PIONEER IN SHORT

DEOL FAMILY URGES AGAINST RUMORS

Veteran Bollywood actor Dharmendra, 89, is stable and recovering in a Mumbai hospital, his family has confirmed, urging the media to stop spreading false reports about his health. Earlier reports falsely claiming his death were dismissed by daughter Esha Deol on Instagram, emphasising that he is responding to treatment and requesting privacy. Actress-politician Hema Malini criticised the "irresponsible" media coverage, calling it disrespectful and asking for respect for the family's need for privacy. Sunny Deol's representative also confirmed that Dharmendra is recovering and under observation, appealing for prayers and caution against rumors. The updates follow earlier concerns as Dharmendra was admitted to Breach Candy Hospital and monitored continuously. Several prominent figures, including Rajnath Singh, Yogi Adityanath, and Javed Akhtar, initially paid tribute but later deleted their posts. Family members and friends, including Salman Khan, Shah Rukh Khan, Govinda, and Ameesha Patel, have visited

While he cited high tariffs previously imposed on India due to Russian oil imports. Trump promised they would be lowered as relations normalise. The remarks come amid ongoing negotiations, with five rounds of talks completed for the first phase of the bilateral trade agreement, Indian officials have indicated that both sides are close to finalising the deal.

Delhi blast: A maze of clues, terror links, twisted trails

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE New Delhi

The National Investigation Agency (NIA) has taken over the Red Fort blast probe after investigators zeroed in on a doctor identified as Umar Nabi. He was allegedly driving the car that exploded and is suspected to be one of the 12 people killed.

Initial probe indicated the doctor reportedly had links with a terror module busted on Monday in Faridabad. Meanwhile, Jammu and Kashmir police took a DNA sample from his mother to establish the connection.

The decision to hand over the case to NIA was taken after Union Home Minister Amit Shah on Tuesday chaired two security review meetings. "Chaired review meetings on the Delhi car blast with the senior officials. Instructed them to hunt down every culprit behind this incident. Everyone involved in this act will face the full wrath of our agencies," he posted on social media.

Also recovered were 2,900kg of explosives. Those arrested are suspected to be involved with the Jaish-e-Mohammed and the Ansar Ghazwat-ul-Hind.

For a 36-year-old Assistant Professor, Dr Umar Nabi, hailing from the South Kashmir district of Pulwama, life was going smoothly while he was serving at Al-Falah Medical College in Faridabad. However, a sudden turn of events turned him into a maniac.

Also the woman doctor, arrested in connection with the huge explosives haul in Faridabad near Delhi, was tasked with establishing the women's wing of the Pakistan-based terror group Jaish-e-Mohammed (JeM) in India, according to security agencies sources on Tuesday.

The Lucknow-based doctor has been identified as Dr Shaheena Shahid. She was handed over the command of JeM's women's wing, Jamaat ul-Mominaat, which is headed by JeM founder Masood Azhar's sister Sadia Azhar in Pakistan. Her husband, Yusuf Azhar, was a mastermind in the Kandahar hijacking and was reportedly killed during Operation questioning in Pulwama district in Jammu and Kashmir on Tuesday Sindoor on May 7, according terror module included to officials. ## Bihar votes in record numbers

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE Patna/New Delhi

Bihar on Tuesday recorded its highest-ever voter turnout of 69 per cent, provisionally, at the close of polling in the second and final phase of the high-stakes elections. As the polling stations closed, exit polls predicted a return of the Nitish Kumar-led NDA Government in Bihar.

Results for the 243-seat Assembly polls will be declared on Friday. Winning alliances need 122 seat to reach the majority mark.

In both phases, the State registered a voter turnout of 66.90 per cent, provisionally, which is 9.6 percentage points more than the last Assembly polls, the chief election officer said. In the 2020 Assembly polls, the State recorded a voter turnout of 57.29 per cent.

Almost all exit polls predicted a big victory of the BJP-JDU combine over the RJD Congress alliance and a no show by Prashant Kishor's Jan Suraai. While the Matrize exit poll forecast the NDA likely getting between 147-167 seats, the INDIA bloc 70-90, and the Jan Suraaj between 0-2 seats, Dainik Bhaskar predicted 145-160 seats for the NDA and 73-91 for the INDIA bloc. While People's Insight predicted 133-148 seats for the NDA, 87-102 for the INDIA bloc and 0-2 for Jan Suraaj, People's Pulse gave 133-159 seats to the NDA, 75-101 to the INDIA bloc, and 0-5 to Prashant

Kishore's party. Meanwhile, Chanakya Strategies gave the NDA 130-138 eats, 100-108 to the INDIA bloc, and zero to Jan Suraaj, pollster P-Marq predicted the NDA to win 142-162 seats, INDIA bloc 80-98 and Jan Suraaj 1-4. ## CCTV, clues and a burnt car: Inside the Red Fort blast trail

RAJESH KUMAR New Delhi

Investigating agencies are probing the motive of the suspect in the Delhi blast whether he was in touch with someone in the old city, had plans to stock the explosives there and whether there was a plan to execute serial blasts across the country. Delhi Police have registered a case under Sections 16 and 18 of the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act (UAPA), along with relevant provisions of the Explosives Act and the Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita (BNS), at the Kotwali Police Station.

Intelligence sleuths ascertained that it seems blasts was orchestrated by UN-designated global terrorist Maulana Masood Azhar, chief of laish-e-Mohammad (JeM) whose whereabouts is yet to be known after his hideouts were demolished during Operation Sindoor in May this year.

"Pakistan-based terrorist has involved a network of radicalised doctors to plan Pulwama-style suicide attacks using a vehicle-borne IED in the heart of the Capital. These radicalised doctors' job was to make bombs and assist others in carrying out the attack," sources said.

The blast bears the imprint of the 2006 Mumbai train blasts, where home-grown, radicalised youth were involved. 209 people had lost their lives in the Mumbai blasts.

Israel remembers the Good Maharaja who saved children in World War-II

Shakeel Ahmed Khan (Kadwa).

ASHOKE RAJ ■ Jerusalem

A statue of Maharaja Digvijaysinhji Ranjitsinhji, the Jam Saheb of Nawanagar, was unveiled at Moshav Nevatim in southern Israel to honour his extraordinary humanitarian act of rescuing hundreds of Polish children — including Jewish orphans — during World War II. The Indian ruler, affectionately remembered as the Good Maharaja provided refuge to around 1,000 Polish children in 1942, saving them from the horrors of war and giving them a home in Balachadi village, near Jamnagar in Gujarat.

Organised by the Indian Jewish Heritage Centre (IJHC) and the Cochini Jewish

Heritage Centre (CJHC), the Maharaja Digvijaysinhji Ranjitsinhji in Jamnagar with kids and women from Poland in 1943

event celebrated the Maharaja's compassion and the deep historical ties between India, Israel, and Poland. India's Ambassador to Israel

JP Singh, who attended the ceremony, described the Maharaja's compassion as "a beacon of hope reminding us that humanity rises above all boundaries." He lauded the tireless efforts of IJHC and CJHC in preserving and celebrating India's shared Jewish heritage.

Polish Ambassador to Israel Maciej Hunia called the event "a very emotional moment." He recalled that after the war, when the Polish Prime Minister asked the Maharaja how his country could repay him for saving the children, the ruler only wished for "a street in a free Poland" to bear his name. "Today, not only is there a square in Warsaw named after him, but also a monument and even a tram in western Poland dedicated to the Good Maharaja," Hunia said. The Maharaja was posthumously awarded the Commanders Cross by the Polish Government for his remarkable humanitarian work. In

Robbins, Swami Shri Hariprasad, Rafi Bhonkar, and Dr Nehemia Shahaf. Two exhibitions were showcased alongside the ceremony -Indian Jewish Heritage by photographer Nehemia Shahaf and A Beacon of Light in Dark Times curated by Tikza Lavi. The statue was donated by the tribute at Nevatim stood as a powerful reminder of Maharaja Digvijaysinhji's legacy - a story of courage, compassion, and moral strength that transcended borders and time. His act of kindness during the darkest days of war continues to shine as an enduring symbol of friendship between India, Israel, and Poland.

Tarn Taran By-poll Sees 60.95% Turnout — A Test of AAP's Hold Amidst Multi-cornered Fight

MONIKA MALIK ■ Chandigarh

Voters in Tarn Taran turned out in substantial numbers for the assembly by-election on Tuesday, with Punjab Chief Electoral Officer (CEO) Sibin C reporting an approximate 60.95 percent turnout till 6 pm. The figure to be finalized only after all polling parties return to collection centres and data entry is completed — placed the contest in a middle band compared with recent in the state, neither signaling overwhelming wave nor outright voter apathy. What it does indicate is a decisive public engagement that will test the ruling Aam Aadmi Party's (AAP) ability to convert incumbency into retention, while several regional, especially the 'jailed' Khaddor Sahib MP Amritpal Singh's outfit, and national players hope to capitalize on a fragmented

Polling began at 7 am and proceeded under tight arrangements the assembly constituency, which has 1,92,838 registered electors – including 1,00,933 males, 91,897 females and eight third-gender voters. Officials set up 222 polling stations at 114 locations -60 urban and 162 rural booths - including four 'model' and three 'pink' Voters were required to deposit mobile phones at entry and were issued token numbers; live webcasting, microat sensitive observers booths and a tokenized entry system were among measures officials said were adopted transparency. A turnout of roughly 61 in a n bypoll percent multicandidate politically meaningful. It motivated suggests a electorate — enough to be consequential but not so overwhelming indicate a decisive antiincumbency wave. Punjab's recent by-election turnout history, the spectrum has ranged from the high 80s (like in narrative. But internal Gidderbaha) to the low 50s (like in Ludhiana West), with recent AAP securing five of six bypolls since 2022.

Against that backdrop, Tarn Taran's turnout offers the ruling party reason for guarded optimism: steady participation typically benefits organized parties that can deploy local boothlevel machinery. Yet the presence of new and unconventional players including a candidate backed by the recently formed outfit, SAD (Waris Punjab De), of a Khadoor and an independent controversial associations raises the prospect of vote splitting that could upend simple incumbency

The battle in Tarn Taran was multi-cornered. AAP fielded Harmeet Singh legislator with Akali roots, who joined the party in July; selection positioned as a experienced choice defend the seat vacated by the late AAP MLA Kashmir Congress nominated Karanbir Singh Burj, the district unit president, candidate with agricultural and real-estate credentials projects organizational strength. The BJP put up Harjit Singh Sandhu, its district chief, while the Shiromani nominated Sukhvinder Kaur Randhawa, a retired headmistress and wife of a veteran "dharmi fauji" — a profile chosen to appeal to traditional Sikh sensibilities. Mandeep Singh from SAD (Waris Punjab De), also contested, drawing support from hardline groups and carrying the baggage and vote-pulling power that polarizing figures bring.

Each major party brought contrasting strengths and ground. AAP's edge lies in incumbency and a recent run of bypoll successes; it has the machinery and the advantage of a governance fissures and the presence of entrants candidates can blunt that edge.

Congress's plus is local organization and a fresh face that can attract both party loyalists and protest its minus is translating district-level organizational dominance into wider appeal. BJP and SAD continue to trade on traditional vote bases and community loyalties, but their ability to expand those bases in a three-way and more fragmented contest is Turnout in itself is a partial indicator. A turnout slightly above 60 percent in Tarn Taran — higher than some recent bypolls but lower than outliers such as suggests voters were interested but overwhelmingly motivated by a single narrative. That benefits parties with disciplined ground operations and banks. vote Historically, such mid-range turnouts have not produced surprise landslides; rather, the outcome depends on micro-level vote transfers whether mainstream candidates can siphon decisive chunks of votes from the major contenders.

The entry of Amritpallinked political formations independent candidates supported by fringe organisations complicates the arithmetic. those players pull significant numbers, they could become kingmakers by splitting traditional SAD AAP helping Congress or BJP. Conversely, if fringe candidates fail to scale beyond protest votes, organizational solidity could see it retain the seat. In short: the result will hinge on whose vote share is more divisible — the AAP incumbent base, the anti-AAP consolidation, or the traditional SAD/BJP slice.

Protest by Panjab University students demanding the announcement of Senate polls saw no let-up on Tuesday, even as security personnel have been deployed on the campus to maintain law and order

Several political parties, including the Aam Aadmi Party, Shiromani Akali Dal, Congress and farmers' bodies such as the Samyukta Kisan Morcha, SKM (Non-Political), Kisan Mazdoor Sangharsh Morcha, have extended their support to the students' agitation.

The students are holding the protest near the vicechancellor's office under the banner of 'Panjab University Bachao Morcha'. Meanwhile, security personnel have been deployed on the campus to maintain law and order. Initially, they launched the protest against the Centre's decision to restructure the university's bodies -- the Senate and Syndicate. However, the Ministry of Education, on November 7, withdrew its October 28 notification changing the constitution and composition of the Panjab University Senate and Syndicate, following mounting pressure from various political leaders and protesting students.

Delhi court rejects plea by Lalu, Rabri Devi for daily trial in IRCTC scam case

A Delhi court on Tuesday rejected the plea by former Bihar Chief Minister and Rashtriya Janata Dal (RJD) President Lalu Prasad Yadav and his wife Rabri Devi's against holding day-to-day trial in the IRCTC scam case in which they have been charged with criminal offences. Special Judge (PC Act) Vishal Gogne of the Rouse Avenue Courts said that their prayer was not maintainable, practicable or justified.

The fast track court said that the Constitutional courts have asked trial courts to expedite cases against Members of Parliament (MPs) and Members of Legislative Assemblies (MLAs), avoid adjournments and record evidence on a day-to-day basis. "The court is therefore disinclined to bind and restrict its future daily orders by introducing a negative direction inter alia "not listing the matter before one week after each hearing", as prayed by the applicants," Judge Gogne said.

The CBI charge is that Yadav and his family accepted prime land and shares as bribe for awarding contracts to a private firm when he was the Union Railway Minister.

Former TDB president N Vasu arrested in Sabarimala gold case

The SIT probing the missing gold from the Sabarimala temple arrested former Travancore Devaswom Board president N Vasu on Tuesday, sources said here. Vasu, who had also served twice as Commissioner of the TDB before being appointed its president, was arrested following his interrogation, they said. The arrest of Vasu, who is reportedly close to the top leadership of the State Government, is one of the high-profile arrests in the case. The Kerala High Court is monitoring the SIT probe.

He is an accused in the case relating to the disappearance of gold from the door frames of the sreekovil (sanctum sanctorum) of the hill shrine, sources said.

SC seeks EC response to pleas challenging SIR

The Supreme Court (SC) on Tuesday sought separate responses of the Election Commission of India (ECI) on pleas filed by DMK, CPI(M), West Bengal Congress and Trinamool Congress leaders challenging the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of the electoral rolls in Tamil Nadu and West Bengal respectively.

A bench of Justices Surya Kant and Joymalya Bagchi asked the poll panel to respond to the fresh petitions in two weeks.

The Supreme Court asked the Madras and Calcutta High Courts to keep in abeyance any proceedings on petitions challenging the SIR exercise in Tamil Nadu and West Bengal.

It also allowed the listing of an intervention application filed by the AIADMK in support of the SIR in Tamil Nadu.

During a brief hearing, senior advocate Kapil Sibal, appearing in the court for the ruling DMK in Tamil Nadu, said the exercise is being done hurriedly, without following the due process, and different sets of documents are being sought from voters.

He said the northeast monsoon in Tamil Nadu is always heavy during November-December and the coastal districts experience heavy to very heavy rains during this season.

"According to the meteorological department, this year, heavier rain than usual is predicted. Because of this, the common people will be preparing for the same and the revenue officials who are enlisted as BLOs, EROs, AEROs ELECTION COMMISSION will have to manage the flood relief as well. Hence, practically, this is not a conducive time for conducting the above exercises," Sibal said.

Justice Kant said in a country as big as India, some states will always face natural calamities. Sibal said there is very poor connectivity in certain areas of the southern state and there will be difficulties in uploading documents.

"Similarly, in West Bengal also, rural connectivity is very poor and much bad with regard to Tamil Nadu," he said. The bench said, "It appears that the case being projected before us is that for the first time, electoral rolls are being prepared. We also know the ground realities. There is a constitutional authority which is doing the exercise and it is mandated to do it. Earlier also, it has been done.'

Justice Kant said the problem is that everybody wants "status quo". Sibal said the petitioners want the EC to do its work but not in this fashion and hurriedly. The bench said political parties should not be apprehensive of the exercise and the EC will give all details related to it.

"If we are satisfied that there is something wrong, we will annul the entire exercise," the court said.

On the argument that different modalities are being adopted in Tamil Nadu, compared to what was followed in Bihar during the SIR exercise, the bench said it means that the EC has rectified its mistakes. Sibal said the Bihar SIR has nothing to do with the the fresh petitions and the

The CPI(M) has challenged the constitutional validity of the EC's directive to conduct the SIR in Tamil Nadu, terming the process 'arbitrary, illegal and unconstitutional".

Meanwhile, the AIADMK

has supported the poll panel's decision to conduct the SIR in the southern State, calling it a "legitimate and necessary" exercise to uphold the sanctity of elections and prevent voter fraud. On October 27, the EC announced the conduct of the second phase of the SIR in 12 States and Union territories between November and February next year. # Stubble burning worsening Delhi-NCR air quality levels, SC told

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE

Stubble burning has commenced in a big way with impunity in Punjab and Haryana leading to further worsening of air quality levels in Delhi-NCR, the Supreme Court was told on Tuesday.

A bench headed by Chief Justice BR Gavai, which is scheduled to hear the air pollution case on Wednesday, was urged by senior advocate Aprajita Singh, who is assisting the bench as an amicus curiae, that a response be sought from the Governments of Punjab and Harvana.

Singh referred to NASA satellite stubble burning in these two states has commenced and it is contributlevels in Delhi-NCR. "The Supreme Court orders are being flouted with Commission for Air Quality authorities must act proactively and not wait for pollution levels to reach a "severe" stage. Amicus curiae Singh had flagged media reports indicating that several air quality monitoring stations in Delhi were not functioning during the Diwali period. "There are newspapers after newspapers saying that monitoring stations are non-functional. If the monitoring stations are not even functioning, we don't even know when to implement GRAP (graded response action plan)... Out of 37 monitoring stations, only nine were functioning continuously on the day of Diwali," she said.

The amicus urged the bench to ensure that CAQM submits clear data and an action plan. She said the earlier orders mandated preemptive measures, rather than reactive steps, once pollution worsened. "The CAQM is required to place on record an affidavit as to

R Venkataramani: India's Attorney General for tumultuous times

New Delhi

When the President of India issued a notification on 26 September 2025 extending Ramaswamy Venkataramani's term as the Attorney General for India for another two years, it was more than a bureaucratic decision: it was a reaffirmation of trust in a man known for his quiet competence, sharp intellect and unimpeachable integrity. The extension, valid until 30 September 2027, signals the Government's faith in his ability to steer the nation through an increasingly complex and politically charged legal environment.

R Venkataramani's journey to the highest law office of the land is a story of perseverance, scholarship and deep respect for the rule of law. Enrolled as an advocate with the Bar Council of Tamil Nadu in 1977, he began his career with humility and hard work, soon moving to New Delhi to practice in the Supreme Court of India in 1979. His early years were shaped by his apprenticeship under the eminent constitutional expert, late PP Rao, Senior Advocate, whose influence left a lasting imprint on his legal philosophy. By March 1982, Venkataramani qualified as an Advocate-on-Record at the Supreme Court and in 1997, in recognition of his outstanding contribution to the legal profession, he was designated a Senior Advocate by the Supreme Court.

Appointed as Attorney General for India on 28 September 2022, Venkataramani brought with him decades of experience, deep constitutional insight and a reputation for restraint and clarity. His reappointment in 2025 comes at a time when the legal challenges facing the Government are multifaceted, spanning constitutional disputes, international arbitration, political litigation, and the fast-evolving ical personalities in recent memory, interface between law, technology and governance.

Attorney General of India, R. Venkatramani

Today's legal landscape is no longer confined to conventional courtroom arguments. It extends into the realm of governance, diplomacy and public perception. The Attorney General's office, as the principal legal advisor to the Government of India, stands at the intersection of law and politics.

Every legal opinion or court submission has the potential to shape not only judicial outcomes but also political narratives. Venkataramani's modesty and meticulous approach make him ideally suited for this high-stakes environment. His style, measured, reasoned and devoid of spectacle, has earned him both respect and trust in equal measure. The coming years will test his ability to navigate the complex and often turbulent waters of Indian politics and governance. The Modi administration, though led by one of the strongest politcurrently operates as a minority Government. This makes the role of the Attorney General especially critical, as he must delicately balance legal propriety with political pragmatism. In such circumstances, the Attorney General becomes more than just a lawyer, he becomes the moral compass of the administration's legal strategy, ensuring that the pursuit of political objectives remains within the bounds of constitutional discipline.

Venkataramani's challenge extends beyond domestic politics. On the international front. India faces increasing scrutiny over its compliance with trade pacts, investment treaties and environmental and human rights obligations. As global corporations and international bodies become more litigious, the Attorney General must not only defend India's interests in global forums but also ensure that its legal positions align with the principles of fairness and justice that have long defined its constitutional ethos. Acting as both lawyer and diplomat, he must maintain India's credibility abroad while safeguarding its

Within India, a surge of politically sensitive cases has blurred the line between law and ideology. The courts have become arenas where political battles are fought by other means. From electoral disputes and constitutional amendments to the validity of administrative actions, the Government faces legal challenges that can have profound implications for its longevity and legitimacy. Venkataramani's calm temperament and deep constitutional grounding will be indispensable in such moments.

Many in the legal community had anticipated a change of guard at the top law office earlier this year. Solicitor General Tushar Mehta, known for his aggressive courtroom style and articulate advocacy, was widely seen as the front-runner for the post.

However, sources reveal that when the decision reached the Prime Minister's desk, Narendra Modi preferred continuity and composure over confrontation. The choice of R Venkataramani over a more flamboyant alternative reflects Modi's instinct to rely on steady, unassuming competence, particularly crucial in a phase when legal stability underpins political survival. Behind Venkataramani's quiet demeanor lies a formidable intellect and an unwavering commitment to the institution of justice. Those who have worked with him describe him as a "lawyer's lawyer", deeply committed to the purity of legal reasoning, yet pragmatic enough to appreciate the compulsions of governance. His professional conduct, coupled with his personal simplicity, has earned him the confi-utive. Venkatramani, since his student legal identity; rather, it strengthens it by days, has held a reflective admiration for American legal institutions, attornevs and jurists who shaped them. Names such as John Marshall, Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr, Hugo Black, Earl Warren, Louis Brandeis, Benjamin Cardozo, Felix Frankfurter, William Storey, Thurgood Marshall, William Brennan, and, more recently Antonin Scalia, represent for him a wide philosophical spectrumwhere judicial reasoning is not merely technical but rooted in social conscience, moral clarity and constitutional faith.

He regards Attorney Generals like Robert F Kennedy, Elliot Richardson and Edward Levi as figures who demonstrated how law, when anchored in democratic values, can remain both principled and transformative.

For Venkatramani, the appeal of the American legal traditions lies not in replication but in the seriousness with which it attempts to balance liberty, accountability and judicial independence through interpretative discipline and institutional design. India, with its civilisational depth, constitutional vision, and the responsibility of delivering justice to over a billion people, requires legal systems that are transparent, humane and responsive to social complexity.

He has often emphasised that legal thinking must remain compassionate, historically aware, and connected to the lived experiences of ordinary citizens, rather than confined to academic abstraction. This belief continues to guide his intellectual and institutional engagements.

His aspiration is to foster thoughtful dialogue between legal cultures through comparative research programs, shared judicial training, and collaborative professional networks. Such engagement, dence of both the judiciary and the execin his view, does not weaken India's encouraging clarity, public trust and ethical responsibility.

Thus, his admiration for American juristic traditions is part of a broader commitment to renew and reinforce India's constitutional order, ensuring it remains resilient, purposeful and deeply anchored in the rights and aspirations of its people

In an era when the credibility of the legal profession is under strain, amid allegations of politicisation, judicial activism, and media trials: the Attorney General's role assumes symbolic importance.

He is the guardian of the Government's legal conscience, the voice that must uphold reason even in the heat of political rhetoric. For Venkataramani, this means ensuring that the Government's actions are not merely defensible in court but also justifiable in principle.

An insider in the Government recently remarked that it is Venkataramani's quiet professionalism and unassuming personality that have inspired the Prime Minister's confidence. In times when the country's legal institutions are often pulled between competing pressures from within and outside its borders, his steady hand offers reassurance.

R Venkataramani's reappointment, therefore, represents more than administrative continuity: it symbolises the Government's faith in sobriety over showmanship, diligence over drama, and principle over personality. As India's foremost law officer embarks on his extended tenure, the nation will look to him not only for legal guidance but also for moral steadiness amid the clamour of courtroom and political battles.

The next two years will not just define his legacy but may also shape the very contours of India's constitutional resilience.

Delhi bears the brunt of an explosion once again

The explosion is a grim echo of Delhi's violent past. It is a moment not for panic, but for resolve — to ensure such tragedies never repeat

Delhi is in a state of shock. Just when the people thought that Delhi was safe from explosions, a powerful blast near the Red Fort shattered that sense of security. Whether it was a terror attack or a technical glitch that caused the CNG tank in the car to explode, the effect was horrendous. In either case, complacency in governance cannot be ruled out.

For Delhi, it was a heartbreakingly familiar scene – one that revived the discomforting memories of past terror attacks that once shook the national capital. Preliminary reports suggest the blast originated from within the car, though at this point it is not clear what exactly caused the explosion – a bomb or a cylinder blast. Whether it was a mechanical failure, an accidental CNG explosion, or a deliberate act of terror remains unclear. Yet, the timing and intensity of the explosion - coming just hours after the recovery of nearly 2,900 kilograms of explosives in neighbouring Haryana - point towards the possibility of sabotage. Investigative agencies have not ruled out the involvement of a terror module. For Delhiites, this tragedy reopens old wounds. Delhi has endured a long and painful history of bombings – from the serial blasts of 2005 to the 2011 High Court explosion that claimed dozens of lives. Those incidents briefly united the city in grief and outrage, only to give way to complacency, allowing the lessons learned to blur. The capital remains vulnerable to old methods of destruction. If it was an act of terror, it was meticulously planned. The location of the blast - near the Red Fort – a site symbolic of India's independence and national pride, makes the act even more devastating, striking not just at human lives but at the country's collective sense of security. Beyond grief and anger, this moment demands action. The first step must be a transparent, meticulous investigation. Every piece of evidence – from the vehicle's remnants to surrounding CCTV footage - must be examined with scientific precision. The people of Delhi have a right to know – regular, credible updates, not speculation or secrecy. This is essential not only for justice but for restoring confidence in the state's ability to protect its people.

Equally important is a re-evaluation of urban security. High-density zones like Old Delhi, with their narrow lanes and chaotic traffic, require tailored strategies – stricter parking norms, periodic scrutiny of vehicles, and stronger inter-state coordination in monitoring suspicious movements. Public awareness campaigns, emergency drills, and citizen participation can make a significant difference.

Finally, there is a need for emotional and civic healing. As Delhi mourns the dead, it must also reaffirm its spirit – the unbreakable resolve of a city that has seen empires rise and fall, yet never surrendered to fear. The explosion near the Red Fort must not become another entry in the long list of tragedies that fade with time. It must become an incident where the city's vigilance was restored and people feel safe once again.

Faith, power, and nationhood in conflict

From British colonial manipulation to Partition, the story of India has been shaped by cycles of conquest, accommodation, and awakening. The roots of today's anxieties lie deep in this complex past

PRAFULL GORADIA

Questions such as whether our Constitution is secular or whether "Vande Bharat" is a patriotic or political slogan are not merely contemporary concerns; they are rooted in centuries of Indian history. To understand current controversies, one must go back to AD 1194, when Mohammad Ghori defeated Prithviraj Chauhan in the Second Battle of Tarain. Some trace the origins even further. Qaid-e-Azam Jinnah once claimed that Pakistan was born the day the first Hindu converted to Islam in the subcontinent.

Muslims came to India as conquerors, guests, or converts-few could claim native descent. Among the rulers, some were benevolent, others harsh, and a few destructive. The brightest phase came under Emperor Akbar, whose long and liberal reign brought a rare harmony to India. In contrast, Aurangzeb's intolerance marked the darkest chapter of Mughal rule.

A puzzling feature of Indian history is the absence of a united Hindu resistance to the Sultans and Badshahs of Delhi. Shivaji stands out for his courage and statecraft, yet his influence remained confined to the Deccan. Maharana Pratap, too, fought heroically against Akbar, but his struggle was limited to Mewar. A pan-Indian uprising never materialised. By the mid-18th century, the declining Mughal order gave way to new powers. The reckless Nawab of Bengal, Siraj-ud-Daulah, alienated his own officers and merchants, pushing them into alliance with the East India Company. Their support ensured Robert Clive's victory at Plassey in 1757, which opened the gates of Bengal to British domina-tion. Subsequent British victories-over Tipu Sultan in 1799 and the annexation of Awadh under Dalhousie-completed the dismantling of Muslim authority.

The Revolt of 1857 briefly shook British confidence. For a year, large parts of North India were aflame, but the uprising ended in defeat. In 1858, Queen Victoria assumed direct control, and two decades later, in 1877, she was proclaimed Empress of India. The British concluded that Muslims had been the principal instigators and punished them more severely

This perception deepened Muslim resentment and nostalgia for lost power. Sir Syed Ahmad Khan, founder of the Aligarh Movement, even argued that when the British eventually left, they should return India to the Muslims from whom they had taken it. Whether this was foresight or delusion remains debatable. Ironically, the Indian National Congress-often branded a "Hindu party" — was not formed by Hindus at all. It was founded in 1885 by a retired English civil servant, Allan Octavian Hume. Yet, by 1906, Muslims had established their own political platform-the All-India Muslim League-reinforcing the belief that while Hindus were traders and cultivators, Muslims were natural rulers. This sentiment persisted even after Mahatma Gandhi entered the scene in 1915.

Gandhi's early political strategy was curious. To bridge Hindu-Muslim divides, he supported the Khilafat Movement, launched by the Ali brothers — Mohammad and Shaukat — to restore the Ottoman Caliphate after World War I. Astonishingly, Gandhi even became President of the Khilafat Committee, formed to defend a Turkish sultan thousands of miles away. Many observers saw this as proof that political power in India still revolved around Muslim leadership. Gandhi's satyagraha, though morally compelling, appeared to many as nothing more than a The Pioneer moral appeal, not really a political SINCE 1865 challenge to imperial rule.

In 1940, at Lahore, Jinnah declared that Hindus and Muslims were "two distinct nations." No strong Indian voice publicly disputed this claim. When the premiers of Punjab and Bengal initially opposed Partition, Congress leaders quietly welcomed their stance, believing Jinnah's plan would fail. Yet, by May 1947, Mountbatten announced the Partition, confirming that Jinnah's vision had prevailed. Once again, Muslim political will had triumphed. Partition's aftermath was tragic and uneven. In Pakistan's western wing, Hindus and Sikhs were virtually wiped out by 1948. The eastern wing (now Bangladesh) saw its Hindu population fall from 33 per cent to barely 8 per cent. Migration was overwhelmingly onesided-millions of Hindus fled Pakistan, but few Muslims left India. The imbalance revealed the persistent perception that power and initiative in the subcontinent lay largely with Muslims, not Hindus.

This historical backdrop helps explain why, even today, debates such as the one surrounding "Vande Mataram" evoke old anxieties. Some Muslim leaders continue to act as if their community still sets the terms of national discourse. Such illusions are not merely harmlessthey perpetuate misunderstanding and hinder

India's past is too complex to be reduced to communal binaries. Both Hindus and Muslims have shaped its destiny, for better and for worse. Yet, national progress demands a sober recognition of facts, not romanticised memories of lost empires or imagined privileges. True secularism lies not in appeasement but in equal accountability. The maturity of a nation is measured not by the volume of its grievances but by its capacity to face history without distortion.

In the final analysis, "Vande Mataram' should not divide Indians; it should remind them of their shared soil and destiny. History may be scarred by conquest and division, but the future must rest on reason and reconciliation. Every citizen-Hindu, Muslim, or otherwise-must realise that the power to shape India's tomorrow lies not in nostalgia for the past, but in unity of purpose and respect for truth. Only then can the spirit of Vedanta-of oneness and universality — truly prevail.

The Ostrich Effect cripples classroom progress

SAKSHI SETHI

ND OPINION THE PIONEER

In classrooms across the country-urban or rural, elite or modest — there exists a peculiar breed of educators who have perfected the art of selective blindness. These are the practitioners of what might be called the Ostrich Effect: the time — honoured skill of ignoring inconvenient truths while claiming to see everything else with hawk-like precision. They can catch a whispered secret from the last bench with uncanny accuracy, yet fail to notice that half the class has mentally checked out. They spot a passing chit instantly but seem blissfully unaware that their lesson plan, crafted in the pre-smartphone era, now holds the relevance of a typewriter at a coding boot camp.

The Ostrich Effect isn't just a teaching quirk — it's a full-blown lifestyle choice. For some, every issue in the classroom is blamed on a supposed "decline in student discipline." When test results disappoint, the stars are at fault-Mercury's retrograde, Jupiter's misalignment, or, of course, the mythical "loss of moral values." Anything but the possibility that their own approach might need an update. Why explore creative methods or technology-enhanced learning when one can cling to the comforting familiarity of dictation drills and the age-old threat of "I'll call your parents"? The phenomenon shines brightest during classroom observations. Where reflective educators see feedback as a ladder for growth, the ostrich-style teacher perceives it as a personal attack. Suggest a more student-led activity, and the reaction is pure drama: "But this is how I've always taught!" they protest, mistaking longevity for excellence. It's the educational equivalent of bragging about 25 years of driving experience while routinely ignoring traffic lights. Experience, after all, means little without evolution.

Parent-teacher meetings provide yet another stage for this performance. These sessions-ideally moments for collaboration-often turn into exercises in intellectual gymnastics. Faced with poor test scores or unfinished work, some teachers twist and turn until blame lands squarely on the parents. "Your child lacks discipline at home," they declare, conveniently forgetting their own ungraded assignments or absence of meaningful feedback. The student sits there silently, still unsure about integers, hoping someone notices. But that would mean lifting one's head out of the sand, and we can't have that, can we? Even professional development workshops-those rare chances to refresh and reimagine teaching-are treated by some with theatrical disinterest. Arms crossed, faces blank, they endure new ideas as if attending a lecture on the history of paperclips. Student engagement strategies? Emotional intelligence? Digital tools? Surely, they must be fads. After all, if chalk-and-talk worked forty years ago, why change now? Yet, beneath the stubbornness lies something human: comfort. Familiar methods feel safe. Reflection feels risky. Acknowledging blind spots takes humility and humility is rarely comfortable. But education cannot thrive in comfort zones. Today's learners think, question, and process information differently. They need classrooms that evolve as quickly as the world around them.

If teaching is truly about preparing students for the future, then teachers must model adaptability, curiosity, and courage. The classroom is not a museum of traditions but a living ecosystem. It needs gardeners, not ostriches-educators who nurture growth, tend to changing needs, and take responsibility for what they cultivate. And, unlike ostriches, gardeners keep their heads up.

NATION GRIEVES AFTER RED FORT TERROR EXPLOSION

India is in mourning following the horrific car explosion near the Red Fort Metro Station in Delhi, which claimed over ten lives and left several injured. The powerful blast tore through a Haryana-registered vehicle parked near Gate No 1, leaving behind a trail of devastation. Flames engulfed nearby cars, shattered streetlights, and sent waves of panic through one of the capital's busiest heritage zones. Emergency services responded swiftly, rushing the injured to Lok Nayak Jai Prakash (LNJP) Hospital, with several victims in critical condition. Authorities have since declared a high alert across Delhi, Uttar Pradesh, Bihar, and Mumbai, tightening security at metro stations, markets, and religious sites. The attack serves as a grim reminder of the continuing threat posed by terrorism and the fragile calm that often follows such violence.

This tragedy must not be politicized. It's imperative that all parties rise above partisan divisions and stand united in confronting those who seek to spread fear and destruction. Only through solidarity, vigilance, and decisive action can the nation uphold peace and safeguard its citizens. In times of grief, unity must prevail over division, for national resilience is the greatest answer to terror.

May the victims find peace, and may the nation stand stronger in the face of adversity. Together, we must remain vigilant and committed to protecting the safety and harmony of our communities

COP30: Turning promises into action

The 30th United Nations Climate Change Conference (COP30), being hosted in the Amazonian city of Belém, is expected to deliberate on critical issues such as climate financing, the transition to green fuels, and the escalating global warming crisis. From catastrophic wildfires in California to recurring disasters across the Himalayan ecosystem, the spiralling effects of climate change have become deeply alarming. In this context, host nation Brazil's call to prioritise the implementation of earlier commitments-such as COP28's pledge to phase out fossil fuelsrather than introducing new targets-appears both timely and pragmatic.

Key initiatives like the "New Collective Quantified Goal" (NCQG) and the "Loss and Damage Fund," launched in previous summits, remain severely underfunded and largely non-binding. Furthermore, the earlier withdrawal of the United States from the Paris Climate Agreement, with former President Trump dismissing climate change as a "hoax," continues to cast a shadow over global unity.

A sharper focus on mitigation strategies, carbon trading mechanisms, and the timely achievement of Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) will be essential to respond meaningfully to the urgent appeals of climate activists like Greta Thunberg

A grim reminder of terror's state links

The primary question was answered in the affirmativeif this was someone else's operation executed using Pakistani nationals, then who was the real mastermind behind this terror attack? The truth soon came into the open. The moot point remains that terrorism is not merely religious; it often functions as an instrument of state policy, forming an integral part of statecraft and diplomacy between nations.

Pakistan-based co-conspirators, long involved in orchestrating devastating terror strikes such as the 2008 Mumbai attacks, now appear to have turned their focus elsewhere after Operation Sindhoor. Around 6:52 pm, a slow-moving car halted at a red light outside the Red Fort and exploded moments later. The powerful blast damaged nearby vehicles and triggered a fire that engulfed several others, causing casualties and chaos in the bustling area. Emergency services, including the Forensic Sciences team and the National Investigation Agency, rushed to the site, with the situation closely monitored. Fortunately, the Red Fort's light and sound show, Jai Hind, which dramatises India's journey from the 17th century to the present day, was closed for its weekly off. Had it been operational, the toll in human lives could have been far higher.

Chronic kidney disease threatens India

Chronic Kidney Disease (CKD) is rising rapidly across India, yet reliable national data remain unavailable. Experts are calling for a National Mission for Prevention and Early Detection to ensure timely diagnosis and treatment. Recent data from South Asia reveal that nearly 16 per cent of the population is affected-a grave public health concern.

India, now home to over 1.4 billion people, faces multiple health challenges, with CKD emerging as a major threat. Contributing factors include the high prevalence of diabetes and hypertension, pollution, toxic chemicals, and the country's hot climate.

Modern lifestyles have worsened the problem-diets high in sugar and salt, sedentary routines, and poor sleep due to work pressure and constant digital exposure all increase the risk. In some cases, genetic factors also play

Currently, dialysis and kidney transplantation remain the only treatments for kidney failure. Dialysis facilities are limited and costly, while organ shortages make transplants difficult. Although understanding of CKD is improving and modern medicines can slow its progression, many doctors are still unclear about when transplantation should be done.

Sustainable future through knowledge and innovation

The future will be shaped not just by what we know, but by how we choose to use that knowledge. Science gives us the tools; wisdom determines their purpose. When guided by ethics and inclusivity, science becomes a bridge between human aspiration and planetary well-being

SATENDRA SINGH

Science has always been the light that guides humankind through the darkness of the unknown. It is far more than a collection of data, laboratories, and formulae — it is a mindset, a way of looking at the world with curiosity, logic, and creativity. As the world celebrated 'World Science Day for Peace and Development' on November 10, 2025, under the theme "The Role of Science in Sustainable Societies," we are reminded that science shapes not just our technologies but our destiny — a destiny rooted in peace, equity, and sustainability.

Science as the Foundation of Human Advancement

From the moment humans discovered fire to the decoding of the human genome, the story of civilisation has been powered by science. It has been the engine behind every leap in understanding and innovation, but at its core, science is not merely about inven-- it is about improving lives and ensuring that progress does not rob future generations of their right to thrive.

The United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) provide a blueprint for global well-being, from eradicating poverty to ensuring clean energy and combating climate change. Every one of these 17 goals depends on science. Whether it is increasing agricultural productivity through biotechnology, designing vaccines that save millions, or creating cleaner energy systems, science provides the evidencebased tools needed to turn vision into reality. A truly sustainable society is one that listens to scientific insight and applies it wisely — growing food without degrading the soil, building cities without choking the air, and meeting human needs without harming the planet.

Science as the Key to a Sustainable World

Science allows humanity to understand how the Earth's systems — air, water, forests, and biodiversity-interconnect. It gives us the means to predict weather, conserve resources, and prepare for natural disasters.

India stands as a powerful example. The Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) has launched satellites that monitor monsoons, cyclones, and forest fires, while the India Meteorological Department (IMD) has significantly improved forecasting accuracy-saving countless lives.

Agricultural science, too, has evolved through innovations like climate-resilient crops and efficient irrigation systems. Initiatives like NICRA (National Innovations in Climate Resilient Agriculture) by ICAR are helping millions of farmers adapt to extreme climate changes and secure food for future generations. Renewable energy offers another shining example. India's transformation from a fossil-fueldependent economy to a renewable energy leader-through solar, wind, and green hydrogen-demonstrates how environmental challenges into opportunities.

Blending Traditional Wisdom with Modern Science

The path to sustainability is not limited to high-tech laboratories. It also runs through the fields, forests, and villages where generations have practised indigenous and validating this wisdom. Farmers combine traditional practices with digital weather forecasts and satellite-based advisories. Ayurveda and modern biomedicine are being integrated to offer holistic health solutions. When traditional knowledge and modern science work together, they create ecosystems that are both resilient and deeply rooted in culture.

Traditional knowledge systems-such as organic farming, rainwater harvesting, and herbal medicine-have long sustained communities in harmony with nature. Today, modern science is rediscovering and trust builds peace.

Science and Climate Action: A Global Responsibility

Climate change is the defining challenge of our time — and science is our most powerful ally. From uncovering the human causes of global warming to developing mitigation and adaptation strategies, scientific research has guided international science and policy can together turn action. Global collaboration has strengthened this effort. Nations share satellite data, co-develop early warning systems, and exchange knowledge about disaster preparedness. This is science diplomacy — where cooperation replaces conflict and shared understanding becomes the foundation for peace. India has been an active player in this movement. Initiatives such as the International Solar Alliance (ISA) and partnerships under SAARC and BIMSTEC showcase how scientific collaboration can build regional resilience. When nations connect through science, they build trust-

Science as a Bridge for Peace and Diplomacy

"Science for Peace" is not just a slogan; it is a philosophy. Scientific collaboration transcends political boundaries because the problems humanity faces — climate change, pandemics, natural disasters-do not recognise borders.

The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) stands as a symbol of this cooperation. Thousands of scientists across the world contribute to its reports, enabling leaders to make informed decisions for the planet's collective good. The COVID-19 pandemic further reminded the world that when scientists unite across continents, they can save lives faster than any army or treaty

Innovation, Industry, and the Path to Sustainability

Science fuels innovation-and innovation drives progress. Across India, young entrepreneurs and start-ups are using science to solve local problems: from recycling waste to developing renewable energy solutions and improving healthcare access. Programmes such as Start-up India and Atal Innovation Mission have nurtured a generation of innovators who view sustainability not as a constraint but as a catalyst for growth. The use of AI in flood prediction, drones in agriculture, and 3D printing in affordable housing are transforming communities. The future will belong to those who innovate responsibly — balancing economic ambition with ecological care.

Science Education and Public Awareness

For science to truly serve humanity, it must move beyond laboratories and reach every citizen.

Science education must be strengthened-particularly in rural and underserved areas — so that children grow up with curiosity and critical thinking. Promoting STEM education (science, technology, engineering, and mathematics) and encouraging more girls and women to pursue scientific careers will unlock vast reservoirs of talent.

However, beyond education, public engagement is essential. Citizen science projects, environmental clubs, and science fairs can help communities link their everyday actions — such as water conservation and waste segregation-to the broader global goals of sustainability. A scientifically literate society makes better decisions, demands accountability, and fosters an environment of rational problem-solving.

Science in Policy and Governance Effective governance must rest on evidence. From urban development to agriculture, policymaking informed by scientific data ensures efficiency and longterm impact. India's national institutions such as NITI Aayog and the NDMA already integrate research into public policy. Geospatial data, satellite imagery, and climate models are increasingly employed to design infrastructure that anticipates future risks. Strengthening the science-policy interface, where scientists and policymakers collaborate directly, is essential for creating adaptive and resilient systems of governance.

The Ethical Compass of Sciencee

As we celebrate the power of science, we must also recognise its ethical boundaries. The rapid advancement of artificial intelligence, genetic engineering, and nuclear research poses profound moral questions.

Science must always serve humanity, never threaten it. A sustainable society advances knowledge with humility and compassion, using discovery as a means to protect life, preserve dignity, and promote equality. Responsibility must guide every breakthrough.

A Common Vision for the Future The theme of World Science Day for

Peace and Development 2025-"The Role of Science in Sustainable Societies" reminds us that the future will be shaped not only by what we know, but by how we choose to use that knowledge.

Science provides us with the tools: wisdom determines their purpose. When guided by ethics and inclusivity, science becomes a bridge between human aspiration and planetary well-being.

It teaches us humility — for every answer leads to new questions, and every discovery to new responsibilities. Let us, therefore, commit to a culture that values inquiry, respects innovation, and ensures that science always serves peace and sustainability.

As Albert Einstein wisely said, "Peace cannot be kept by force; it can only be achieved by understanding." And understanding — the true essence of science remains humanity's greatest hope for a peaceful and sustainable future.

The Institute for Defence Studies and Analyses at 60: The making of strategic thought

UTTAM KUMAR SINHA

When India faced its defining strategic crisis in the early 1960s, it was compelled to rethink what security truly meant. The 1962 War with China exposed not only military shortfalls but also an absence of intellectual preparedness. The young republic, still discovering the grammar of power, realised that ideas could be as critical to defence as armies or arsenals. From that period of national introspection emerged an institution that would shape India's strategic imagination - the Institute for Defence Studies and Analyses, now the Manohar Parrikar IDSA. Its establishment in 1965 marked India's decision to think systematically about power in a turbulent world.

The Institute's origins lie in a series of encounters abroad. In May 1964, Defence Minister YB Chavan and Defence Secretary PVR Rao travelled to Washington, DC. seeking ideas to modernise India's defence planning. There, they encountered the RAND Corporation — an institution that applied mathematical precision to questions of war and strategy. RAND's systemsanalysis methods, championed by Robert McNamara's "whiz kid" Alain Enthoven, demonstrated how data and models could inform complex military decisions. Soon after, Enthoven was invited to New Delhi, where he proposed that India should establish its own RAND. Almost simultaneously, Alastair Buchan, the founding director of London's Institute for Strategic Studies (now IISS), arrived with a very different idea. Buchan viewed strategy as conversation — an exercise in context, interpretation, and policy dialogue rather than equations. Between these two approaches, India chose the latter. Lacking the resources for RAND's computational rigour but drawn to the British tradition of policy debate, it adopted the IISS model. That decision gave the Institute its defining temperament — conceptually rich and intellectually vibrant, yet marked by a persistent absence of quantitative rigour that continues to shape its analyses

The mid-1960s were a charged moment in Indian politics. With Nehru gone and Lal Bahadur Shastri navigating post-war anxieties, national confidence required renewal. The 1965 War with Pakistan revived military morale but also exposed the need for coher- promise India's sovereignty and erode its ent strategic planning. It was in this environment — uncertain yet purposeful — that the idea of an autonomous research body took form: one that could advise, critique, and think alongside the state while remaining independent of it.

On November 11, 1965, IDSA was formally registered as a society, with Major General Som Dutt — fresh from a fellowship at the IISS and formerly Commandant of the Defence Services Staff College, Wellington — as its first Director. During his London tenure, he authored two notable Adelphi Papers: The Defence of India's Northern Borders and India and the Bomb. In the latter, written soon after China's detonation of three atomic devices in 1966, he argued that India might one day need its own nuclear capability to maintain Asia's strategic balance.

Within three years, the Institute launched its first publication — the IDSA Journal. In his foreword, Home Minister YB Chavan captured the spirit of a changing era: "In this nuclear age, traditional principles The Pioneer of military operations begin to be in doubt... previous tenets of SINCE 1865 national security have to be reexamined and fresh ones evolved."

It was a declaration of intellectual independence - questioning, analytical, and unafraid. The inaugural issue featured PVR Rao's essay on "National Defence Policy and the Higher Direction of War" and Lieutenant General GG Bewoor's study on "High Altitude Mountain Warfare," laying the groundwork for India's emerging defence discourse. Bewoor would later become the Army's eighth Chief

Under K Subrahmanyam, IDSA began to forge a distinct intellectual identity within India's strategic community. A civil servant, Subrahmanyam returned in 1968 after a stint at the London School of Economics and a study tour of US institutions — joining first as Director (Programme) and soon after

At a time when open debate on national security was rare, he transformed IDSA into a forum of rigorous inquiry, insisting that it hold no official line but embrace diverse viewpoints. He often remarked that the Institute's true strength lay in its ability to sustain disagreement with dignity.

That ethos was tested almost immediately. In 1968, as the world's major powers - the United States, Soviet Union, and United Kingdom — advanced the draft of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT), India faced a critical policy dilemma. At IDSA, the debate was both intense and illuminating. Some argued that accession to the NPT would comstrategic autonomy, while others viewed participation as a constructive step towards reinforcing global norms of nuclear restraint. The Institute, true to its founding ethos, refrained from adopting an institutional position, allowing individual scholars to articulate their analyses independently. This pluralism of thought not only enriched the discourse but also underscored IDSA's enduring commitment to intellectual freedom and analyt-

The Pioneer

Among those who advanced this legacy were PR Chari and Jasjit Singh, who deepened IDSA's analytical influence through their scholarship and policy engagement. Later, K Santhanam brought a markedly different sensibility to the Institute. A nuclear scientist by training, Santy, as he was fondly known, had been part of the quartet that orchestrated India's 1998 nuclear tests alongside R Chidambaram, Anil Kakodkar, and APJ Abdul Kalam. When he took over as Director from 2001 to 2004, he infused into IDSA a scientist's discipline — rooted in modelling, systems thinking, and quantitative analysis - dimensions the Institute had long underplayed. If Subrahmanyam, the civil servant-scholar, had endowed IDSA with conceptual depth and a culture of debate, Santy sought to complement it with empirical precision. Both exemplified a shared conviction that India's strategic thought must remain informed, autonomous, and unswayed by political expediency.

This intellectual autonomy yielded a substantial corpus of scholarship. In 1977, Strategic Analysis was launched as a monthly journal, later transitioning into a peerreviewed quarterly in 2002 and, in partnership with Routledge, into a bi-monthly publication in 2007. Over the decades, it has become a principal forum for India's security discourse, publishing influential analyses on nuclear policy, regional strategy, intelligence reform, and military modernisation.

Sixty years on, the Institute's founding purpose endures. Yet, despite its considerable contributions, IDSA has been slower to integrate quantitative and interdisciplinary methodologies into its research framework. This methodological gap continues to constrain the infusion of empirical rigour and analytical precision into India's strategic studies a limitation that future scholarship must consciously address.

Twin glitches in India's sky

AJAY S JASRA

Two breakdowns in aviation rarely occur together by chance; it's like lightning striking the same place twice. When Delhi's Automatic Message Switching System (AMSS) failed recently, slowing air traffic operations to a crawl, several pilots also reported GPS anomalies over northern Indiasignals suggesting possible spoofing of satellite navigation data. Though officially unconnected, the two events are uncomfortably close in time. In a world where both digital and satellite networks can be disrupted-intentionally or indirectly-this coincidence warrants deeper investigation rather than a quick technical explanation.

The AMSS is the nerve centre of air traffic communication, routing flight plans and operational messages between control towers, airlines, and radar units. It functions much like the WhatsApp of aviation, instantly linking every element of the airspace network. When it fails, controllers revert to manual procedures-typing and reading flight data line by line-slowing traffic and increasing workload. Around the same time, aircraft over India and nearby regions reported intermittent GPS errors and position shifts, classic signs of spoofing. Reports of GPS interference near the India-Pakistan border further strengthen the possibility of deliberate interference by state or non-state actors. Pilots flying along certain northern corridors have noted erratic readings, and the Directorate General of Civil Aviation (DGCA) has reinstated traditional Instrument Landing Systems at Delhi to ensure redundancy when satellite signals are unreliable. In this context, the overlap of a major ground-system failure and a navigation disturbance cannot be dismissed as mere coincidence. The geopolitical proximity to conflict-sensitive regions makes the possibility of spill-over interference entirely plausible. Spoofing, unlike simple jamming, does not block a signal but imitates it. Fake satellite transmissions trick onboard computers into accepting false coordinates, distorting position data. For pilots, this may cause the aircraft symbol to drift on the navigation display, the map to jump, or warnings of "position disagree" to appear.

Such interference has become a global hazard. Data compiled by the international pilot and controller forum OPSGROUP shows a dramatic rise in spoofing incidents-from roughly 300 daily flight disruptions in early 2024 to about 1,500 per day by mid-year. Over one month last summer, more than 41,000 flights worldwide were affected by navigation deception or signal loss. Independent analytics by Aireon and WTW also confirm that cases of jamming and spoofing have risen by more than 60 per cent since 2021. The surge aligns closely with regions under military tension-particularly the Middle East, the Black Sea, and parts of Eastern Europe-where electronic warfare systems are routinely deployed to mislead drones or missiles, with civil aircraft becoming collateral victims. International regulators have long warned of this trend. The European Union Aviation Safety Agency (EASA) has documented the spread of GNSS interference and urged a unified European response. Its 2024 advisory called for centralised monitoring networks and pilot training in recognising spoofing symptoms.

The International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO) recently highlighted GNSS disruption as a rising "safety-of-flight risk" and urged continuous reporting by air navigation service providers, OPS GROUP identified multiple safety concerns and operational risks, noting that spoofing is now common and often impacts several aircraft simultaneously. The Delhi incident reveals broader systemic vulnerabilities, as increased automation in aviation, while efficient, creates dangerous dependence on complex technology. A simultaneous failure of ground networks and satellite links greatly reduces the chances for human intervention. The way forward globally is being defined: ICAO, EASA, and IATA advocate creating real-time GNSS interference monitoring cells-akin to weather centres-to issue alerts swiftly. Airlines are advised to train crews to cross-check navigation sources, maintain proficiency in radio-based navigation, and log interference systematically. Airports are reinforcing conventional aids (VOR, DME, ILS) for non-satellite redundancy. Crucially, regulators must treat simultaneous system failures as credible scenarios, not hypotheticals. With dense airspace, overlapping civil-military operations, and proximity to hightension borders, India cannot afford to treat GNSS disruptions as distant or occasional events. A joint civil-military monitoring cell under the DGCA and the Airports Authority of India should integrate pilot reports, satellite analytics, and ground data into a real-time alert network. Strengthening indigenous navigation systems such as NavIC and the GAGAN satellitebased augmentation system will also reduce dependence on foreign GPS signals, enhancing both safety and self-reliance. Delhi's recent turbulence may be a temporary hiccup, but the lesson endures. "Coincidence" isn't an adequate explanation for the simultaneous failure of two critical aviation systems in an era of hybrid warfare. The silence carries an urgent question: what truly happened when India's messages stopped and its satellites started lying?

The Dioneer

BLASÉ CAPITAL WHIRLING POOL

Private-equity firm Advent International is reportedly interested in buying a 31 per cent stake in Whirlpool of India, and take over the company. If a deal is clicked, it may mark a pivotal shift in the large-appliances segment. The billion-dollar purchase may trigger an open offer to the existing shareholders, and make Advent a majority owner. Whirlpool of India will undergo a strategic reset, as the global parent moves away from operational control to focus on licensing arrangement, brand management, and technology agreement.

The new majority owner, if it achieves this objective, will bring higher capital, hopefully sharper focus on Indiaspecific products, closer alignment with local consumers, and faster-paced innovation. But a private equity player will need to access technology, and product lines from the parent, or through partnerships with competitors. There is a signal that the global Whirlpool may be interested in the Indian market, but does not want a solid footing.

An important emerging and crucial factor in the appliances segment is the acceleration of the upgrade cycle. Valued at more than $75 billion, the business is likely to grow at a compounded annual rate of more than seven per cent. As the Indian consumers move from basic models to inverter-compressor refrigerators, fully-automatic smart washing machines, larger capacity units, and connected appliances brands need to refresh line-ups, launch India-specific models, and introduce new features regularly and quickly.

A change in Whirlpool of India's ownership may set the stage for faster product roster, which will perhaps include shifting from global templates to local-market priority models. The new products may emphasise features such as Wi-Fi connectivity, energy-efficiency, smart-diagnostics, and penetration into smaller cities and towns. The deal can open new doors of manufacturing and localisation. In India, appliances remain in a phase of structural opportunity with rising urbanisation, increasing electricity access, e-commerce channel growth, and policy support for local manufacturing.

Whirlpool has an existing manufacturing footprint, which may expend under the new ownership. There can be efforts to drive cost efficiencies, reduce import dependence, and speed up time-to-market. This is critical as competitors are doing the same. Haier Appliances India, for example, recorded revenues of ₹8,900 crore in 2024, and hopes to add another ₹2,500 crore in 2025. It plans to have a new manufacturing facility in the south

The Whirlpool deal, therefore, may enhance these broader shifts in the segment, with global players willing to either step up local manufacturing, or step back a bit, and hand over control to either capital-specific, product-specific, or tech-specific players. For the consumers, these moves may translate into faster introduction of premium models, stronger service networks, even in the smaller cities, and improved spare-parts and maintenance support.

Private equity players have shown considerable in select Indian sectors in the recent past. They bring in capital, but have the ability and flexibility to forge constructive partnerships with existing businesses. The opportunities exist as the appliance market is under-penetrated in many categories such as large-capacity fridges, and smart washers, and is ready-and-steady for heady growth. The entry of structured investments suggests that the capital-focused players believe that there is an intrin-

The strategies can be varied or multi-disciplinary, and include operational improvement, product differentiation, and distribution expansion. For instance, Reliance Retail acquired the Kelvinator brand from Sweden's Electrolux as part of its push into consumer durable. Reliance and other Indian firms wish to buy a slice of the Haier India, which may be valued at two billion dollars, or more. The market is in a phase of consolidation, globallocal re-balancing, and feature-led competition, rather than volume-led growth.

On the demand side, consumers are ready for the next wave of technology-led home appliances. The urge to upgrade, higher disposable incomes, faster replacement cycles, and expansion in smaller cities create a favourable backdrop. But there are likely to be execution risks for the companies. Hence, new owners need to deliver on manufacturing, product roll-outs, service networks, pricing discipline, and consumer trust. In markets like India, this is not easy. The practicality of the potential is invariably a question-mark.

Powerful brands like LG and Samsung lead in the premium segments, and advertise AI features, smarthome integration, and large-door configurations. Whirlpool of India's financials are not-so-good, as indicated by its second quarter results in this fiscal year. Revenues from operations were down almost four per cent, net profits declined by more than 20 per cent, and EBIDTA margins squeezed from over five per cent to 3.5 per cent. The last suggests "challenges in maintaining its operational efficiency during the quarter.

The stock price of the company indicates pressures, and decline in investors' interest. Although the returns over the past one month were over seven per cent, the figure for six-month returns was a negative two per cent, more than 30 per cent year-to-date, more than 35 per cent in the past 12 months, and more than 40 per cent in the past five years. The 52-week high and low has wildly fluctuated between ₹900 and more than ₹2,000. On November 11, 2025, the share price slipped from ₹1,290 to ₹1,248. For investors, the question is whether the financial and stock fortunes will change with the change in ownership. If yes, the Advent-Whirlpool deal can spur the launch of next-generation appliances in India.

Expectation, solution, governance

study on ESG (Environmental, Social, and Governance) finds that such corporate concerns are on the rise. Among 89 large firms in the survey, the ESG-related KPIs (Key Performance Indicators) have increased to 100, a 30 per cent rise in seven years. Media mentions of ESG have soared more than 50 times in a decade (2014-24), even as venture capital and private equity investments in ESG measurement businesses took off by 37 times. "Yet, the rapid proliferation of ESG checklists has crowded out CEO agendas, leading to ESG fatigue," states the survey. Firms are being pulled in opposing directions.

One of the major problems that the global firms face is to find opportunities that align with solutions to local-social issues. Some of the them overstretch, and take on too many issues, which is visible among Indian firms CSR (Corporate Social responsibilities) activities, which may be distinct from, but related to, ESG. Finding solutions require specific tailor-made partnerships that are hard to find, difficult to execute, or tough to sustain. Expectations are generally short-term among the firms, which limit the options. Returns on ESG investments materialise over a long period. Criteria related to capabilities, and incentives determine the role played by a specific firm. Hence, the ESG fit includes alignment with products, services, and supply lines. Viability is crucial, and in cases where the end users cannot pay directly, there is a need for third-party support. The regulatory and policy environment can impact the environment and ecosystem of a company. Such issues require clarity, streamlined permitting, or cross-sector coordination. In most instances, among the three factors stated, there is a mismatch. Companies that meet the first (capabilities) but not the second (viability) need narrower focus, better collaborations, and long-term outlook. "Conversely, when all three factors align, business-led solutions flourish rapidly," states the report.

This three-cornered adjustment is dubbed by McKinsey as "horses for courses." The horses are, of course, the companies that can enhance their innovating and scalability only if matched to the right issue, or course. The survey concludes that large companies account for 30 per cent of the value at stake in accelerating progress across 18 issues, and this roughly equal to their share of the global GDP. This is dependent on the share of valueadded that provides more of the goods and services. The same is true of negative externalities like emissions, which too is measured in terms of the share of the total.

In 10 out of the 69 industries The Pioneer analysed, there were capabilities to make them the leasing candidates SINCE 1865 to progress on four or more of the 18 issues, and 41 industries had the skills to address merely 1-3 issues. This forces firms to focus narrowly on some issues, which impact the industry in a distorted manner compared to its size. This is the need of the day. "For example, healthcare providers generate just four per cent of revenues across large companies overall, but they could account for 35 per cent of the progress to improve maternal and neonatal health, 25 per cent to reduce non-communicable diseases, 25 per cent to improve mental health, and eight per cent to reduce communicable diseases," states the report.

Such effects can be large relative to the industry's size in dollar terms. In non-communicable diseases, the intervention investments can be $1 trillion over and above the recent historical rate, of which roughly two-thirds is linked to pharma efforts. This represents a business opportunity that is 40 per cent of the current revenues of large pharma companies. In transportation infrastructure, the additional money required is $70 billion, of which a quarter goes is one per cent of current revenues for the large firms in these two segments. The figure is modest but represents significant opportunities.

Obviously, the main hurdle to find the investment sources. McKinsey finds that to enhance progress on the 18 issues to the levels in nations that made the most progress requires $6 trillion, which is three times the profits earned by Fortune Global 500 companies in 2024. This is an "insurmountable hurdle," unless the society and nations decide to allocate massive public funds, and other resources. Governments need to intervene actively, as do state-owned entities, as the benefits far outweigh the costs in the long run. In essence, the efforts do pay off admirably, but "often only over decades.'

Thus, the think tank pinpoints nations where an issue of the 18 is most prevalent, and clustered them around the prevailing economic contexts such as nations being exiting poor, accelerating empowerment, and transforming mature systems. However, the benefit-to-cost ratios can vary widely between the different contexts, with the issues with the highest annual costs being most prevalent in the high-income nations. Such ratios can help guide the policy-makers, and the firms. The metrics cannot capture everything, especially non-economic factors, and discount rates used. A five per cent rate can be ideal, though it is high for social investments, and low for corporate money. But no standards exist.

"A capabilities-based, horses-for-courses approach requires identifying where and how companies are best suited to address social issues. History is chockablock with examples of the many ways in which companies find business opportunities, all of which have structural similarities when it comes to advancing innovation, and scaling or making business models work in the interests of the societal needs, to help society under many different circumstances. In some cases, companies can act immediately. In others, policy interventions and collaborations are required to adjust the conditions, and enable private-sector participation. Whether to do so is a societal choice about funding, regulation, and coordination," the study concludes, and leaves the crucial questions open.

One of the successes cited in the study is that of Reliance Jio, which began the 4G rollout in 2013. Within two years, India launched the Digital India initiative, which aimed to connect 250,000 villages. The next year, Jio went live nationwide, and offered six months of free 4G data and voice services. In 2017, the Government reduced inter-company charges, which lowered mobile plans. JioPhone was priced at $20, and 80 million units were sold. By 2021, interconnection charges were abolished. In 2023, JioPhone Next, built with Google, and costing less than $50, was targeted at 500 million users. There was an additional $12 version of the model for the poor. Thus, "expanding Internet access rapidly... was spurred by a dynamic iteration of improved technology... and government policy, resulting in low-cost option that delivered access to hundreds of millions.'

Most people say that Belem, which hosts COP30 multilateral meet, is a spectacularly beautiful place in Brazil. The event marks the 30th edition of a global alliance, which wants to mitigate the effects of Climate Change, and tackle the looming crisis. Predictably, soon after he was elected for a second term, the US President Donald Trump withdrew his country from the 2015 Paris Agreement. He did the same during his first tenure. Nevertheless, the Brazilian event will continue, even as it struggles to

Like most institutions, which are either governed directly or indirectly by the United Nations, its future faces challenges. For India, events like COP30 are of extreme importance for various factors. One, they trigger old and haggard arguments about the double standards, and hypocrisy of the West in Climate Change issues. Two, there is the growing pressure from global activists, actively aided and abetted by what I would call the brown sepoys. Three, although India is successful, particularly since the signing of the Paris Agreement, to grow its share of renewable production, and consumption increases rapidly, it faces stark choices. Despite the successes, the pressures and Academician are mounting. In an article, Anurabha Ghosh, a leading activist, wrote, "The time for promises is now over. COP30 must mark the shift from a bank of promises to a bank of actions where delivery not declarations mark progress. Nowhere is this more important than in South Asia, a region on the front lines of clear climate crisis.... For India, climate action is both a necessity and an opportunity.... But for it to succeed, the world must come together through smarter, more inclusive multilateralism.'

Of course, as is the case with global activists, the voice is eloquent, articulate, and passionate. But India's choices cannot be dictated only by the western or global concerns. For example, take the case of the increasing pressure to reduce the use of thermal energy, or of electricity generated by coal. In contrast, the European nations, which are not openly hostile to the Paris Agreement like the US, adopt a peculiar stance on energy sources. As far as they are concerned, natural gas is good, but coal is dirty, old, and polluting. It is ironic that gas, like coal, is a fossil fuel, and no matter how one spins it, or liquefies it, gas remains a polluting fuel. One cannot condone the use of one, and condemn the other. Obviously, everyone does not buy the argument. An environmentalist, Sunita Narain of the Center for Science and Environment, pertinently asks: "Why single out coal? Why not natural gas, which is also a fossil fuel, and emits gases that contribute to global warming? I know, I am asking an inconvenient question. But bear with me. I do so, knowing that we need to drastically cut greenhouse gas emissions, and fast. But we need clarity on what we are doing and why?' Now, Narain is not a fan of Prime Minister Narendra Modi, or the ruling regime. She is not a fan of coal, or Trump. When the US president says that Climate Change is a hoax, and a fraud, Narain asks the reasons to single out coal vis-à-vis gas. She is merely harping on the fact that it is unjust, and cruel to impose restrictions on energy use on the third world

Should India cope or cop-out?

The Pioneer

Narain has pointed that the average electricity consumption of an American is 36 times that of an average Indian household. Hence, as the Indian economy grows rapidly, emerges as the fastest-growing major economy in the world, millions will walk out of a life of poverty and destitution, and become part of the new aspirational Indian middle-class generation. These are families that have never used a refrigerator, mixer, or microwave oven, forget about a washing machine, dishwasher, or other gadgets. They need electricity, whatever may be the source, and coal is most obvious

But the brown sepoy of the global activists have other arguments. They want India to give up coal, adopt gas in the interim period, and accelerate the production and use of renewables, and green energy. While this may be a fine argument for the Europeans, and even the US, which have access to gas, it does not suit India. While India sits comfortably visà-vis targets for green sources, its energy demand is high. At least for the next decade or so, it cannot give up on coal. At present, India produces a billion tonnes of coal a year, and imports 200 million tonnes. India has the fifth largest reserves of coal in the world, and half of the power and electricity generated is based on coal. This figure is likely to remain the same till 2030. Hence, it is virtually impossible for India to forsake coal, and choose gas and green sources, if it wishes to maintain high GDP growth. Even if one agrees with the argument, where will the gas come from?

Most of the coal is locally produced, but the country has minimal gas sources. Hence, it will need to import huge quantities every year. Apart from the infrastructure costs, and issues of energy security, it will distort the current account deficit, and balance of payments. Just imagine the dollar value of importing gas equivalent a billion tonnes of coal! No government can take such a decision. It is economic harakiri, and political suicide for a ruling political party.

Well, the next level of argument is that India needs to be a global poster boy, and reduce energy use through efficiency, and efficacy. For example, in heated discussions that the author has had with activists, the latter contend that there is no need to supply electricity to the poor and dark areas by using coal. Let these old, pristine communities live the way they do. Push more welfare schemes, and provide them with social security. Make sure that they get the basic amenities like food and drinking water, apart from healthcare and education, and higher incomes, minus the electricity.

I find it strange. Well, I may not matter, but the Indian policy-makers will need to juggle with this kind of arguments, and activism, which may seem to border on the unusual. This explains why each time a coal mine licence is given, or a thermal plant construction begins, there are waves of protests. But then India cannot afford to let its guard down, and needs to ensure its economic interests. Global activists, and their brown sepoy backers will continue to question.

Addressing the Urban Waste Crisis in India

GUPTA KHARE Unfortunately, one of the most prominent features of our urban landscape is overfilled landfills and garbage strewn everywhere. Every single day Indian cities produce 1.6 - 1.7 lakh tonnes of waste of which only half is processed. Treating just 50 per cent of this organic fraction through able financial model.

India's waste is a category by itself and collecting and desegregating it is a challenge. Urban local bodies must institutionalise waste segregation, including waste from temples, cattle yards, vegetable markets, ensure that non-organic waste, goes for energy recovery or recycling and channel wet organic waste towards biogas generation.

In fact, we need a mission for all components of waste including plastic, bio medical, industrial, e-waste, paper/cardboard/ glass etc. This is essentially a management problem.

Tipping/transport fee payment to decentralised biogas plants could produce more than 15 million tonnes of CBG annually. Yet cities still rely on open dumping and low-grade composting.

The volume of waste is going to dramatically rise in the coming years with growing urbanisation. It is estimated that India may need over 60,000ha of new landfill space which itself is going to be almost impossible to find. Meanwhile, this continues to emit deadly methane which is more than 25 times more potent than the CO<sub>2</sub> and poisonous leachate trickles to pollute ground water. We are witnessing a literally rising crisis which threatens to reach monumental proportions.

There have been some attempts to collect and process this waste over the years. Many have projects have failed, initially due to technology issues but also due to lack of support from the concerned the collector, segregator and aggregator is necessary to make waste collection viable and reach the processor in segregated form. Land has to be provided for processing plants. The bio gas that will be produced has to be fed into the city gas grid and a proper price paid to the injector developer.

The organic material that remains or digestate can be used as soil enhancer in municipal gardens, parks golf courses and even packaged and sold for urban gardens. We must learn from best practices and what failed where and how. We cannot continue to spend crores of rupees in collecting and transporting such waste to ever increasing landfills only to keep potential energy locked in high landfills. Landfills must be cleared and cities reimagined as circular hubs.

The developers will provide an treatment plants (STPs) are in operation, with hundreds more under construction under flagship missions like Namami Gange and AMRUT. Unfortunately, most large STPs lack anaerobic digesters for sludge treatment. The biogas cannot be taken out.

Where there are digesters most either flare the gas or leave the units under-utilised since there is no mandate to recover and use biogas or CBG in new STPs. This is a waste in waste. If anaerobic digestion is optimised, sewage can produce 5-10 million tonnes of CBG while recycling over 80 per cent of wastewater, which itself is og great value because of the water crisis which is beginning to overwhelm urban India.

The Liquid Waste Management Rules must go beyond drainage and septage to mandate biogas recovery from sewage and organic waste. All STPs above 10 MLD capacity should include anaerobic digesters and plans for gas utilisation which should get suitable incentives. This gas can also be injected into the city gas distribution system. There is a great opportunity waiting to be realised. It requires a bold approach and a clear declaration that we will clean our cities.

Tech-led smart agriculture key for building Viksit Bharat: Niti Aayog member

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA ■ New Delhi

Technology-led smart agriculture holds the key to building a Viksit Bharat, Niti Aayog member Ramesh Chand said on Tuesday.

"The agri-tech landscape is evolving rapidly, from genetic modification and precision farming to data science and ICT-based advisory systems," Chand said, while addressing an Assocham event here.

He said farmers today must have access to capital, knowledge and partnerships that enable them to adapt to this transformation, according to "Every technology brings both a solution and a challenge; we must ensure innovation also respects sustainability and environmental balance," Chand said, adding that India is not just a foodsecure nation, but one moving towards value addition and climate-smart agriculture. The Niti Ayog member said 46 per cent of the the country's population is employed in the agricultural sector, making it the largest contributor to the Viksit Bharat mission, with significant growth observed in tier-II regions such as Assam and Madhya Pradesh.

Agriculture Commissioner Praveen Kumar Singh said the focus must be on making agriculture both productive and sustainable. Platforms like upag.gov.in are integrating agri statistics, Fasal Bima, crop yield and Kisan Credit Card data should be used to ensure informed decisionmaking, he said.

Waste-to-wealth initiatives, such as converting crop residues into CBG and schemes like KUSUM, are linking energy efficiency with crop cultivation. "With digital agriculture and real-time intelligence, we are working to make data available in farmers' local languages, enabling every farmer to benefit from technology driven solutions," he added.

Net equity flows in MF schemes drop by 19% in October

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

Net inflows into mutual funds' equity schemes dropped by nearly 19 per cent to ₹24,690 crore in October, making it the third consecutive month of a decline in the number, an industry body said on Tuesday. On the systematic investment plans (SIPs), the preferred vehicle of retail investors, the overall inflows grew to ₹29,529 crore from September's record high of ₹29,631 crore.

Amid the rally in gold prices, gold exchange traded funds saw net inflows at ₹7,743 crore during the month taking the overall assets under management (AUM) in the category to above ₹1 lakh crore, as per data disclosed by the Association of Mutual Funds of India (Amfi). The long-term value creation and hence tracked closely, stood at ₹35.16 lakh crore as on October 31 as against ₹33.68 lakh crore in the month-ago period. As per previous experience, the beginning of a new quarter saw higher interest in the debt schemes, with net inflows of ₹1.59 lakh crore in October as against an outflow of ₹1.01 lakh crore in September, Chalasani The overall MF industry's AUM rose by over 5 per cent to ₹79.88 lakh crore on the back of the positive activity in the debt segment.

On the gold ETFs front, the net inflows reduced to ₹7,743 crore in October from ₹8,363 crore in September, and the AUM stood at ₹1.02 lakh crore. Chalasani attributed the continued investor interest in the precious metal to the price increase net flows into equity MFs in the spot prices and also had declined 9 per cent on-month to ₹30,421 crore in September, after August's 22 per cent decline to ₹33,430 crore, amid corrections in the equity benchmarks.

Speaking to reporters on Tuesday, Amfi's chief executive V N Chalasani asserted that there is no pattern in the investor interest and attributed the fall to higher redemptions because of the profit-booking amid surge in markets. The overall redemptions stood at ₹38,920 crore in October as against ₹35.982 crore in September. However, the funds mobilised by equity schemes declined in October to ₹63,611 crore from ₹66,404 crore in September. The AUM for the equity schemes, which are looked as the favoured vehicle for its value as a safe haven asset. He said the silver ETFs also saw an inflow of over ₹3,000 crore and the category AUM now stands at over ₹42,000 crore, he said. Chalasani said the SIP AUM grew to ₹16.25 lakh crore and now contributes over a fifth of the overall industry's AUM. The total number of active SIP accounts rose to 9.45 crore from 9.25 crore in the month-ago period, he added.

The total number of SIP accounts stands at 9.73 crore, he said, pointing out that there were additions of 60 lakh accounts and 45 lakh account closures as well during the month, On the micro SIPs or chhota SIPs front, where the regulator Sebi has voiced concerns on

Indigenous apps and platforms add to the definition of swadeshi

ASHWANI MAHAJAN

These days, the entire leadership of the country, including Prime Minister Narendra Modi, is constantly urging citizens to adopt Swadeshi. The Prime Minister says that no country can develop as long as it remains dependent on other countries. To reduce this dependence, citizens must use indigenous products. However, we know that the general public uses not only indigenous products but also a variety of services.

In recent years, due to new technologies, the use of various foreign apps has increased. WhatsApp for messaging, general calling and video calls; Facebook and Instagram for social networking; Google's Gmail for email; Google Maps for navigation; Amazon, Flipkart-Walmart for shopping and a variety of other apps have seen a tremendous growth in usage. Google charges hefty fees for downloading many apps, while Facebook and many other platforms also offer advertising services and enjoys near monopoly. The surprising thing is that the providers of these services are making huge profits, yet they are not even ready to pay taxes in India.

Advent of Swadeshi apps with huge support from the people, is fast changing the digital space in the country. Every country and its citizens have the right to choose what to use and what not to use. The call for Swadeshi can truly be seen as a means to increase employment within the country, reduce dependence on foreign countries, and keep the country's wealth within the boundaries of the country. It is not just a slogan, but a life vision that centers self-reliance, self-respect and national interest.

Today, when the Indian economy has become heavily dependent on foreign countries, the consequences of which are being borne by the country's economy and the common man, the call for Swadeshi has once again become important. It is noteworthy that in the era of globalisation, it had been argued that to provide affordable goods to consumers worldwide, it is essential to eliminate barriers to the global value chain.

Components for production can be efficiently manufactured and shipped to different locations in different countries, allowing for higherquality products to be produced at lower costs. A similar argument was made regarding the movement of goods; that consumers can access the cheapest goods, only through free trade. Goods that can efficiently be produced in our country and then be sold in global markets through free trade.

The logic of globalisation has totally collapsed

The logic of the global value chain was shattered when some countries, especially China, began weaponising their monopoly in global value chains. We haven't yet forgotten the US ban on vaccine supplies during COVID-19, when global production of many goods, including automobiles, came to a standstill due to China's deliberate blockade of semiconductor supplies.

Similarly, recently, China began blackmailing other countries, including India, by disrupting the supply of products made from rare earths. For more than seven months, the US President has imposed tariffs on almost all of its trading partners, flouting global agreements. The truth of globalisation has been fully exposed. Consequently, not only India but other countries around the world are now talking about self-reliance.

Swadeshi apps and platforms

As the entire country rapidly embraces Swadeshi, and the general public understands that Swadeshi is not limited to indigenous goods but it also includes services; in this digital world, digital services in the form of apps, platforms and e-products, among other services, have become increasingly important. Zoho Corporation, an Indian software product company, has developed numerous products, including the messaging app Arattai, ZohoMail for emailing and numerous other eproducts developed by several Indian start-ups and companies, which are becoming increasingly popular among our citizens. India and its leadership have now fully realised that if India's industries are to be revived and the Indian economy is to be put on fast growth trajectory, we must minimise our dependence on foreign countries, including China and the United States.

Therefore, the age-old concept of Swadeshi is being promoted by everyone in the Government led by Prime Minister Narendra Modi and this is encouraging people to adopt indigenous products. We need to understand that India is heavily dependent not only on foreign products, but also on digital services, platforms and other e-products. Therefore, when we talk about swadeshi, we should not limit ourselves to indigenous products; it also includes electronic services, both social media and ecommerce platforms and other services related to intellectual property rights (IPR).

Therefore, the scope of swadeshi is expanding. In this context, two new products have gained the most momentum: Arattai (a messaging app developed by India's Zoho Corporation, which is an alternative to WhatsApp) and ZohoMail, an alternative to Gmail. In addition to individuals and businesses, the Indian Government is also rapidly shifting to ZohoMail for its email. Leading Indian apps, platforms, and e-products in the digital sector, such as social media, messaging, e-commerce and other technological solutions, offer numerous advantages especially in the context of Atmanirbhar Bharat and Swadeshi thought process. Indian apps often prioritise regional languages (over 15-20 Indian languages). User data is stored in India, ensuring privacy and compliance with Indian data laws. Indian apps also offer customised monetisation options for Indian customers and small creators. Indigenous social media apps help build a self-reliant digital ecosystem instead of relying on global giants like Meta or Twitter.

Zoho's "Made-in-India" messaging app, Arattai, has several advantages over WhatsApp. First, Arattai, being an Indian app, stores user data on servers in India, and being developed by Zoho (an Indian company), it aligns with the Government's "Atmanirbhar Bharat" goals. While foreign companies are subject to data being captured by companies under foreign jurisdiction, indigenous apps offer data security.

They offer a unique ad-free experience, with the promise that user data will not be used for targeted advertising. Indian platforms have been developed for Indian conditions. For example, Arattai is optimised for low-end devices and poor networks. Furthermore, Arattai includes several features that other apps don't have.

Arattai is gaining local support and endorsement being Indian, and is gaining visibility and endorsements from some public figures and celebrities, which helps drive trust and adoption.

We must not forget that by adopting these apps and platforms, we will not only save significant amounts of foreign exchange, but also benefit from better security features and the guarantee that user data will be stored in their respective regions and not sold for profit.

Senate approves Bill to end shutdown

Washington

The Senate passed legislation on Monday to reopen the Government, bringing the longest shutdown in history closer to an end as a small group of Democrats ratified a deal with Republicans despite searing criticism from within their party.

The 41-day shutdown could last a few more days as members of the House, which has been on recess since mid-September, return to Washington to vote on the legislation. President Donald Trump has signalled support for the bill, saying on Monday that "we're going to be opening up our country very quickly.'

The final Senate vote, 60-40. broke a gruelling stalemate that lasted more than six weeks as Democrats demanded that Republicans negotiate with them to extend health care tax credits that expire January 1.

The Republicans never did, and five moderate Democrats eventually switched their votes as federal food aid was delayed, airport delays worsened and hundreds of thousands of federal workers continued to go unpaid.

House Speaker Mike Johnson urged lawmakers to start returning to Washington "right now" given shutdown-related travel delays, but an official notice issued after the Senate vote said the earliest late January. "It appears our long national nightmare is finally coming to an end," said Johnson, who has kept the House out of session since mid-September, when the House passed a bill to continue Government funding.

Shaheen said Monday that "this was the option on the table" after Republicans had refused to budge.

"We had reached a point where I think a number of us believed that the shutdown had been very effective in raising the concern about health care," she said, and the promise for a future vote "gives us an opportunity to continue to address that going forward."

Dick Durbin, the Number 2 Democrat, Pennsylvania Senater John Fetterman and Nevada Sens. Catherine Cortez Masto and Jacky Rosen also voted yes. All other Democrats, including Senate Democratic leader Chuck Schumer of New York, voted against it. The moderates had expected a larger number of Democrats to vote with them as 10 to 12 Democratic senators had been part of the negotiations. ## G-7 Canada summit amid Trump tensions

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Toronto

Top diplomats from the Group of Seven industrialised democracies are converging on southern Ontario as tensions rise between the US and traditional allies like Canada over defence spending, trade and uncertainty over President Donald Trump's ceasefire plan in Gaza and efforts to end the Russia-Ukraine war.

Canadian Foreign Minister Anita Anand said in an interview with The Associated Press that "the relationship has to continue across a range of issues" despite trade pressures as she prepared to host US Secretary of State Marco Rubio and their counterparts from Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Japan on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Anand also invited the foreign ministers of Australia, Brazil, India, Saudi Arabia, Mexico, South Korea, South Africa and Ukraine.

She said "15 foreign ministers are coming from around the world to the Great White North and funnily enough on the week of our first large snowfall."

"The work that Canada is doing is continuing to lead multilaterally in an era of a greater movement to protectionism and unilateralism," Anand said. "And in an era of economic and geopolitical

Canada's G7 hosting duties this year have been marked by strained relations with its North American neighbour, predominantly over Trump's Canadian imports. But the entire bloc of allies is confronting major turbulence over the Republican president's demands on trade and various proposals to halt worldwide conflicts.

One main point of contention has been defence spending. All G7 members except for Japan are members of NATO, and Trump has demanded that the alliance partners spend 5 per cent of their annual gross domestic product on defense. While a number of countries have agreed, others have not. Among the G7 NATO members, Canada and Italy are furthest from that goal.

There have also been G7

disagreements over the

Israel-Hamas war in Gaza, with Britain, Canada and France announcing they would recognise a Palestinian state even without a resolution to the conflict. With the Russia-Ukraine war, most G7 members have taken a tougher line on Russia than Trump has. The two-day meeting in Niagara-on-the-Lake on Lake Ontario near the US border comes after Trump ended trade talks with Canada because the Ontario provincial Government ran an anti-tariff advertisement in the US that upset him. That followed a spring of acrimony, since abated, over Trump's insistence that Canada should become the 51st US state.

Canadian Prime Minister Mark Carney apologised for the ad and said last week that he's ready to resume trade talks when the imposition of tariffs on Americans are ready.

Only 21.4 million out of a total of 32 million eligible voters updated their information and obtained voter cards ahead of the polling, a decrease from the last parliamentary election in 2021, when about 24 million voters registered.

The election is taking place against the backdrop of major shifts in the region over the past two years including the wars in Gaza and Lebanon after the October 7, 2023, Hamas-led attacks on southern Israel, the Israel-Iran war in June, and the fall of Syrian President Bashar Assad last December. These developments come as US pressure intensifies on the Iraqi Government to curb the influence of Iran-aligned armed factions, some of which have candidates participating in Tuesday's Prime vote. Minister Mohammad Shia al-Sudani, who is running for a second term, arrived at a polling station in Baghdad to cast his vote, along with his mother.

Bangladesh Islamists demand charter referendum

ASSOCIATED PRESS ■ Dhaka

Islamists in Bangladesh rallied on Tuesday to demand the interim Government legalise a national charter proposed after the ouster of the previous regime, saying that there is no possibility of holding a general election without a legally binding roadmap for political reforms.

Thousands of supporters of the largest Islamist party lamaat-e-Islami and seven other political parties who gathered in the capital, Dhaka, also demanded that the next election — expected to be held in early 2026 be held under a proportional representation system.

The key demand is for a referendum on the "July National Charter", which is named after the national uprising that began in July 2024 and led to the fall of former Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina following a 15-year become increasingly autocratic. But the charter is currently non-binding, and the parties say a referendum is needed to make it legally binding and a part of the constitution. Only a Parliament can bring changes to the constitution in Bangladesh, a parliamentary democracy of 170 million people.

The roadmap for political reform was proposed by the interim Government headed by Nobel Peace Prize laureate Muhammad Yunus who took over three days after Hasina's ouster in a mass uprising on Aug 5 last year.

Its provisions would include bringing more checks and balances to the country's political system to avoid authoritarian administrations, including by giving the presidency more authority to balance what had been a powerful prime minister term limits for legislators, and measures to prevent conflicts of interest, money laundering and corruption. Bangladesh

Nationalist Party, headed by former Prime Minister Khaleda Zia, signed the charter on Oct 17 along with 24 other parties. The country has 52 registered political parties. Other than Zia's party, Hasina's Awami League party is another major party. Its activities have been banned by the Yunus-led Government and Hasina is facing trial for the deaths of hundreds of people during last year's uprising. The Jamaat-e-Islami party, which has a dark history involving Bangladesh's independence war, has signed the charter and is forging a bigger political platform to contest in the next election in the absence of the Awami League.

Call for Taiwan's substantive participation in INTERPOL

CHOU YEW-WOEI

Founded in 1923, INTERPOL currently has 196 member states, making it the world's second-largest international organisation after the United Nations. INTERPOL is an essential platform for global law enforcement cooperation. It closely monitors transnational criminal activity including terrorism, cybercrime and organised crime, and conducts exchanges with law enforcement agencies worldwide through its network of National Central Bureaus.

INTERPOL's mandate is to ensure and promote the widest possible mutual assistance between all criminal police authorities. Yet, for more than four decades, Taiwan has been unjustly excluded from the organisation for political reasons.

Taiwan's law enforcement authorities have extensive experience and expertise in crime prevention, public safety and international cooperation. They have achieved significant success in areas such as combating drug smuggling and cyberfraud, earning Taiwan a strong reputation in the international community. However, Taiwan es, participate in its events, and share information with other countries in real time. This hampers Taiwan's ability to counter transnational crime, encourages criminals to expand cross-border activities and undermines the security of Taiwan, the Indo-Pacific and the Globalisation has accelerated the transnational development of crime. Criminals and illicit assets can move swiftly across borders, meaning that drug smuggling, human trafficking, cybercrime, and other illegal activities are not confined to individual countries or regions, but are challenges facing the whole international community. At a time when crime is becoming increasingly globalised and sophisticated, it is imperative for the world's police to work together to build a seamless and inclusive global security network. international cooperation is needed to effectively combat cross — border illegal activity and safeguard global stability.

Taiwan's participation in INTERPOL would enable countries to coordinate their efforts in an unimpeded manner, confront common threats and uphold public safety and order.

Taiwan's strong capabilities in combating crime among 147 countries worldwide. Taiwan's high placement is due to its low crime rate, strong sense of community, effective law enforcement and close civic cooperation with the police. Taiwan's crime rate is just over 1,200 reported incidents per 100,000 people, with homicide at only 2.3 per 100,000 far below the global average.

This internationally recognised public safety record sets an important benchmarkfor law enforcement policymakers around the world, and makes Taiwan an attractive destination for internation-

As a responsible member of the international community, Taiwan is ready toplay a full part in fighting transnational crime, contributing to criminal investigations, and workingwith partner countries to protect the safety and property of people around the world.

Supporting Taiwan to close the gap in the global security network

Taiwan has had success in combating telecom fraud, drug trafficking, and other cross-border crimes. In the fisheries sector, it has long-term experience in identifying vessels involved in human trafficking; forced labor; and illegal, unreported, and unregulated fishing.

But without access to INTERPOL's I-24/7 global police communications According to the Numbeoglobal data- system, Taiwan cannot share urgent enforcement efforts in real time.

Delays in reporting can lead to loss of evidence, failure to apprehend suspects, and unnecessary suffering of victims. Taiwan's absenceundermines the international law enforcement framework and createsa significant gap in global security. This should be recognized as a matter of serious concern.

Taiwan is areliable law enforcement partner for countries worldwide

In recent years, fraud and other financial crimes have become increasingly transnational. Scam syndicates have shifted operations to such countries as Cambodia, Thailand, Myanmar, and Laos. Victims from around the world have been lured to the region through false promises of travel and employment, only to be trapped in scam centers where they are forced to carry out financial crimes.

Some are even sexually exploited, sold to other criminal groups, or trafficked for organ harvesting. A crime trend update published by INTERPOL on June 30 warned of the globalization of human trafficking-fueled scam centers.

The report noted that as of March, people from 66 countries across all five continents had been trafficked into such operations, with the estimated hundreds of thousands.

Taiwan's police have the experience, expertise, and capacity to assist in combating and preventing such crimes. In 2024, Taiwan broke up an online forum for large-scale distribution of child sexual exploitation materials called the Creative Private Room.

The message board, which had over 5,000 members, enabled the easy exchange of child sexual exploitation content, using cryptocurrency payments to evade detection by law enforcement agencies. The platform's mastermind, known online as Lao Ma, was based in China.

The case involved encrypted communications, anonymous networks, cryptocurrency laundering, and cross-border coordination-all key challenges that the international community faces in combating online abuse

The investigation highlighted Taiwan's determination and capacity to tackle cybercrime as well as underscoring its commitment and readiness to cooperate with the international community to protect children combat transnational sexual exploitation.

Global call for Taiwan's substantive participation in INTERPOL

In an article published on September 5, titled "Taiwan's INTERPOL Exclusion

"Dr. John Coyne of the Australian Strategic Policy Institute argued that Taiwan was an important and capable partner in the Indo Pacific region.

He pointed out that its ports, airlines, and banking system were prime targets for transnational criminals. Dr Coyne stated that Taiwan's exclusion led to delays in intelligence sharing and apprehension efforts, limiting the effectiveness of international ioint action.

Faced with a growing epidemic in transnational crime, the international community must strengthen intelligence exchange and deepen partnerships to improve cross-border law enforcement.

We urge all countries to support Taiwan's bid to participate as an observer in the INTERPOL General Assembly and to meaningfully engage in INTERPOL meetings, mechanisms, and activities, so that Taiwan and INTERPOL's member states can engage in unhindered interactions.

Taiwan remains committed to strengthening communications and cooperation with countries worldwideand working with the international community to combat transnational crime.

DGCA asks pilots, air traffic controllers to report GPS spoofing within 10 mins of occurrence

PIONEER NEWS SERVICE New Delhi

Aviation watchdog DGCA has asked airlines, pilots and air traffic controllers to report GPS spoofing incidents within 10 minutes of the occurrences, amid recent such incidents at the Delhi airport.

In recent days, incidents of GPS spoofing and interference has been reported in and around the national capital's Indira Gandhi International Airport (IGIA), the country's busiest airport that handles over 1,500 flight movements daily.

Against this backdrop, the Directorate General of Civil Aviation (DGCA) has decided to put in a place system to ensure real time reporting of GPS interference and spoofing incidents.

Global Positioning System (GPS)/ Global Navigation Satellite System (GNSS) spoofing and jamming refers to attempts to manipulate a user's navigation system by giving false signals.

'Any pilot, ATC controller, or technical unit detecting abnormal GPS behaviour (eg. Position anomalies, navigation errors, loss of GNSS signal integrity, or spoofed location data) shall initiate real time reporting (within 10 minutes of occurrence),' the regulator said in a threepage circular issued on November 10.

The initial report should compulsorily have details such as date and time of occurrence, aircraft type and registration, airline name, flight route and coordinates of occurrence or area affected.

Also, the watchdog has said the entities should mention about the type of interference as to whether it was "jamming / spoofing / signal loss / integrity error" as well as aircraft equipment affected by the interference.

According to the DGCA, airline operators, pilots and ATS units may include further supporting details such as preservation of system logs, screenshots or images of the Flight Management System (FMS) and records of effects on connected systems and platforms.

ATS refers to Air Traffic Services. All aircraft operators, flight crew and Airports Authority of India (AAI), including Air Traffic Control (ATC) Communicátion, Navigation, Surveillance (CNS) units, operating in and around the Delhi airport have been asked to follow the instructions in the circular.

The CNS is the main function of Air Navigation Services (ANS) and Air Traffic Management (ATM). These critical functions are provided by the AAI.

"In view of the recent occurrences of GPS spoofing and GNSS interference reported in and around IGI Airport, New Delhi, it is imperative that all aviation stakeholders ensure prompt detection and real-time reporting (within 10 minutes of occurrence) of such events to maintain flight safety and operational integrity," the circular said. The DGCA is probing the incidents of GPS spoofing at the Delhi airport and is also collecting such occurrences to have a better understanding of the situation. In India, as many as 465 GPS interference and spoofing incidents were reported in the border region, mostly in the Amritsar and Jammu areas, between November 2023 and February 2025. Several airlines had reported that aircraft operating in and around Amritsar have experienced

GPS/GNSS interference. Airlines have been reporting GPS interference with their flights in different parts of the world, especially while flying near or over conflict zones. Both the International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO) and the International Air Transport Association (IATA) have been looking at the issue of GPS spoofing and jamming and looking at ways to deal with them.

DEEPIKA, DHIRAJ LEAD INDIA AT ASIAN ARCHERY

Star archers Deepika Kumari and Dhiraj Bommadevara were back to their best after missing out on the team berths, as India secured at least three individual medals in recurve events of the Asian Archery

Championships here on Tuesday. Top-ranked Indians Deepika and Dhiraj, who had failed to make the team events after finishing last among their compatriots in qualification round on the opening day, bounced back strongly when the individual eliminations got underway.

Deepika stunned Shanghai World Cup gold medallist Lee Gahyun of Korea 7-3 to storm into the women's recurve semifinals, where she will face compatriot Ankita Bhakat. Ankita, meanwhile, produced one of the biggest upsets of the day, toppling top seed and former world champion Jang Minhee of Korea 6-4. Sangeeta too joined the party, defeating Iran's Zare Reyhane 7-1 to enter the last-four, where she will meet Korea's Nam Suhveon, With Deepika, Ankita and Sangeeta all in the semifinals, India stand a strong chance of completing a clean sweep in the women's recurve individual category.

Delhi lose to J&K in Ranji for the first time

Delhi cricket hit a new low on Tuesday after a spirited Jammu and Kashmir thrashed them by seven wickets for their firstever Ranji Trophy victory over the formidable opposition that was powered by opener Qamran Iqbal's superb hundred.

After four games, Delhi coached by Sarandeep Singh, are sixth among eight teams in Group D with seven points and it will take a miracle to qualify for the knockouts with only four points from three home games.

Questionable selections, poor strategies, absence of smart captaincy and a state unit in which teams have suffered due to factionalism and infighting has brought about the team's downfall.

Since 1960, Delhi and Jammu & Kashmir have met 43 times and 37 of those games have ended in outright wins for the seventime champions.

Chasing a target of 179 for victory, J&K needed 124 runs on the final day with opener Iqbal (133 not out off 147 balls) at the crease with night-watchman Vanshaj Sharma (8 off 55 balls).

What looked like a difficult pitch suddenly became placid as Iqbal took it upon himself to use his long levers and big stride to negate any turn off the surface.

The roughs and indents were created on both sides of the track and Delhi's spin-

Towards the end, Igbal was hitting one-handed slog swept sixes and lofted boundaries. Even 40-yearold skipper Paras Dogra, the former doyen of Himachal Pradesh cricket, played his part with a first innings hundred.

In his 22nd first class season, Dogra only second to Mumbai stalwart Wasim Jaffer in terms of runs in Ranji Trophy, scored tons against both Mumbai and Delhi this season.

For Delhi, retaining Sarandeep as the head coach after a disastrous last season due to alleged pressures from a strong DDCA lobby has only ensured that there was no consistency in selection. Skipper Ayush Badoni is scoring some attractive halfcenturies but no team in domestic cricket is in awe of him. Arpit Rana, a top scorer in DPL, has been found wanting against quality seam bowling as Auqib Nabi with his seaming deliveries exposed his poor technique.

Anuj Rawat, a player with less than 30 average across eight seasons keeps on playing. After this defeat, DDCA president Rohan Jaitley is expected to crack the whip. In the last group match to finish on Tuesday, Hyderabad earned three points for taking a first-innings lead after the contest against Rajasthan ended in a draw on the fourth and final day in Hyderabad. Hyderabad, who had put as Rajasthan managed only 269 in their first innings.

Resuming the final day's play at 198/7 with an overall lead of 293 runs, Hyderabad declared at 244/9 to set a improbable target of 340 runs for Rajasthan to win in less than three sessions. The visitors reached 207 for three with opening batter Salman Khan making a fluent 79 (138 balls, 4x4s, 2x6s) in their second innings when the game was called off sometime after the tea break.

Rajasthan earned one point from the game.

Hyderabad were placed at the top of the points table in Group D with better quotient before the fourth round but victories for other teams pushed them to third with a total of 13 points.

Mumbai's win over
Himachal Pradesh by an innings and 120 runs saw them move to the top of the table with 17 points, followed by Jammu and Kashmir at the second with 14 points.

Chhattisgarh, who had handed Pondicherry a 10wicket defeat on the third day, are placed fourth.

Two-tier WTC model unlikely to take off

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA Dubai

The much-debated two-tier World Test Championship (WTC) model is unlikely to take off, and, instead, the International Cricket Council (ICC) might give all 12 full members a chance to play in the next WTC cycle starting from mid 2027.

Currently, nine full members are involved in the WTC matches while Zimbabwe, Afghanistan and Ireland are not part of the elite circle despite having the full member status.

An assessment group led by former New Zealand batter Roger Twose did consider the idea of a twotier system but did not receive enough backing during ICC's quarterly meeting which was held in Dubai recently.

"There was a discussion on the two-tier system but certain members were not convinced about the model. and it felt that a 12-team system should be tried out because it gives more chances for teams to play against each other," a source close to the development informed.

The resistance to the idea mainly came from Pakistan, Sri Lanka, the West Indies could have started in tier 2 under the mooted two-segment system.

"Even representatives of some of the top boards too were sceptical of the idea as what happens if a top team goes through a phase of struggle and gets relegated to the second tier? It will affect playing chances and revenue alike," he added.

The England and Wales Cricket Board chief Richard Thompson had indicated similar doubts in August.

"We wouldn't want, as England, we may go through a fallow period, and that means, what, we fall into Division Two and we don't play Australia and India?," he had told BBC.

The sentiment also reflected in the general dismissal of the talks on India, and Bangladesh who Australia and England financially supporting those teams which are in the

The ICC might also consider reviving the Super League concept in ODIs, which was scrapped after the 2023 World Cup.

It was conceptualised in 2020 to give more context to the ODI format, but the 13-team system did not progress as expected.

Many members who attended the ICC meeting felt that the 50-over format is not near extinction but can survive if provided a proper structure to it.

"The reaction and reach of ICC ODI events tell that there is still a place for 50over cricket. Just that we need to give some context to it, and ensure that top teams and players are involved in it.

Gill, Jaiswal, Sai clock long net session ahead of SA Test

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

Transitioning from shorter formats to the rigours of redball cricket takes time, and India captain Shubman Gill spent close to an hour and a half at the nets, fine-tuning his technique ahead of the opening Test against South Africa, starting here on Friday.

The Proteas arrive high on confidence, having secured a hard-earned 1-1 draw in Pakistan last month in challenging conditions.

Gill, who struck a fifty and an unbeaten century in the two home Tests against the West Indies last month, has been searching for runs in white-ball cricket.

He managed just one score above fifty — a 46 at Carrara Oval - from eight innings across the ODIs and T20Is in Australia.

Now back to leading the Test side, Gill batted with determination at nets and looked keen to regain rhythm after a lean white-ball run.

Before the nets, head coach Gautam Gambhir and assistant coach Sitanshu Kotak were seen having a long chat with him near the High Court end, possibly discussing his approach.

Gill later joined his teammates for slip-fielding drills before padding up alongside Yashasyi laiswal for an intense net session.

Starting with spin, he faced Ravindra Jadeja and

India's Yashasvi Jaiswal with captain Shubman Gill during a training session ahead of the first Test match between India and South Africa at Eden Gardens in Kolkata mostly on the ground with occasional sweeps.

Moving to the pace nets, he faced Nitish Kumar Reddy who bowled in tandem with a few local club bowlers as they tested him with seam movement.

A support staff member then used a sidearm to deliver throwdowns from height, giving Gill extra bounce and pace.

After more than an hour in the side nets, he shifted to the central strip for another 30 minutes of throwdowns under the watchful eve of bowling coach Morne Morkel, who himself rolled his arm over to generate sharp pace

Fresh from scores of 67 and 156 for Rajasthan in the Ranji Trophy, Jaiswal also had a long stint at the central wicket, facing Morkel and against South Africa A. The team management continues to back him for the number 3 slot, though he is yet to make it his own, with only a 61 against England in so far in Tests.

Manchester and 87 versus

West Indies at home to show

His India A teammates — KL Rahul, Jurel, Kuldeep Yadav, Mohammed Siraj — skipped the optional practice after joining the squad only a day earlier after a demanding A series in Bengaluru, which concluded on Sunday.

But there was no such 'break' for Sai who batted with full intensity, facing pacers, spinners, and taking throwdowns at the centre strip. The number 3 position remains a talking point, especially with Dhruv Jurel in prolific form.

There's also speculation that Jurel could feature as a pure batter, with Rishabh keeping duties after recovering from his injury.

Jurel, who averages 47.77 in Tests and notched his maiden ton against the West Indies, has been in red-hot form in first-class cricket, scoring three centuries in his last five games, including twin hundreds in the second match against South Africa A. Among pacers, only Jasprit Bumrah turned up, keeping it light with spot bowling at two stumps for about 15 minutes, targeting the off stump. In a relaxed mood, he also batted briefly and spent time interacting with teammates.

Bumrah had light strapping on his right knee but bowled under the supervision of Gambhir and Morkel.

Overall, only seven players turned up for the optional practice session, as the likes of Pant, Jurel, Rahul, Siraj, Kuldeep, Akash, Devdutt Padikkal and Axar Patel skipped.

After nearly three hours of training, the team's think tank - Gambhir, Kotak, Morkel, and Gill -- gathered at the centre wicket for a long pitch inspection.

Morkel and Gill checked the firmness before summoning curator Sujan Mukherjee for a 15-minute discussion. Judging by their expressions, the management did not appear entirely pleased with the surface. The pitch, which has not been watered for a week now, appeared dry and brown with light grass patches.

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA Lahore

Pakistan's experienced allrounder Shadab Khan could be a late addition to the national squad for the T20 tri-series, also involving Sri Lanka and Zimbabwe, to be played from November 17 in Lahore and Rawalpindi.

Shadab, who has been rehabilitating from a shoulder surgery, appeared in a practice game in Lahore recently and was watched closely by selectors, including Aaqib Javed who is also the head of the National Cricket Academy.

Shadab, who is also tipped to eventually take over as the T20 captain from Salman Ali Agha, played the match after having his final rehabilitation process at the NCA under the supervision of its medical panel.

'Shadab appears to have recovered well from his shoulder injury and could be a late addition for the T20 Tri-

Indian pacer Mohammed Siraj is confident of putting up a strong show against defending World Test Championship (WTC) winners South Africa in the "crucial" Test series beginning here on India, currently third in the WTC points table, drew their away series in England before beating the West Indies at home earlier in the cycle.

South Africa, on the other hand, began the defence of their WTC title with a 1-1 draw in an away Test series against Pakistan.

"This series is crucial for the new WTC cycle, especially since South Africa is the defending champion. While they drew 1-1 with Pakistan, we're confident from our own good form, we created a positive environment, performed well in England, and won against the West Indies."

Hussain advances to pre-quarterfinals; Haohui stuns Advani

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA

Unheralded Indian cueist Hussain Khan scored a thrilling 4-3 win over Australia's Hassan Kerde to enter the men's pre-quarterfinals of the IBSF World Snooker Championships on Tuesday.

The 29-year-old Indian, who came through the first stage qualification, played the important points well to win his match and set up a last-16 meeting with teen sensation Michal Szubarczyk of Poland.

Earlier, India's celebrated three-time champion Pankaj Advani bowed out of the tournament after losing 1-4 to Deng Haohui.

China's Haohui ran up a quick 3-0 lead in the best-ofseven-frame match. It spurred Advani, who replied with a break of 53 in the fourth to pull one back.

However, the Chinese cueist regrouped quickly to take the next frame and march into the pre-quarterfinals.

In the women's draw, four Indians advanced to knockout rounds with Amee Kamani topping Group D with an all-win record to enter the last-eight stage as the second seed.

The top four in the reseeding after the league phase advanced directly to the quarterfinals.

Keerthana Pandian too topped her group, but fin-ished fifth (on frame average) to make the prequarterfinals.

Also moving into the last-16 were promising Natasha Chethan, who finished second in Group E, and Anupama Ramachandran (number 2 in Group F).

good chance it will get even better in Dubai this week in the Northern Irishman's final event of the 2025 season. The number 2-ranked McIlroy will look to be crowned Europe's number 1 player for a fourth straight year when he competes in the European tour's season-ending World Tour

Championship starting on Thursday. If McIlroy holds off Marco Penge and Tyrrell Hatton the only players in range of overhauling him — he will win the Race to Dubai title for the seventh time in his career and move within one of Colin Montgomerie's record haul.

Montgomerie won his season-long points titles when it was called the Order of Merit — each year from 1993-99 and again in 2005.

McIlroy is tied on six with the late Seve Ballesteros, and remains committed to tailoring his schedule so he can play as many events on the European tour as possible while also working the PGA Tour calendar.

"There's a wonderful heritage to this tour. I think with men's professional game at McIlroy said. "I understand that I am one of those people and I want to do my utmost to help in whatever way that I can." McIlroy said he was the happiest he has felt in a long

Yamal, Mbappé, Ronaldo near 2026 World Cup

Spain and Lamine Yamal, France and Kylian Mbappé plus Portugal and Cristiano Ronaldo are close to confirming their places at the 2026 World Cup.

Erling Haaland's 12 goals so far have Norway even nearer to sealing the team's first World Cup qualification since before he was born, and edging Italy toward the playoffs where the fourtime champion was shockingly eliminated in the past two editions.

Germany also risks not advancing directly as a European group winner. The Germans have a possible showdown game on Monday against Slovakia in Leipzig. World Cup qualifying in Europe resumes on Thursday and six days later, 11 more group-winning teams will have joined England at the first 48-team finals tournament that the United States, Canada and Mexico will co-host.

Europe has 16 places at the expanded World Cup – there were 13 in the last 32team World Cup in Qatar in 2022 - and the last four entries will be decided by playoff brackets in March.

Croatia, the Netherlands, Switzerland and Belgium all are well set to confirm their returns to the World Cup. Denmark and Austria head into the final week favored to top their groups, though they could be overtaken in final games against, respectively, Scotland and Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Yamal's returnSpain has a perfect record of four wins, 15 goals scored and none conceded yet still has two tricky games to finish, at Georgia on Saturday and hosting Turkey three days later.
