.21 million) to France soccer great Platini in February 2011 for supplementary and non-contracted salary working as a presidential advisor from 1998-2002.

The latest win for Blatter and the 69-year-old Platini came exactly 9½ years since the Swiss federal investigation was revealed and kicked off events that ended the careers of soccer's most powerful men.

That September 2015 day in Zurich, police came to interrogate them at FIFA after an executive committee meeting when Platini was a strong favorite to succeed his one-time mentor in an upcoming election.

Corruption crises Though federal court trials have twice cleared their names, Blatter's reputation likely always will be tied to leading FIFA during corruption crises that took down a swath of senior soccer officials worldwide.

Platini, one of soccer's greatest players and later Blatter's protégé in soccer politics, never did get the FIFA presidency he often called his destiny.

Neither Blatter nor Platini has worked in soccer since they were suspended by the FIFA ethics committee in October 2015. They were later banned and failed to overturn the bans in separate appeals to the Court of Arbitration for Sport in 2016.

"The criminal proceedings have had not only legal but also massive personal and professional consequences for Michel Platini, although no incriminating evidence was ever presented," Nellen said, suggesting further legal action "against those responsible for the criminal proceedings."

Platini's ban expired in 2019 and Blatter was given a subsequent ban by FIFA in 2021 months before his first was due to end. Blatter is exiled from soccer until late in 2028 — when he will be 92 — because of an ethics prosecution of alleged self-dealing in eight-figure management bonuses paid for successfully organizing the men's World Cup in 2010 and 2014.
